A Bad Ordinance.

At their last meeting the council granted an ordinance to Joseph B. Ware allowing him to build a telephone exchange and put poles in the streets of Tecumseh. To the person who thinks seriously about the matter it is a wonder how our citizens can see the street after an electric road and one or two more telephone lines have been built here. A telephone or electric light pole should never have been put up on the streets of Tecumseh.

The companies could have purchased right of way in the back yards and gone through the alleys for a small sum and then the streets would have been left free from poles. This ordinance should not have been granted, a stop must come some time and why not now. The Tecumseh and Franklin telephone line have their poles back of the houses and experience no trouble whatever. For instance count the poles on Chicago from the railroad corner west and what is worse there was no necessity of having one of them in front of stores or buildings.

Store Opened

As advertised. The New York store opened in the Mills block yesterday. The stock as displayed is neat in every way and seems complete in every department. In fact a neater appearing stock was never seen in Tecumseh, every article being displayed to the best advantage. A PRETTY WEDDING

MISS MARGARET CLARKSON

Of Tecumseh, was United in Marriage to Winthrop T. Phelps, of Marshall.

Tuesday evening at six o'clock were assembled about sixty guests, relatives and a few friends at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Clarkson, to witness the marriage ceremony of their only daughter, Miss Margaret, to W. T. Phelps, of Marshall. After the wedding march by Mrs. Levi Hayden, Rev. W. F. Jones preformed the wedding ceremony, under a bower of smilax and chrysanthemums. The ring was borne by little Miss Josephine Hayden and the ribbon bearers were the Misses Jessie Potter, of Marshall, Elizabeth Beamish, Harriet Whittier and Camilla Mead, of Tecumseh.

The rooms were beautifully and tastefully decorated with smilax. The bride was gowned in beautiful white Louisine silk trimmed with duches lace and chiffon. After the ceremony, the guests enjoyed a fine wedding supper, and the happy bride and groom left from Britton for Chicago on the night train.

Miss Clarkson is one of Tecumseh's most beautiful and delightful ladies. She spent her girlhood days and received her education in Tecumseh, living here until she went to Marshall two years ago to become a teacher in the public schools there.

Mr. Phelps is cashier of the Commercial Savings Bank at Marshall and is one of that city's first business men. He has secured for himself a most delightful wife and we trust she has an equally fine husband. The couple receives best congratulations of hosts of friends and acquaintances.

Among those from out of town were: Mrs. Phelps and daughter, of Marshall, mother and sister of the groom, Mrs. E. B. Clarkson, of Jackson, Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Clarkson, of Ann Arbor, Eugene Clarkson, of Detroit, Mrs. Sarah Martin, of Canandagua, N. Y., and Miss Jessie Porter, of Marshall.

FEARFUL ACCIDENT

MRS. HARRY ABBOTT

Ran away, throwing Lady, her Baby and the buggy off Newburg Bridge into the River Raisin.

One of the most fearful and terrible accidents, which has happened near Tecumseh for years occurred to Mrs. Harry Abbott and 14 months' old daughter, while driving from Tipton to the home of Mrs. Wm. Fisher, north of Tecumseh. As they were crossing the second bridge east of the mill in Newburg the horse became frightened at a new plank, which was nailed over a hole and began to back and backed against the railing, which at once gave away, letting the buggy off the bridge pulling the horse with it.

Mrs. David Coryell, who lives near the bridge heard the noise and called Louie Sheldon, C. W. McNeil and Scott Remington, who at once went to the river and found that the buggy had capsized and Mrs. Abbott was under it, but the baby was missing. After searching an hour, the little one was found about 80 rods from the bridge, lying by a leg, which was across the river, but still alive.

Mrs. Abbott was but slightly injured. Both mother and child were taken to Robt. Smith's and Dr. Maddox was quickly summoned. Shortly after noon the child died and Mrs. Abbott was taken to her home near Tipton.

The horse was left in the river over an hour and nearly perished from the cold. Owing to the circumstances the accident is an awful affair. Think of this lady starting away from home in the morning with a well strong child and to have the child killed before she reaches her destination by such a runaway. The funeral will be held at their residence near Tipton at one o'clock Saturday afternoon, Rev. Leslie Bower officiating.

MODERN WOODMEN

About Twenty Members Strong Visited

THE CLINTON LODGE

Wednesday Evening and had a Most Delightful Supper and Time.

The Modern Woodmen camps of Tecumseh and Clinton are on very friendly terms and frequent visits are exchanged between the two camps. About twenty of our Woodman accepted a special invitation to visit their Clinton neighbors last Wednesday evening, where they were royally entertained. Mr. Palmer, of that place was duly initiated into the mysteries of Woodcraft.

After initiation they retired to a hall adjoining, where they found tables laden with dainty delicacies. The "royal neighbor" members rendered a fine musical and literary program, which was served, fully satisfying the wants of the inner man. A short time was spent in social intercourse and the boys left for home, feeling that they had spent a very pleasant evening.

The following program was rendered:

Violin solo—Katherine Noone.
Recitation—Nellie Martin.
Vocal solo—Mrs. McCracken.
Recitation—Miss Mingay.
Vocal solo—Margaret Collins.

When Coal Was Prohibited.

It makes the present generation smile to read the accounts which have come down to us concerning the prejudices which were formerly entertained against certain articles which are of everyday consumption.

For instance, it is said that when coal was first used in England the prejudice against it was so strong that the house of commons petitioned the king to prohibit the use of the "noxious" fuel.

A royal proclamation having failed to abate the nuisance, a commission was issued to ascertain who burned coal within the city of London and its neighborhood, to punish them by force for the first offense and by the demolition of their furnaces if they persisted in transgressing. A law was finally passed making it a capital offense to burn coal in the city and only permitting it to be used by forges in the vicinity. It is stated that among the records in the Tower of London a document was found according to which a man was hanged in the time of Edward I. for no other crime than having been caught burning coal. It took three centuries to entirely efface the prejudice.

SHOWERS OF MANNA.

JUST WHY AND HOW SUCH PHENOMENA ARE POSSIBLE.

This Food of the People of Israel In the Wilderness Is an Edible Lichen That Is Still Found In Parts of Asia and Africa.

"It is manna!" exclaimed the people of Israel as they gathered the food which seemed so miraculously to appear at their very feet in answer to their cry for sustenance, but though they ate and were satisfied, we are told they "wist not what it was."

And during the ages that have passed since its first appearance on that memorable dewy morning in the wilderness of sin men have declared again and again that they "wist not what it was" that thus fed the Israelites in their need, though numberless conjectures have been made and discussions held on the matter.

The chief opinion which had sway for a long time was that manna was the sap of the tamarisk, but now authorities, seeing in the light of widening scientific knowledge, declare that manna was without doubt a certain lichen (Lecanora esculenta).

This is borne out by the fact that well authenticated rains of manna, absolutely believed by the inhabitants to be showers from heaven, have been reported at least six times during the past century by reliable travelers in the east, and the descriptions of the deposit given in precise present day language leave no doubt upon the point.

If a piece of manna be examined under the microscope, its peculiar compound structure can be clearly seen. There is a delicate network of interlacing fungal threads glistening in the light, while inclosed in their meshes are a number of round, bright green cells, each a tiny algal plant. Thus fungus and alga live together in most intimate connection.

It may be asked how fresh manna lichens arise, seeing that it is difficult to imagine a frequent coincident meeting of a particular fungus and a particular green plant. But granted the meeting has once taken place, the rapid reproduction is easy to understand.

At certain times in the year a yellowish dust appears in little green cups growing on the surface of the plant, and each of the grains of dust is a minute bundle containing a few of the white filaments and a few of the green cells wrapped up together, so that wherever this dust may fall each grain can become a new manna lichen.

There is, moreover, a second method of reproduction in which the fungus alone takes part and sends out tiny offspring to take their chance in the wide world of finding a suitable host, as their parent has done, but the details are complicated and at present involved in some obscurity.

Thus, then, Lecanora esculenta—manna—is in its very nature one of the most remarkable phenomena in the vegetable world. It is found over great tracts of southwest Asia, near Constantinople, in the Crimea, the deserts of Arabia, in the Sahara and the deserts of Algeria.

It is easy to pass it by unnoticed, for it is grayish yellow in color and grows on gray limestone rocks and fragments of rock in the form of a wrinkled crust which seems to the casual observer part of the very rock itself, and needs care to distinguish it.

Cut through, it is white like corn within, dry and powdery. It is, moreover, extremely light in weight. It is obvious that there is not much nourishment to be obtained from the bare face of the limestone rock, hence all the sustenance of the two plants must be obtained from the atmosphere and the rain by the little green plant, which must thus work doubly hard to be able to pass on sufficient food for its partner's living in addition to providing its own.

By degrees, as it grows older, it becomes loosened or even detached from the rocks, and then, when the sudden whirlwinds and violent storms which affect many of these regions blow, the featherweight pieces of lichen crust are torn up and blown into the air at the mercy of the wind and carried, it may be, for immense distances.

The rains, too, that descend with such sudden vehemence sweep it away into water channels, where it is borne along on the stream and deposited in hollows and left there in heaps when the water subsides.

At times, too, a waterspout will gather it up, carry it along and ultimately deposit it in a place where hitherto it had been practically unknown.—Sunday Magazine.

WIFE HELPED PLAN TO DEFRAUD

So Says N. C. Rathbun, Now a Murder Suspect.

Louisville, Ky., Nov. 14.—New features in the case of Newell C. Rathbun, held here on a charge of desertion from the United States army and suspected of the murder of Charles Goodman, who was found dead in bed Thursday in Jeffersonville hotel, were Rathbun's statement to the police that his wife at Little Rock had known of his plan to defraud the insurance company, though not of the murder feature of it; the decision to have the corpse of the supposed Goodman returned to Jeffersonville for an autopsy and identification; the announcement from Washington that the warden had decided to send Rathbun to Jeffersonville and turn him over to Indiana authorities; and the refusal of local authorities to send Rathbun to Little Rock to testify at the coroner's inquest over the corpse that was shipped there. They say Rathbun will go nowhere except to Jeffersonville, where he is to be tried on the charge of murdering, by poison, Charles Goodman. A telegram was sent to Little Rock asking that the corpse be returned to Jeffersonville.

A telegram has been received from chief of police of Evansville, Ind., stating that Goodman was a resident of Cripple Creek, Col., where he was a brass worker.

BURNED TO DEATH.

Thomas Kelleher of Sault Ste. Marie Perishes.

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., Nov. 13.—Thomas J. Kelleher, a saloonkeeper, in business at the corner of Spruce and Fort streets, was burned to death in a fire which partially destroyed his saloon last night.

Kelleher slept above the saloon in a room which he had fitted up for the purpose, and he went to the room about 6 o'clock to take a sleep. In half an hour the whole upper floor of the building was in flames and an alarm was turned in.

Kelleher's body was found lying across the bed, which was almost entirely consumed. He had lain down across the bed without removing his clothes, and was burned in a terrible manner. An oil lamp in the room may have caused the fire, but this is not certain.

A LONG FELT WANT

It is hard to always be pleasant.

Good-natured people are often irritable.

If you knew the reason you would not be surprised.

Ever have Itching Pilds?

Not sick enough to go to bed or not well enough to be content.

Nothing will annoy you so.

The constant itching sensation.

Hard to bear, harder to get relief.

Keeps you awake nights.

Spoils your temper, nearly drives you crazy.

Isn't relief and cure a long felt want?

It is to be had for everyone in Doan's Ointment.

Here is proof of it at the testimony of an Ann Arbor citizen:

Mr. C. C. Church, of 520 South 7th street, Ann Arbor, now retired from the active duties of life, says: "I have no hesitation in recommending Doan's Ointment. To anyone requiring a healing and soothing preparation it will prove invaluable. I suffered for years from itching hemmorhoids and though I tried everything I could hear of, used remedies prescribed by scores of friends I was unable to obtain permanent relief until my attention was called to Doan's Ointment. I was somewhat surprised after the second application to notice what a different effect it had from anything I had hitherto used. Encouraged I used it strictly according to directions and in a surprisingly short length of time when you take into account the number of years I was afflicted, the irritation ceased and the inflammation was allayed. When Dean's Ointment cured me it will cure others."

Doan's Ointment for sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Mailed by Foster-MilburnCo., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the U. S.. Remember the name Doan and take no substitute.

"Yes, dearest."

"What did you get, mamma?"

"Cigars, lovey."

"The cheap ones that Aunt Millie told you about?"

Silence from mamma, but a heightened flush on her face that was not entirely the reflection from "dearest lovey's" red velvet hat.

"Mamma, that man over there has on a dreadfully dirty necktie. You told papa the other day that no gentleman would wear a soiled necktie."

"Mildred, stop talking."

Mildred was silent for a little while.

KID-NE-OIDS CURED HIS SUFFERING.

Have been afflicted with kidney and bladder diseases for the past three years, being chronic from the start, was in much pain and forced to stop work. For the past four months I have faithfully tried several of the so-called "guarantee cures" but without any benefit. I finally concluded to try Kid-Ne-Oids and began to feel better immediately after using them. I continued using them and am now permanently cured. I make this statement of my own volition and will make oath to it if necessary.—Geo. S. Estell, Kansas City, Mo.

What a Bullet Did.

Menominee, Mich., Nov. 13.—One of the strangest accidents of the hunting season occurred at Stephenson recently. George Richardson shot a deer, the bullet passing through its body. It then hit a tree and glanced off, hitting Wm. Everhart. It first passed through the wrist, hit his gun stock, glanced up and entered his mouth, lodging in his neck. The wound is quite serious. A Savage rifle was used.

Latham Not Convicted.

New York, Nov. 13.—E. B. Latham of Detroit, who was charged with giving Le Agnew of Chicago a check for $5,000 upon which the certification was forged, was arraigned before Magistrate Olmsted and discharged for lack of evidence. The check was not produced in court and the magistrate held that as the check had never been presented for payment and as no title had changed hands, no crime had been committed.

About Ozone.

Many people talk about ozone without so much as knowing what ozone is. There is a prevalent idea that it is something you get at the sea and that it is good for the lungs. What that something is, however, few people have sufficient curiosity to inquire. Ozone is what chemists call an allotropic form of oxygen—that is to say, it is oxygen in a highly active and concentrated condition. In ordinary pure air ozone exists, but only in what chemists call "traces." Larger amounts are found in ocean and mountain air. It instantly disappears when brought in contact with decaying matter, dissipating itself, as it were, in the act of oxidizing that matter.

Ozone is known to occur more plentifully during thunderstorms, and we have, of course, the analogy of its being artificially produced from oxygen by electrical discharges in the laboratory. On the body ozone is believed to act as a stimulant; hence the popular notion of its beneficial effects as experienced by the sea, but in any greater amount than mere traces it is a violent irritant. One authority goes the length of asserting that it is doubtful whether it is beneficial to animal life at all.

Murdered, Not Burned.

Wausau, Wis., Nov. 14.—Joseph and James Noiseu, uncles of Thomas Leclaire, who was burned to death in the theater fire at Hurley, have returned from that place and assert that their nephew was murdered and the building fired to conceal the crime. They claim they discovered that on the evening of the fire Thomas Leclaire had a fight over a variety actress, to whom he had been paying attention. Leclaire, they say, was on the same floor as those who were saved, but no one was found who had seen him during the fire. The story will be investigated.

THE LOOM OF DREAMS.

I broider my life into the frame;
I broider with dreams my tapestry;
Here in a little lonely room
I am master of earth and sea,
And the planets come to me.

I broider my life into the frame;
I broider my love thread upon thread.
The world goes by with its glory and shame;
Crowns are bartered, and blood is shed;
I sit and broider by dreams instead.

And the only world is the world of my dreams,
And my weaving the only happiness,
For what is the world but what it seems,
And who knows but that God, beyond our guess,
Sits weaving words out of loneliness?

"None But The Brave;"

Or, The Way a Coward Lover Won His Sweetheart.

By PRINCE T. WOODS.

Copyright, 1901, by Prince T. Woods.

"Don't say that, Mary! You know I love you, and"—

"Now, Tom Dalton, stop right where you are. I've told you often enough that I like you. You have been my friend and playmate ever since I was a little girl, and I shall always like you as a friend. No, sir; I won't listen to any lovemaking. I won't marry you, sir, and that's the end on't. I will marry no one but a brave man, and I don't love anybody, and"—

"But, Mary, surely I"—

"There you go again, sir. If you ever mention love to me again, I will never speak to you, as sure as my name is Mary Hart."

"Oh, if you put it that way I'll really have to retire, for I couldn't survive the punishment. How do you know I'm not the brave man?"

"And I've known you all these years, and—but I won't have it brought up again, and there's an end on't, sir."

"Well, well! 'If a woman will, she will, and if she won't she won't, and there's the end on't,'" quoted Tom gayly. "Every dog has his day, Mary. What do you say to a sail down the bay? Let's have that mother of yours and take a run down to Elm island for dinner at Cobb's farm and a bath at the short beach. It's a fine morning for a sail, and I'll be bound I'll learn to swim this time."

"Tom Dalton, if there ever was—well, I know there wasn't. And I really began to think you were serious, sir. But mother never would venture out in that crazy knockabout of yours. Wouldn't it be jolly? I'd love to go."

"It is all right about the knockabout. She is high and dry for a new coat of copper paint. Captain Doyle has his new schooner Willie and told me this morning he should run down to Elm come flood tide. What do you say, Mary? And—you know I was in earnest and"—

"Say, I'm off to mamma at once." And before he could declare what he was in earnest about she was running swiftly up the pier, shouting back to him, "You naughty boy, I'll bet you a box of chocolates I am first at the house, sir."

Mary Hart was the only daughter of the widow of Colonel Hart of the Indian service.

The colonel had been both soldier and business man, and when he had been killed in a jungle fight, soon after Mary's birth, he had left his widow a comfortable income.

She had come to America and settled in one of the quiet New England seashore villages in a cozy cottage adjoining the estate of Mrs. Dalton, who was an old school friend. The young people had grown up together and had been friends since childhood.

Tom Dalton, a happy go lucky young man, had inherited an independent income from his father and now, having passed his finals at the law school, was about to practice his profession in Boston. He loved Mary Hart with all his heart, but in spite of himself he could not be serious about his lovemaking, though bound to win her.

And the little minx herself threw difficulties enough in the way by bringing him sharply to account whenever he attempted to broach the subject. She didn't propose to love or be loved, and if she ever could be so foolish it must be a brave man.

"None but the brave deserve the fair, and you aren't brave. You know you are not, sir."

Flood tide found them skimming down the bay on the natty little schooner Willie in a spanking breeze, jumping at the sea like a mettlesome horse, while Captain Doyle stood at the wheel extolling her virtues to Mrs. Hart. The young people were camped comfortably on the deck at the windward side of the mainmast.

"Great, isn't it?" said Tom. "Now what would you say to a lobster chowder for dinner?"

"Tom, you villain! You have been plotting this spree with Cobb. You know I dote on lobster chowder."

"Down there last week. Told 'em we'd be down. Tried to get mother to come. but she wouldn't step her foot in anything smaller than a liner."

"And you never told? I can hardly believe it. I never know when to believe you, sir."

"Fact! Sure enough this time, isn't it, Captain Doyle?"

"Fact, sure," said the skipper. "Me an Mr. Dalton had a bit of a run down to Elm last Tuesday. Tight bit of weather coming home, too."

"Thomas Dalton, do you mean that you were down here in last Tuesday's gale and never told? And you let us think you had been detained in Boston on business"

"Got it straight from Doyle," quoth Tom.

The Cobbs were on the beach to welcome them. Master Harry had hauled his pots that morning and there would be lobster chowder for dinner at 2 o'clock. Would they try a dip at the short beach by the runway between Elm and Elm, Jr.? They would—that is, the young people would, and Mrs. Hart would watch the sport from the beach.

Once in the water, Mary's spirits seemed bubbling over and she was soon daring Dalton to try a race to a dory moored a short distance from the beach. He seemed reluctant at first, and was sure it was too near the current of the runway, but to take a dare from Mary and have her taunt him with a lack of courage was too much for a young man of his temperament.

She was wading toward the boat, and when but a few strokes from it, called back laughingly: "Will you swim for it, Tom? If you reach it first, I'll be your prize, sir."

She had nearly reached the dory and, confident of winning the race, put her hand up to catch the gunwale, missed it and suddenly discovered she was out of depth and in the runway current.

"Tom!" she cried, and then all Tom saw was a pair of frightened upturned eyes and a terror stricken face as she swept under the surface.

A fine predicament for a lover who was not a brave man and who had barely learned to swim! Drawing a deep breath, blind to all danger and with no thought but to save her or die with her, Tom struck out into the current and under the surface.

His heart thumped wildly as he felt a mass of that sun gold hair come into his grasp, and in a moment more they rose to the surface. Through his salt dimmed eyes Tom saw a bit of rope and grasped it. They had come up under the stern of the dory, which had swung into the current with them, and he was now firmly gripping a bit of painter which hung over the stern.

In a few minutes more he had lifted her over the side, clambered in after and was chafing her hands briskly Mrs. Hart's cries from the beach had brought the Cobbs to the scene, and Master Harry was running a dory down the beach to the rescue.

It had all happened in a very few minutes. Mary opened her eyes, smiled and said, "You needn't rub all the skin off my hands, sir."

"Thank God! She is all right," said Tom fervently.

"Tom, dear, you reached the dory first. Kiss me, sir! You won!"

And then Master Harry's boat grated alongside.

THE RIGHT THING TO PUT ON.

(Benson's Plaster is Pain's Master.)

From the natural impulse to "put something on" a painful spot all applications for the relief of pain have arisen.

The most successful have ever been poultices or plasters, and the best of these is Benson's Porous Plaster.

No other has anything like the same power as a curative agent; it is highly and scientifically medicated, and its standard is advanced year by year.

Use Benson's Plaster for coughs, colds, chest diseases, rheumatism, grip, neuralgia, kidney trouble, lame back, and other ailments that make Winter a season of suffering and danger. It relieves and cures quicker than any other remedy.

Do not accept Capsicum, Strengthening or Belladonna plasters in place of Benson's, as they possess none of its curative power. Insist on having the genuine.

The people of every civilized land have testified for years to the superlative merit of Benson's Plasters; and 5,000 physicians and druggists of this country have declared them worthy of public confidence.

A COLUMBUS STATUE.

The Story of a Brass Founder's Transformation of Gambrinus.

A story is told of a brass founder who was one day visited by a friend acting as agent for one of the cities of Central America. The agent asked what it would cost to cast a statue of Christopher Columbus for the public square of the city. The amount was far in excess of the sum which the man had at his disposal. He was about leaving in despair of being able to secure the statue when the brass founder said:

"Come back in the junk yard and let us see what can be found there."

He went back, and the brass founder showed him a colossal statue of Gambrinus, recently removed from the front of a large brewing establishment. Under his feet rested a beer keg, in his hand was a large and overflowing schooner, his beard was long and shaggy, and about his brows was wreathed a garland of barley and hops.

"Why, this will never do," said the commission merchant. "I want a statue of Columbus."

"Wait until I have touched this one up. Come back in about a week and see what you think of it. If it suits you, you can have it for the amount you have at your disposal."

As soon as the visitor had gone the brass founder set two men at work on the figure of Gambrinus. They removed the beer keg from under his right foot and placed there an anchor and a coil of rope, from his hand they removed the goblet and substituted a globe, with the continents traced on it; from his brow they took the wreath of barley and hops and substituted a wreath of laurel and then proceeded to trim up his whiskers. The finishing touch consisted in putting at the base of the statue "Cristoforo Colombo."

When the commission merchant came, he was delighted with the figure and, purchasing it, shipped it to the Central American city, where it adorns the public square and is looked upon with veneration by the citizens of that town. —New York Times.

Carried Further.

Not long ago a lady was giving a lecture. Her subject was the human figure and the requirements in the way of proportion for beauty. She herself was of generous—one may say unwieldy—size, and her manner was supercilious and lofty. She was trying to demonstrate the relative sizes of the limbs as they really ought to be.

"For example," said she, "twice round my thumb"—she held it up—"once round my wrist; twice round my wrist, once round my neck; twice round my neck, once round my waist."

Here she paused, and a shrill voice from the audience exclaimed:

The lecturer hastily passed on to another branch of the subject.—London Answers.

Two Good Arguments.

"Oh. but they did," answered the second theological disputant.

"How do you know they did? Were you there?"

"How do you know they didn't? Were you there?"—Baltimore American.

Roosevelt a Vice-President.

New York, Nov. 14.—President Roosevelt has just been elected first vice-president of the Long Island Bible society. At a meeting of the executive committee of the society, it was said that the address by Mr. Roosevelt at the meeting of the society last June at Oyster Bay had been printed in a leaflet and had had a very large circulation. It has been translated into several languages and has been circulated in Mexico and the Argentine Republic. It was because of his services to the society in making the address that Mr. Roosevelt was given the office.

Short of Breath.

Symptoms of heart trouble include short breath, choking, smothering, palpitation, pain in the side, faintness, irregular pulse, sinking spells, and dropsy of feet and ankles. A weak heart means poor circulation, imperfect digestion, loss of appetite, thin, pale blood, exhausted nerve-force and failing strength. Do not neglect your heart. It doesn't pay.

"Shortness of breath and smothering sensations in my chest, accompanied by severe pains in left side and shoulder, and inability to sleep on left side, warned me of the presence of heart trouble. Three bottles of Dr. Miles' Heart Cure entirely relieved me." H. D. HOLMAN, Irasburgh, Vt.

Women And Jewels.

Jewels, candy, flowers, man—that is the order of woman's preferences. Jewels form a magnet of mighty power to the average woman. Even that greatest of all jewels, health, is often ruined in the strenuous efforts to make or save the money to purchase them. If a woman will risk her health to get a coveted gem then let her fortify herself against the insiduous consequences of coughs, colds and bronchial affections by the regular use of Dr. Boschee's German Syrup. It will promptly arrest consumption in its early stages and heal the affected lungs and bronchial tubes and drive the dread disease from the system. It is not a cure all, but it is a certain cure for coughs, colds and all bronchial troubles. You can get Dr. G. G. Greon's reliable remedies at J. J. Orr's. Get Green's Special Almanac.

IS LIKE A DELICATE MUSICAL INSTRUMENT

In good condition she is sweet and lovable, and sings life's song on a joyful harmonious string. Out of order or unstrung, there is discordance and unhappiness. Just as there is one key note to all music so there is one key note to health. A woman might as well try to fly without wings as to feel well and look well while the organs that make her a woman are weak or diseased. She must be healthy inside or she can't be healthy outside. There are thousands of women suffering silently all over the country. Mistaken modesty urges their silence. While there is nothing more admirable than a modest woman, health is of the first importance. Every other consideration should give way before it. Bradfield's Female Regulator is a medicine for women's ills. It is the safest and quickest way to cure leucorrhea, falling of the womb, nervousness, headache, backache and general weakness. You will be astonished at the result, especially if you have been experimenting with other so-called remedies. We are not asking you to try an uncertainty. MANY VISIT MINE DISASTER.

Fire In Baby Mine Extinguished—Some Still in the Mine.

Pocahontas, Va., Nov. 18.—Excursion trains carried more than 2,000 people from the coal fields of Pocahontas, Flat Top and Elkhorn to the scene of the Baby mine disaster Sunday, and all day long the grounds about the entrance to the mine shaft were a mass of humanity. The fire in the mine has been extinguished and the three lines of hose were withdrawn soon after noon yesterday. In some of the lower places in the mine water stands two feet deep. No bodies have been recovered since Saturday, but the work will continue as long as there is hope of recovering any of the unfortunates. Many of the miners, familiar with those employed there, still assert that at least eight bodies are yet within the mine. The fallen slate, with various intervals throughout the long shaft, is being removed, but the work is necessarily slow. The three bodies taken out Saturday were badly burned. They were supposed to be Hungarians and were interred yesterday afternoon.

Insurgents Keep Pecking.

Manila, Nov. 18.—Company "E" of the Ninth infantry, Capt. F. H. Shoeffel, was attacked by 50 bolomen and several insurgents armed with rifles at a point six miles from Taraugnan in the island of Samar. The men of the Ninth had a corporal and a scout killed and one private wounded. Sixteen of the bolomen were killed, while the riflemen escaped.

Ten Hotchkill rapid fire guns will be sent to the southern islands for operations in the mountains. Capt. Herman Hall of the Twenty-first infantry, has been scouting for several days in Batangas province. He had four separate engagements with the insurgents there. Judging from the firing on these occasions, Captain Hall estimates the force of each band of the rebels at from 30 to 50. They made no attempt to charge Captain Hall's party. Captain Hall's scout resulted in the capture of one insurgent officer and 50,000 pounds of rice.

Owing to the fact that the United States transports Sheridan, Waldron and Hancock all met with accidents in the inland seas of Japan, and the returning party of visiting congressmen is consequently now delayed in the latter country, the transport Thomas, which arrived at Manila Nov. 12, will be immediately dispatched to Japan. General Chaffee opposes United States transports in future passing through the inland seas.

No Answer Yet.

Sofia, Nov. 18.—The brigands who abducted Miss Ellen M. Stone, American missionary, and Mme. Tsilka, her companion, have not yet replied to the latest proposals of Mr. Dickinson, diplomatic agent of the United States in Sofia. This is believed to be due to the fact that the band has many leaders and that the latter are unable to agree among themselves.

Logging Suspension Report Untrue.

Washburn, Wis., Nov. 18.—State Senator O'Neill yesterday emphatically denied the published report emanating from Ashland, that he had ordered all logging operations suspended on the Bad River Indian reservation because of the prevalence of smallpox. He said there is not the slightest foundation for the story.

In Memory of Li Hung.

Pekin, Nov. 18.—The empress dowager has issued another edict, eulogizing the late Li Hung Chang and ordering the erection of a memorial arch near his birthplace. The edict also directs that the rank of marquis, conferred upon the eldest son of the late Chinese statesman in his own right, shall descend through 23 generations.

$7,000,000 in Rolling Stock.

Baltimore, Nov. 18.—The B. & O. railroad will place orders for the following equipment for delivery in 1902: Fifty locomotives, 38 passenger equipment cars and 6,000 freight equipment cars. The cost will approximate seven million dollars.

Smallpox in Copper Country.

Calumet, Mich., Nov. 18.—The board of health has ordered a general vaccination of the pupils at the Swedetown, Newtown and Hecla schools. It seems that there have been symptoms of smallpox that have not been reported, but it will not be possible for this to be done again, as strict regulations will be enforced. The investigation at Swedetown resulted in the discovery of six more cases there, making nine in all. The Swedetown school will be closed.

Soo Traffic Increases.

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., Nov. 18.—In 1881 the movement of freight of all kinds to and from Lake Superior through the Sault was, in round numbers, 1,500,000 tons. In 1891 it was 8,800,000 tons; this year it will be close to 30,000,000 tons, if it does not exceed that big figure. An increase of 2,000,000 to 5,000,000 tons of freight in a single year is not uncommon in this great waterway.

Live Deer Bagged.

Calumet, Mich., Nov. 18.—A party of Laurium hunters who returned claim to have bagged the best game of the season, a live deer. It is now on exhibition in Laurium. So far this season there have been 650 licenses issued in Houghton county. Hunters who have visited the woods along the line of the Copper Range railroad report that deer are plentiful in that locality.

Detroit Man Drowned.

Detroit, Mich., Nov. 18.—Fred Chase, a deckhand, fell from the hurricane deck of the steamer W. H. Stevens as the vessel lay at the foot of Brush street, about 9:15 Saturday evening, and before any assistance could be rendered was swept away by the current and drowned.

Hunting Without License.

Iron Mountain, Mich., Nov. 18.—J. Harris of Chicago, D. A. Powers of Milwaukee and an unknown man were arrested by the game warden charged with hunting without a license and trying to ship deer out of the state. The unknown, who escaped, is from Ohio.

Astounding Discovery

From Coopersville, Mich., comes word of a wonderful discovery of a pleasant tasting liquid that when used before retiring by any one troubled with a bad cough always insures a good night's rest. "It will soon cure the cough too," writes Mrs. S. Himelburger, "for three generations of our family have used Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption and never found its equal for Coughs and Colds." It's an unrivaled life saver when used for desperate lung diseases. Guaranteed bottles 50c and $1.00 at C A. Wright's. Trial bottles free.

THE NAVY'S NEEDS

Are Many, According to Secretary Long's Annual Report.

ENCOURAGES NAVAL RESERVES

Says Three Thousand Men Can Be Used—We Are Outranked By England, France, Germany, Russia, Japan and Italy.

Washington, Nov. 16.—The keynote of the annual report of Secretary Long for 1901 is "increase"—an increase in both the number of ships and in the number of officers and sailors for the navy. "The navy today," he says, "is a far greater factor in our relations with the world than it was before the recent national expansion which now includes Porto Rico, the Hawaiian islands, the vast area of land and sea in the Philippines and our obligations to Cuba."

Some Boats Needed.

The secretary's recommendation for new construction, based on the report of the general board, headed by Admiral Dewey, and that of the board of construction is as follows:

Three first-class battleships.

Two first-class armored cruisers.

Three gunboats, each of about 1,000 tons trial displacement.

One collier of about 15,000 tons trial displacement.

More Men Needed.

The secretary places emphasis on the necessity for more line officers and more enlisted men. He recommends that the number of lieutenants be increased from 300 to 350, and that the limit of the number of junior lieutenants and ensigns be placed at 600. As to the enlisted men, he recommends that that force be increased by 3,000 men. Tables are submitted showing that in the number of commissioner officers of the executive branch, and in the total strength of all ranks and ratings, the United States navy is the rear of that of England, France, Germany, Russia, Japan and Italy.

National Naval Reserve.

Another pressing need set out in the secretary's report is that for a national naval reserve. The lesson taught by the Spanish-American war, he says, was that steps should be taken at once to meet this "one certain and positive requirement which will face the nation on an outbreak of war."

Kitchener Sends In Report.

London, Nov. 16.—A dispatch from Lord Kitchener, dater from Pretoria, says that a strong patrol of yeomanry, while reconnoitering Nov. 13 at Brakspruit, near Zeerust (in the Transvaal colony, about 140 miles west of Pretoria), was surrounded by 300 Boers and lost six men killed and 16 wounded. Some of the troopers were captured but were subsequently released.

The rear guard of Col. Byngs's column was attacked near Heilbron, Orange River colony, Nov. 14 by 400 Boers said to be under the command of Gen. De Wet. After two hours' fighting the Boers retired, leaving eight dead on the field. Of Col. Byngs's column Lieut. Hughes and one man were killed, while three officers and nine men were wounded.

Two of Lord Kitchener's monthly reviews, dated Aug. 8 and Sept. 8, were published in the Gazette last evening. An astonishing number of horses were captured, those in August alone numbering 13,570. Though admitting the disappointing results of some operations, Lord Kitchener comments on them as follows: "So long as this rate of progress can be maintained, there can be little doubt of its ultimate effect, even on an enemy to whom no other form of agreement seems to appeal."

Monument for Davis.

Wilmington, N. C., Nov. 16.—The interesting feature of the eighth annual session of the United Daughters of the Confederacy yesterday was the report of the Jefferson Davis Monument association. It showed that approximately $13,000 was collected during the past year. The monument will cost less than $50,000 and will be in the form of an arch, spanning Twelfth and Broad streets, Richmond, Va. June 3, 1905, was settled upon as the date for the unveiling. Of the amount needed for the arch, $38,000 is already in bank. In the afternoon the daughters were guests of the Carolina Yacht club on Wrightsville beach.

Trail of Yukon Incomplete.

Seattle, Wash., Nov. 16.—Correspondence from Valdes, Alaska, says: Work on the all-American trail from this place to the Yukon has ceased for the winter and there is some fear here that this work is likely to be suspended or abandoned if congress shall not make an appropriation to complete it. In the work already projected and partly completed under the supervision of Major W. R. Ambercrombie about $193,000 has been expended.

Dalton's Parole Withdrawn.

Topeka, Kan., Nov. 16.—The application to the governor for the parole of Emmet Dalton, the last of the Dalton gang of bank robbers, who is serving a life term for murder committed during the Coffeyville raid in 1892, was withdrawn yesterday, the popular protest against the parole being so overwhelming that Dalton's friends considered it best not to wait for an adverse decision.

During the greater part of Sunday Paris and its suburbs were shrouded in a dense fog, which seriously interfered with railway transportation and vehicle traffic and caused a number of minor accidents.

Bishop K. H. G. Von Scheele, personal representative of the king of Sweden, who is touring this country, arrived in Rock Island Sunday morning with Lady von Scheele for a week's visit to Augustana college.

Rumors that a special Chinese mission, headed by an imperial prince, will arrive in St. Petersburg about March 1, appear to be founded. Closer commercial relations are stated to be the principal object.

New Michigan Corporations.

Lansing, Mich., Nov. 18.—The following corporations filed articles of association with the secretary of state during the past week: Morrison Mercantile Co., Iron River, $18,000; Challenge Churn Manufacturing Co., Paw Paw, $10,000; American Can Co., Detroit and Jersey City, $88,000,000; Jackson Lumber & Coal Co., $35,000; Bennington Creamery Co., Bennington, $5,000; Wurzburg Dry Goods Co., Grand Rapids, $60,000; Equitable Construction Co., Grand Rapids and Camden, $400,000; Spring Brook Trout Co., Kalamazoo, $20,000; Detroit Clinical Laboratory, Detroit, $[illegible],000; Grand River Toll Bridge Co., Grand Rapids $25,000; Baltimore Bay Resort Co., New Baltimore, $20,000.

Non-capitalized corporations: The Houghton club, Houghton; Finnish Cooperative Meat Market, Calumet; National League of Veterans and Sons, Saginaw; St. Thomas church, Detroit.

The following corporations filed notice of increase of capital stock: Kalamazoo Pure Food Co., Kalamazoo, from $18,000 to $22,000; Aikman Bakery Co., Port Huron, from $15,000 to $30,000.

Heir to a Million.

Calumet, Mich., Nov. 18.—By the death of an uncle in Germany, William Frank Reinlinger is left sole heir to an estate valued at about $1,000,000. Reinlinger was last heard of at Morgan, Mich., but he cannot be traced from there on. Advertisements have been inserted in nearly all of the upper peninsula papers asking for information as to his whereabouts.

RIOT IN MINING COUNTRY.

Some Eight-Five Miners Attack Kentucky Town.

Madisonville, Ky., Nov. 18.—Mining troubles in this district brought more bloodshed Sunday morning. James H. Smith, a negro striker, is fatally wounded, while John West, Aut Dawson and Nat Husch, guards, are all wounded, none of them dangerously.

The trouble occurred at the mines of the Providence Coal Co., 17 miles from here. The attacking party, some 75 or 80 strong, first fired on the engine house and in a few minutes the company's stables were surrounded. By this time the guards were becoming active and the attackers formed in a semi-circle over the brow of the hill. From this point they poured a well-directed fire upon the houses occupied by non-union employes and their families. Men, aroused by the crash of bullets, rushed to small timber piles arranged for use in such an emergency, and from behind these returned the fire. The attacking party, sending volley after volley into this quarter, kept up a steady fire on the tipple, engine room, stable and other buildings of the company while the guards were doing effective work. The battle raged for almost an hour and a half, when the assailants withdrew, with the above results. How many wounded they took with them is not known, but the leader was seen to fall and it is believed some of the party who went to the rescue were hit.

Following the battle at the Providence mine there were riots at other Kentucky mines. An attack was made on the nine guards at the Monarch mines, three miles from Barlington, last night, but it was repulsed. Two employes of the St. Bernard Commercial Co. at Morton's gap were fired upon by a man who sprang from behind a tree. There was much trouble at other places, but neither injury nor loss of life followed. Two companies of state troops have been ordered out. The Madisonville company is doing patrol duty in the outskirts of the town and the Hopkinsville company of the Kentucky state guard, under command of Capt. H. Thomas and Second Lieut. Robert D. Bellamy, reached here last night.

New York's Horse Show.

New York, Nov. 18.—The annual luncheon of the National Horse Show association yesterday practically marked the beginning of the seventeenth annual horse show. The day's functions was an exceptionally successful one and banner week for the show. The luncheon was given in the dining hall of the southwest corner of Madison Square Garden. At its conclusion the guests adjourned to the garden, where a parade of many of the horses entered in the show was given. The parade was led by Mrs. J. H. Johnsone's "Emerald," a tiny mite of a Shetland pony less than 30 inches high. The stables were inspected and the visitors left assured that show of 1901 could not fail of success. The horse show proper began this morning with the judging of 25 horses suitable to become hunters.

Rural Delivery in Civil Service.

Washington, Nov. 18.—Supt. A. W. Machen, of the free delivery system of the postoffice department, was in conference with the members of the service commission relative to the proposition to transfer the rural free delivery branch of the classified service. There are now between 6,000 and 7,000 persons employed in this work, and it is quite certain that the extension will soon be made. Some difficulty has been experienced in determining what examination the rural carriers should be subjected to, and it is understood that an arrangement practically has been reached whereby a very simple examination will be arranged for them.

Homestead, Pa., Nov. 18.—One man dead and two seriously burned is the result of a party of workmen being buried under a mass of molten slag at the Howard axle works yesterday.

The injured: Andrew Hulsi, aged 33 years, Homestead, compound fracture of the right leg, body badly burned and bruised; Go Siski aged 50 years, Homestead, a contused foot and bad scalp wounds, also severe burns all over the body.

WANTED HER BABE

CHILD IS A STATE CHARGE

A Very Exciting Scene in a St. Joseph Court Room When Mother Grasped Her Child—The Decision Held Over Until Monday.

St. Joseph, Mich., Nov. 16.—The habeas corpus proceedings brought by William Pruyne and wife of this city against the Michigan Children's Home society to secure the release of their two daughters, Stella and Alice, aged 6 years and 2 years, respectively, developed a sensational scene yesterday morning in the circuit court room.

Unnoticed, Mrs. Pruyne passed through the gate down to the seat where her daughter Stella was sitting at the side of the children's home nurse, and grasped the little one by the hand. The nurse gave alarm and Mrs. Pruyne snatched the little child to her breast. The mother forced her way toward the door in an attempt to escape from the room with the child. Sheriff Collins got to the door just in time to prevent the mother attaining the main hall. The sheriff then took the little girl and returned her to the nurse.

The child is now carefully guarded. The mother made another attempt today, but her plans were prevented. The hearing was concluded at 4 p. m., and Judge Coolidge announced that he would give his opinion Monday.

Killed His Mother-in-Law.

Detroit, Mich., Nov. 16.—Joseph Przybysz, a saloonkeeper at 771 St. Aubin avenue, shot and killed his wife's mother at 2:30 o'clock yesterday morning at the instance of his wife, who thought her mother was a burglar. Phzybysz, who is only 22 years of age, is now in jail at the Chene street station, his wife's mother lies at Coroner Forth's morgue on Gratiot avenue, and his wife, a bride of a year, is at home alone, except for kind neighbors, in a condition bordering upon hysteria, almost frantic with grief at being the innocent cause of her mother's death and her husband's imprisonment.

Big Fire at West Branch.

West Branch, Mich., Nov. 16.—The most disastrous fire which this city has ever known took place yesterday morning. The West Branch hotel, Close's photograph gallery and dwelling, the G. A. R. hall, Norton house, Commercial hotel, J. Depel's residence, a grocery store and two livery stables were consumed, entailing a loss of about $20,000, with $7,000 insurance. The new fire alarm worked all right, but the lack of any adequate apparatus prevented effectual work in stopping the flames.

Intended to Murder.

Marshall, Mich., Nov. 16.—Thomas Kelley was convicted of assault with intent to murder and rob in the circuit court Friday afternoon. Kelley's crime was committed near Albion on the night of Sept. 21, when he held up Mrs. Charles Davis, who was driving home.

Guilty of Blackmail.

Flint, Mich., Nov. 16.—George W. Rowland, charged with being implicated with Joseph W. Stockwell and others in blackmailing Jacob Raquet of Saginaw, was found guilty in the circuit court last evening; the jury was out about two and a half hours. He is now in jail awaiting sentence.

Shocked Her Nerves.

Flint, Mich., Nov. 16.—Mrs. Anna Edson Taylor, who went over Niagara in a barrel, is here taking treatment at a local sanitarium. Her nerves are in a shattered state on account of her trip, but she says that she intends to leave soon for a museum engagement in New York.

The Same Story Again.

Ishpeming, Mich., Nov. 16.—Matt Britz, a well-known jobber at Lathrop, 15 miles south of here, was shot yesterday afternoon by George Miller, the 15-year-old son of a saloonkeeper of Lathrop. The boy mistook Britz for a deer. The bullet passed through his body and Britz died instantly.

A Lucky Man.

Standish, Mich., Nov. 16.—Charles Bennett, a well-known young man residing here, was convicted of assault on the person of a man whom he killed a few weeks ago in self-defense at Elizabeth, Tenn.

MERCHANT THE OBSTACLE

He Sought to Enjoin the Road From Laying Track in Front of His Feed Barn on Water Street—Railroad Officials Could Not Be Found.

Allegan, Mich., Nov. 18.—The Sabbath stillness has been disturbed by a gang of workmen throwing dirt at a lively clip, and by night half a mile of Pere Marquette track was laid upon Water street in this city. It is a coup to forestall the efforts of A. W. Lutts, proprietor of a feed store on that thoroughfare. The latter sought to enjoin the company from building the track, notwithstanding assurances that the crossing at the entrance to his barn would be arranged in a satisfactory manner. By the time he had secured his injunction not a Pere Marquette official was to be found in Allegan. The sheriff was forced to drive to Mill Grove, six miles distant, where, it is said, he served the papers on Ticket Agent W. R. Shirley at a late hour Saturday night.

Election of Normal Seniors.

Ypsilanti, Mich., Nov. 18.—The election held according to the Australian system by the Normal seniors Saturday was interesting as a lesson in practical politics, but it was only partially successful. The election was for the offices of vice-president, treasurer and chairman of the executive committee. There was no choice, for neither of the candidates received a majority of the total number of votes cast which was necessary to an election. The officers elected were: President, J. E. Craig; secretary, Anna Thomas; class reporter, C. B. Whitmoyer; class kicker, John Drouyer; sergeant-at-arms, C. C. McClelland; yellmaster, James Melody.

Missing Heir Found.

Maple Ridge, Mich., Nov. 18.—Mrs. Adam Price and her 8-year-old son have been located at Amherstburg, Ont. M. T. Allen of Maple Ridge, Mich., has been in search of the child since last June, as he is the executor of the estate of the father, Adam Price, who died last spring, leaving $2,000 for the boy. Mrs. Price, with her son, has been living in Amherstburg since she left her husband four years ago, at the home of Frank Perrington, who is alleged to have disappeared from Maple Ridge at the same time as Mrs. Price.

Spring Mining Prospects.

Houghton, Mich., Nov. 18.—W. H. Reeves, in charge of the work on the Hollinwell property, Porcupine mountain district, Ontonagon county, has suspended work for the winter. He has been engaged on the property since 1893 for Cleveland capitalists, and has made complete explorations with churn drill on 880 acres, discovering a valuable lode in the Noble, which ay to work. Ontonagon county be developed by regular working shaft in the spring. Two new shafts have been started at Mass, one known as Ogima shaft, the other "C" Ogima.

One of Sandow's Tricks.

One day in a London tobacconist's shop Sandow, the strong man, was handed some change, and in the middle of it he saw something that looked like a bad shilling. He pushed it back across the counter. "I think that one is bad," he said.

"Nonsense," said the shopkeeper, with an incredulous air. He took up the shilling and tried it in the little brass coin tester that was screwed to the side of the counter. Then he tendered it again. "It's quite good," he said. "I can't bend it."

Sandow smiled and took it between his finger and thumb. "You can't bend it! May I try?" he asked.

"Certainly," said the man, with a

The strong man pressed the tip of his forefinger toward the tip of his thumb and the spurious coin bent like tissue paper.

"Well," said the tobacconist dumfounded, "it looks like a wrong 'un after all! Perhaps you will accept another?"

And Sandow did.

DEEP SEA CURRENTS.

MYSTERIES OF THE OCEAN THAT HAVE PUZZLED THE SCIENTISTS.

A Theory as to the Origin and Cause of the Gulf and Other Streams—Are They the Product of Immense Submarine Geysers?

For more than a century scientists and philosophers have been vainly trying to discover the origin and cause of the mysterious current in the Atlantic ocean called the gulf stream. Why so called is not apparent, as nothing in the gulf of Mexico is in its composition. There have been many theories, which have been abandoned, some perfectly absurd, such as its being caused by the earth in its revolution on its axis, for if it had the power to draw this stream at the rate of five miles an hour from the coast of Florida it would draw all the water from the east coasts of North and South America at the same velocity. The prevailing theory is that the northeast trade winds drive a current into the Caribbean sea and, aided by the feeble equatorial stream, heap up the water in the gulf of Mexico, thence rushing around the south of Florida from the source of the gulf stream. But there is no such a heaping of the waters in that gulf. The waters there are sluggish, and there is no perceptible current leading toward the gulf stream or anywhere else.

This theory has been accepted for want of a better, but those who favor it are not entirely satisfied with it. The gulf stream is an independent body of water, having no connection with the water around or behind the point where it emerges. It is warmer and of a deeper blue than the surrounding seas and gushes forth from the starting point off Cape Sable at the rate of from five to six knots an hour, with a temperature of about 90 degrees, lessening gradually as it proceeds on its journey of thousands of miles across the Atlantic ocean, warming the western shores of Europe.

Having seen the fallacy of the theories concerning the gulf stream, we will turn our attention to the great Pacific current, identical in all respects with its sister current of the Atlantic and concerning which there are no theories to contend with.

It starts spontaneously from a spot a few miles from the south end of the island of Formosa, in the Banshee channel, following the coast of Formosa northeasterly, past and through the Loochoo islands, skirting the coast of Japan; thence turns eastward on its long journey across the wide Pacific, warming the coast of America from Puget sound to Mexico. Its dark blue waters are in striking contrast to the surrounding seas, giving it the name of Murra Suar, or black water. It is an independent stream where no combination of winds or currents can possibly cause the mighty rush of warm blue water with a velocity of from five to six knots an hour from the start.

In its characteristics of heat, color and direction it resembles the gulf stream in every particular, and the origin of the two streams must be the same, whatever they may be, which I shall endeavor to show later on. There is another ocean current similar in all respects to the other two, with the exception that it runs in an exactly opposite direction. Starting from the vicinity of the south end of the island of Madagascar, it runs southwesterly around the Cape of Good Hope, where it disappears off Cape Lagullas. As a current, probably part of it is diverted into a steady set of the eastern current, caused by the prevailing westerly winds in that region. No scientists, so far as I am aware, have attempted to account for this current. Having now proved beyond refutation that all the theories advanced as to the cause of ocean currents are groundless, it remains to be proved what the true cause is.

It must be admitted that the currents have a similar origin, as they are identical in every respect as regards color, heat and velocity, springing forth in the same manner spontaneously from the earth in some mysterious way. There is no place on the surface of the earth where the water can be heated to furnish the heat contained in these streams that gush forth from the depths of the sea; consequently the forces must be subterranean and can only be accounted for by large bodies of clear, blue water from the ocean forcing its way into the depths of the earth under its crust, where it burrows a channel of its own to the surface again, having received its warmth on the way by contact with the internal heat of the lower regions of the earth, forced on by continual pressure from behind.

That there are orifices in the earth's crust cannot be denied, also what becomes of the vast volume of water that cannot be computed which is constantly running at the rate of from four to six knots an hour from the Atlantic ocean, through the strait of Gibraltar into the Mediterranean sea. The numerous rivers, too, are continually flowing in, and yet the sea remains at the same level. Evaporation cannot account for it, for what is evaporated is formed into clouds and is precipitated again into the sea by the medium of storms and frequent rains.

The water must enter the earth from the ocean through these apertures on an incline as it gushes forth in these three mighty currents and cannot be discovered by soundings; consequently these three mighty currents are nothing more or less than immense geysers. —Captain B. F. Sherburne in Cleveland Marine Record.

A Circular Rainbow.

A member of a party who made an ascent of Finsterrehorn some years ago thus described a novel sight which delighted the tired climbers: The day we mounted the Finsterrehorn we were treated to the rare sight of a circular rainbow, the phenomenon lasting nearly half an hour and forming a complete circle. There were heavy clouds lying some 4,000 feet below on the Aar glacier, and it was on these that the beautiful, brilliantly colored ring lay. A second circle was also visible. We were near the summit of the peak when the first of the party observed it, and from that point the face of the mountain on the Grimsel side is almost perpendicular, giving us a splendid view.

A Richter Anecdote.

It is not always the great conductor that shines as a composer, though unfortunately he often labors under the delusion that such is the case. On one occasion Hans Richter was present at a concert given by a brother composer, at which the latter performed a long and not particularly interesting work composition came to an expressed his criticism in words, "Well," he said, "I, have been seen compositions to make—raising his hand three around—"but I haf burn-

IS IT CONSPIRACY?

Plot Unearthed to Overthrow Northwestern Government.

GUNS AND EQUIPAGE READY

Five Thousand Reported Ready to Rise in Revolt—Plan to Capture Police and Take Civil Officers—Cold Winter Depended on to Aid.

San Francisco, Nov. 18.—The Call yesterday printed an unconfirmed story from Shakway, Alaska, under date of Nov. 6, telling of the discovery of what is alleged to be a huge conspiracy existing in Dawson and ramifying to Skagway, Victoria, Vancouver and Seattle, for the overthrow of the local government of the Northwest Territory and the establishing of a republic with Dawson as its capital. According to the details of the story, arms, ammunition and provisions have been taken in over the railroad and caches at strategic points. Prominent American residents of Shagway are said to be leaders in the conspiracy. Miners to the number of 5,000 are said to await the summons to arms, ready to fight for the independence from the dominion rule of the gold fields, camps and towns. The plan is to overpower the mounted police, arrest the civil authorities and take the government into their own hands. The rigors of the Arctic winters would give the insurgents six months immunity from attack by Canadian or British troops, and the adventurous arch-conspirators prepare for intervention or outside assistance by the time the melting of ice and snow will permit the invasion of their isolated republic.

It is further related that a hurried conference, lasting until midnight, was held at Skagway Nov. 5, at which were present Captain Corrigan of the Northwest mounted police, who had arrived from across the Canadian border late that evening; Judge Brown of the United States district court; United States Marshal Shoup, United States Attorney Frederich and Major Hovey, commanding the United States troops at Skagway, attending the meeting. This was the last of several hasty consultations between the civil and military representatives of the two powers in relation to the mysterious transportation of supplies into the interior and rumors of a conspiracy to lead the miners in a revolt against the Canadian government in the Northwest Territory. Those present maintained subsequently the strictest silence concerning the new evidence laid before them, and their evident anxiety helped to confirm the rumors of conspiracy.

Captain Corrigan took a train back across the border the next morning, while United States Marshal Shoup embarked on the first steamer for Seattle, which port he reached several days ago. The object of his visit was presumably to confer by telegraph with the authorities at Washington. He sailed Saturday afternoon on the Dolphin, on his way back to Skagway.

Census Office Behind.

Washington, Nov. 18.—The annual report of Hon. W. R. Merriam, director of the census, was made public yesterday by the secretary of the interior, to whom it is addressed. Speaking of the prospect of meeting the legal requirement for the completion of the four principal reports by July 1, 1902, Mr. Merriam says:

"The work of tabulating the returns and results of the field work of the enumerators and special agents of the twelfth census has progressed with reasonable celerity. The law provides that the four principal reports shall be placed in the hands of the public by the first of July, 1902. The statisticians made estimates of the time needed to finish the particular branch assigned to each clerk. The plans so submitted have been greatly interfered with owing to the absence of clerks from duty owing to sickness or annual leave. The officials of the office believe that their allotted task will be completed in ample time."

Colombia Means Business.

Colon, Colombia, Nov. 18.—The Colombian gunboat General Pinzon arrived here today from Savanilla with 300 troops. In view of the unchanged conditions on the isthmus, this evidence of the government's policy to reinforce its forces here gives credence to the presumption that Gen. Carlos Alban, military commander of this district, has finally resolved to land a strong attacking force against the insurgents within his jurisdiction and attempt to terminate the present wearisome deadlock between the Colombian rebels and their government.

John A. Buchan of Detroit has been appointed assistant engineer at the Mt. Pleasant Indian school. E. C. Foster has been appointed a rural free delivery letter carrier at Quincy.

Odor of Metals.

Gold and platinum have little or no odor, but the smell of newly cut tin and of other metals is very pronounced. It is suggested that uranium furnishes a clew to the odors of metals, as this is a very strong smelling substance, and it is always giving off the so called Becquerel rays, consisting of streams of minute corpuscles.

Simeon Boyd.

Simeon Bord was born in County Antrim, Ireland, June 17, 1866. He died Nov. 15, 1901. His was a brief life of only thirty-five years, but some aspects of it command our attention. When two years of age his parents brought him with them to Tecumseh. At the age of seventeen he went to Detroit to work remaining there for eight years. In 1890, he married Miss Agnes Wright, of Detroit. Their married life was very brief as she died that same year. In 1894 he married Miss Martha Jardine, of Oxbridge, Canada. To them were born four children, who with the mother mourn the loss of a tender father and devoted husband.

Mr. Boyd was a Christian man, exemplifying in his daily life the principles he professed. By his sterling integrity he commanded the respect and confidence of all with whom he had business dealings. He was incorruptedly honest, thoroughly straightforward and ever considerate of the rights of others. Such noble manhood is the eloquent witness to the sincerity of his Christian profession. He had a clear and definite Christian experience and an assured hope.

He was ever ready to talk of his faith and his every utterance was in a bright and joyous strain. In his last hours the precious promises of Scripture were constantly on his lips. His was a noble life, though humble. His was a triumphant death, though it may seem to our short-sighted vision, a premature one. To him death was gain, because he had lived for and in Christ.

To his wife and dear children his sudden taking off comes in the form of a disaster, but God has declared himself the God of the fatherless and the widow. God's care will not fail them in this day of their sore need. Five brothers and two sisters join with those of his more immediate household in mourning his loss. May God help them all to verify the divine promise which reads, "Blessed are they that mourn, for they shall be comforted."

A REMARKABLE GROWTH.

Figures that Tell of Detroit and Michigan Prosperity.

In submitting to the public the record of its circulation in a month when business was on a normal basis, the Evening News association of Detroit assumes that the public in general and its advertising patrons in particular have an interest in the growth and success of the two newspapers, The Evening News and The Morning Tribune, which have been identified with the progress of Detroit and Michigan for many years. When the price of The Evening News was reduced to one cent on July 1 last there was an immediate increase in the daily output of papers, and it was some time before matters adjusted themselves in accordance with the new order of things.

Compared with the same month a year ago, the Detroit Evening News and the Detroit Tribune combined show an average daily increase in circulation of 26,230 copies, while the average gain of Sunday News-Tribune has been 3,676 copies. During October the average daily circulation was 99,565 copies which is more than all the other daily Detroit papers combined.

The circulation of the Sunday News-Tribune has reached an average total of 44,166 copies. In the matter of advertising there has been a parallel increase the space for October, 1901, exceeding that of the previous year by 2,276 inches while the Sunday paper showed an increase of 2,895 inches.

Monday Club Reception.

The Monday Club gave the second of their open special meetings in the form of a reception to Mrs. Irma T. Jones, of Ann Arbor, at the home of Mrs. Wm. Albert yesterday afternoon.

About a hundred of the Club members and their guests were present. The president, Mrs. T. C. Harris, called the meeting to order promptly at 2:30 and called upon the delegates to the State Federation for a report of that meeting.

Mrs. M. E. Corey gave a very interesting and entertaining account of the proceedings of the convention, bringing out many points hitherto overlooked in regard to outside charitable, sanitary and humitarian work for literary clubs.

She was followed by Rev. Louisa Haight, who dealt a little more in statistics but rounded up the scattering fragments of news from the convention in an eloquent tribute to the progress the clubs are making in obliterating and rising above social and denominational lines, and making intelligence and desire for growth mentally and morally the open sesame to club life. She very innocently dropped the remark that club work was teaching people that all the bright women were not in one church," and when she had concluded her hearers agreed with her in this regard.

Mrs. Jones' talk was very helpful and delightful. She held a manucript, which she referred to only occasionly, and then laid it aside to speak more feelingly for what she termed "heart culture" without which literary clubs were a selfish organization, which like Tennyson's brook run forever on helping no one and simply making a good time for its own members. She deplored what she termed "scatteration" in club programs, some of them ranging from Abraham Lincoln to a discussion on china painting and covering too much ground, better choose more intermingling lines of thought.

Thirty years ago it was thought that a literary club should stick to literature and leave outside subjects to other influences but we know better now and altruistic work is a part of the great club movement. She paid a glowing tribute to Mrs. Stone's influeuce over the clubs of the state and said that to her was greatly due the renaissance of learning, with which we are now overwhelmed. Mrs. Jones was pleasing in the manner and the matter of her remarks and the club feel benefitted by her visit.

Refreshments were served in the dining room, which was beautifully decorated with ferns and palms, and an abundance of carnations. The committee who entertained were Miss Louise Phelps, Miss Lizzie Smith and Mrs. Eugene Harris and to them is greatly due the success of one of the club's pleasantest afternoons, of which they have had many.

ROUND ABOUT US.

The saueakraut season is at its height The very air is redolent with the lovely aroma and the children come home from school singing, "Oh saurkraut is bully, I tell you it is fine, I tink I ought to know it ven I eat 'em all the time."—Manchester Enterprise.

Samuel Berry, who died recently in Deerfield was the father of fourteen children, all of whom survive him. It is told of him that once when the census taker was around, he was unable himself to name but thirteen of fourteen he then had; and was obliged to call one up and tell him to give his name to the census man, much to the latter's amusement.—Blissfield Advance

We ain't kickin', of course, but we do feel that we were born too soon; when we think of the advantages the young men have who do their courting in an automobile—no lines to hold to bother and nothing to do but just keep the dear, sweet creature at their side from falling out. Backward, turn backward, oh Time in your flight, and give us a chance again just for one night; make us to realize, oh Time, if you can, that we are a boy again and not a man. Pick out these gray locks, erase these wrinkles now deep, while we are in an "auto" lull these angels to leep.—Ex.

About one o'clock Monday morning the neighbors at the foot of Henry street were aroused by a cry of fire which proved to be the out-house of R. E. E. Brown. Investigation showed that kerosene oil had been poured over the building and along the walk from it to the house, evidently with a view of leading the fire to the house and thus burn it too. It was a daring deed and will prove a serious charge for the offenders if exposed. Firing building means several years at Jackson. Mr. Brown feels quite certain as to the identity of the offenders.—Saline Observer.

One of the neatest, most convenient and best arranged depots on the Lake Shore is the new Union depot at Lenawee Junction, into which run the trains of the Lake Shore old road, Monroe branch, Fayette division and Jackson rainbow route. It is of brick, with large waiting rooms, commodious ticket and telegraph office, and ample baggage room. The interior is natural wood finish, of white pine and quarter sawed oak, all highly polished, and a fine radiator system of heating is used. The only draw back is the uncomfortable seats in the waiting room, and why such expense is incured in producing a seat that is beautiful to the eye, but so much of a torture to use, we are unable to explain. Lenawee Junction can boast the prettiest little depot on the line between Toledo and Chicago.—Adrian Press.

Adrian Telegram: 'George Kastler, the good natured blacksmith was the contestant in a chewing match Sunday at his home on North Main street, in which the chicken was the winner. George enjoyed a handsome foul of the yellow legged variety, nicely fried to the brownest crisp. When he got through he leaned back in his chair, deposited his $24 set of false teeth at one side of his plate and proceeded to lean back and enjoy the Sunday morning paper by placing it over his eyes and take a nap. His daughter, who is one of the neatest housekeepers in the city, eleaned off the table, brushing the crumbs in a tray and depositing them in the stove fire. The chicken bones, Kastler.s teeth and all went into the flery furnace, where they made things warm while George took his nap. When George awakened, he was the one who made things warm for a few moments. But it was no good; the mischeif had been done. So George is doing the gum dorp act to-day and will keep out of all chewing matches until he sees the dentist.

A Little Too Late.

The minister of a Scotch parish had a great wish that an old couple should become teetotalers, but they were in nowise eager to comply. After much pressing, however, they consented to try the experiment, but laying down as a condition that they should be allowed to keep a bottle of "Auld Kirk" for medicinal purposes.

About a fortnight after John began to feel his resolution weakening, but he was determined not to be the first to give way. In another week, however, he collapsed entirely.

"Jenny, woman," he said, "I've an awfu' pain in my head. Ye micht gie me a wee drappie an' see gin it'll dae me ony guid."

Simeon Boyd.

Simeon Bord was born in County Antrim, Ireland, June 17, 1863. He died Nov. 15, 1901. His was a brief life of only thirty-five years, but some aspects of it command our attention. When two years of age his parents brought him with them to Tecumseh. At the age of seventeen he went to Detroit to work remaining there for eight years. In 1890, he married Miss Agnes Wright, of Detroit. Their married life was very brief as she died that same year. In 1894 he married Miss Martha Jardine, of Oxbridge, Canada. To them were born four children, who with the mother mourn the loss of a tender father and devoted husband.

Mr. Boyd was a Christian man, exemplifying in his daily life the principles he professed. By his sterling integrity he commanded the respect and confidence of all with whom he had business dealings. He was incorruptedly honest, thoroughly straightforward and ever considerate of the rights of others. Such noble manhood is the eloquent witness to the sincerity of his Christian profession. He had a clear and definite Christian experience and an assured hope.

He was ever ready to talk of his faith and his every utterance was in a bright and joyous strain. In his last hours the precious promises of Scripture were constantly on his lips. His was a noble life, though humble. His was a triumphant death, though it may seem to our short-sighted vision, a premature one. To him death was gain, because he had lived for and in Christ.

To his wife and dear children his sudden taking off comes in the form of a disaster, but God has declared himself the God of the fatherless and the widow. God's care will not fail them in this day of their sore need. Five brothers and two sisters join with those of his more immediate household in mourning his loss. May God help them all to verify the divine promise which reads, "Blessed are they that mourn, for they shall be comforted."

A REMARKABLE GROWTH.

Figures that Tell of Detroit and Michigan Prosperity.

In submitting to the public the record of its circulation in a month when business was on a normal basis, the Evening News association of Detroit assumes that the public in general and its advertising patrons in particular have an interest in the growth and success of the two newspapers, The Evening News and The Morning Tribune, which have been identified with the progress of Detroit and Michigan for many years. When the price of The Evening News was reduced to one cent on July 1 last there was an immediate increase in the daily output of papers, and it was some time before matters adjusted themselves in accordance with the new order of things.

Compared with the same month a year ago, the Detroit Evening News and the Detroit Tribune combined show an average daily increase in circulation of 26,230 copies, while the average gain of Sunday News-Tribune has been 3,676 copies. During October the average daily circulation was 99,565 copies which is more than all the other daily Detroit papers combined.

The circulation of the Sunday News-Tribune has reached an average total of 44,166 copies. In the matter of advertising there has been a parallel increase the space for October, 1901, exceeding that of the previous year by 2,276 inches while the Sunday paper showed an increase of 2,895 inches.

Monday Club Reception.

About a hundred of the Club members and their guests were present. The president, Mrs. T. C. Harris, called the meeting to order promptly at 2:30 and called upon the delegates to the State Federation for a report of that meeting.

Mrs. M. E. Corey gave a very interesting and entertaining account of the proceedings of the convention, bringing out many points hitherto overlooked in regard to outside charitable, sanitary and humitarian work for literary clubs.

She was followed by Rev. Louisa Haight, who dealt a little more in statistics but rounded up the scattering fragments of news from the convention in an eloquent tribute to the progress the clubs are making in obliterating and rising above social and denominational lines, and making intelligence and desire for growth mentally and morally the open sesame to club life. She very innocently dropped the remark that club work was teaching people that all the bright women were not in one church," and when she had concluded her hearers agreed with her in this regard.

Mrs. Jones' talk was very helpful and delightful. She held a manucript, which she referred to only occasionly, and then laid it aside to speak more feelingly for what she termed 'heart culture" without which literary clubs were a selfish organization, which like Tennyson's brook run forever on helping no one and simply making a good time for its own members. She deplored what she termed "scatteration" in club programs, some of them ranging from Abraham Lincoln to a discussion on china painting and covering too much ground, better choose more intermingling lines of thoght.

Thirty years ago it was thought that a literary club should stick to literature and leave outside subjects to other influences but we know better now and altruistic work is a part of the great club movement. She paid a glowing tribute to Mrs. Stone's influeuce over the clubs of the state and said that to her was greatly due the renaissance of learning, with which we are now overwhelmed. Mrs. Jones was pleasing in the manner and the matter of her remarks and the club feel benefitted by her visit.

Refreshments were served in the dining room, which was beautifully decorated with ferns and palms, and an abundance of carnations. The committee who entertained were Miss Louise Phelps, Miss Lizzie Smith and Mrs. Eugene Harris and to them is greatly due the success of one of the club's pleasantest afternoons, of which they have had many.

ROUND ABOUT US.

The saueakraut season is at its height The very air is redolent with the lovely aroma and the children come home from school singing, "Oh saurkraut is bully, I tell you it is fine, I tink I ought to know it ven I eat 'em all the time."—Manchester Enterprise.

Samuel Berry, who died recently in Deerfield was the father of fourteen children, all of whom survive him. It is told of him that once when the census taker was around, he was unable himself to name but thirteen of fourteen he then had; and was obliged to call one up and tell him to give his name to the census man, much to the latter's amusement.—Blissfield Advance

We ain't kickin', of course, but we do feel that we were born too soon, when we think of the advantages the young men have who do their courting in an automobile—no lines to hold to bother and nothing to do but just keep the dear, sweet creature at their side from falling out. Backward, turn backward, oh Time in your flight, and give us a chance again just for one night; make us to realize, oh Time, if you can, that we are a boy again and not a man. Pick out these gray locks, erase these wrinkles now deep, while we are in an "auto" lull these angels to sleep.—Ex.

About one o'clock Monday morning the neighbors at the foot of Henry street were aroused by a cry of fire which proved to be the out-house of R. E. E. Brown. Investigation showed that kerosene oil had been poured over the building and along the walk from it to the house, evidently with a view of leading the fire to the house and thus burn it too. It was a daring deed and will prove a serious charge for the offenders if exposed. Firing building means several years at Jackson. Mr. Brown feels quite certain as to the identity of the offenders.—Saline Observer.

One of the neatest, most convenient and best arranged depots on the Lake Shore is the new Union depot at Lenawee Junction, into which run the trains of the Lake Shore old road, Monroe branch, Fayette division and Jackson rainbow route. It is of brick, with large waiting rooms, commodious ticket and telegraph office, and ample baggage room. The interior is natural wood finish, of white pine and quarter sawed oak, all highly polished, and a fine radiator system of heating is used. The only draw back is the uncomfortable seats in the waiting room, and why such expense is incured in producing a seat that is beautiful to the eye, but so much of a torture to use, we are unable to explain. Lenawee Junction can boast the prettiest little depot on the line between Toledo and Chicago.—Adrian Press.

Adrian Telegram: George Kastler, the good natured blacksmith, was the contestant in a chewing match Sunday at his home on North Main street, in which the chicken was the winner. George enjoyed a handsome foul of the yellow legged variety, nicely fried to the brownest crisp. When he got through he leaned back in his chair, deposited his $24 set of false teeth at one side of his plate and proceeded to lean back and enjoy the Sunday morning paper by placing it over his eyes and take a nap. His daughter, who is one of the neatest housekeepers in the city, cleaned off the table, brushing the crumbs in a tray and depositing them in the stove fire. The chicken bones, Kastler's teeth and all went into the fiery furnace, where they made things warm while George took his nap. When George awakened, he was the one who made things warm for a few moments. But it was no good; the mischeif had been done. So George is doing the gum dorp act to-day and will keep out of all chewing matches until he sees the dentist.

A Little Too Late.

The minister of a Scotch parish had a great wish that an old couple should become teetotalers, but they were in nowise eager to comply. After much pressing, however, they consented to try the experiment, but laying down as a condition that they should be allowed to keep a bottle of "Auld Kirk" for medicinal purposes.

About a fortnight after John began to feel his resolution weakening, but he was determined not to be the first to give way. In another week, however, he collapsed entirely.

"Jenny, woman," he said, "I've an awfu' pain in my head. Ye micht gie me a wee drappie an' see gin it'll dae me ony guid."

Now They Never Speak.

A coolness growing out of the following conversation has sprung up between Jones and Smith.

"I had a splendid time last night," said Jones. "I spent the evening at a little social gathering at the Goodman mansion."

"Are the Goodmans nice people?" queried Smith.

"Well, I should say so. They are very aristocratic. To get into their circle one must have either a great deal of money or a great deal of genius."

"You don't tell me so? And you say you were there?"

"Yes."

"You were invited, were you?"

"Precisely."

Antiquity of Playing Cards.

The game of cards was first played in the east and seems to have had a military origin. Cards were introduced from Asia into Europe at the time of the crusades and were first used by necromancers to foretell fortunes. They soon became a popular amusement in the south of Europe, where the Saracens and Moors taught the people how to use them, and card playing spread to all parts of the continent. The state records of Germany mention the fact that Rudolph I., in 1275, was fond of the game and played with his courtiers.

After the invention of paper the manufacture of cards became extensive, but declined somewhat when card playing was forbidden by several of the German states and by the English government on account of the supposed immoral tendency. Before the era of paper cards in the orient were made of ivory, papyrus and canvas, less frequently of the precious metals and quite commonly of wood.

"What do you mean?" demanded her husband. "Do you intend to insinuate that men talk to each other more foolishly than women chatter?"

"Of course I do," the lady went on imperturbably. "Now, women never try to make each other eat their words, no matter h... angry they may be."

Bunkoing a Japanese.

"J. P. G." was only an enlisted man in Uncle Sam's navy, but his messmates called him "the Swell" because whenever he went ashore he carried a suit of civilian's clothes. At Yokohama, in his fine raiment and a white felt hat, he passed himself off to a Japanese coal merchant as the paymaster of the fleet and contracted for several thousand tons of coal. The price named was $14 a ton.

"What is my rake off?" he asked the dealer, who offered a generous commission. "Make the price sixteen dollars a ton and have —— thousand tons ready for delivery at the earliest possible hour tomorrow morning," he said.

The merchant opened wine, and when thoroughly warmed up the sailor remarked, looking indolently at his watch: "By the bye, I'm expected to visit the club tonight, and it is probable that I may need a little more money than I have in my pocket. Perhaps you had better advance me three or four thousand dollars on account."

Of course he got what he wanted. Next morning the vessels were surrounded with scores of barges laden with coal, and it was all the officers could do to prevent the Japs from unloading their cargoes. The dealer dared say nothing, for he had entered into a conspiracy to defraud the government, so he pocketed his loss in silence.—New York Press.

Measuring the Heat of the Body.

By means of an ingenious instrument invented by Dr. Lombard of New York it is ascertained that a woman's body is warmer than that of a man by about three-fourths of a degree and sometimes as high as one degree, while in no instance has the warmth of a man's body been found to be greater than that of a female. It is also definitely ascertained that children are decidedly warmer than adults, the difference being about 1 degree F., the younger the child the greater the diversity. A difference in the heat of the sides of the body is discovered to be an invariable law. The left side of the head and extending downward to the base of the neck is much hotter than the right side.

At Second Hand.

A Highland laird who could not afford to keep his own piper was accustomed to employ the village piper when he had company.

On one occasion, through some oversight, Donald had not been given his preliminary glass of whisky before he began his performance. Accordingly, he found his bagpipe in a most refractory temper. The laird asked him what was the matter with it, and Donald replied that the leather was so hard that he could do nothing with it.

"What will soften it?" asked the anxious laird.

"Och, just whusky!" said Donald.

A tumbler of whisky was at once brought, which Donald immediately drank.

"You rascal!" said the laird. "Did you not say it was for the bagpipes?"

"Och, yess, yess," said Donald, "but she will be a ferry peculiar pipes this. She aye likes it blawed in."—Highland Bagpipe.

POVERTY.

If four blank walls be mine, and every wind
That goes careening through the vasts of sky
Makes free with my shrunk casement, and my hearth
Shows but a feeble flame, and the rough floor
Has but the dust for carpet, am I poor?
Nay, I am very Crœsus, that, and more!
For no swart Mede can rob me of the dreams
Wherewith I hang a rapt Madonna there,
A face Murillo painted, drape rich folds
Of gold shot damask round yon oriel
And heap about me rugs of velvet pile
Deft wrought upon the looms of Kermanshah!
Poor! Is he poor who has God's gift of dreams?

The Prosecution Of Mrs. Dullet

I was on a visit to my friend Dave at his mountain home and was standing one day in the courtyard at Lexby, the county town, discussing the possibilities of his re-election to the position of commonwealth's attorney when down the street came at a long gallop an old fellow mounted on a thin, ewe necked sorrel colt whose long rusty tail whipped between his legs at every jump. Up to the courtyard gate he clattered and, dismounting, flung the rein over the post in utter disregard of the large printed notice posted on it that no horses were to be hitched there. Through the turnstile and up the walk he came swinging.

"I believe that's old Dullet from Jacksborough," said Dave. "He's a man of influence up there and dead against me—always is. I wonder what he wants?"

He had not long to wait, for the old fellow strode up to a group and said, "Whar's the commonwealth's attorney?"

"I am the man," said Dave. "What can I do for you, Mr. Dullet?"

"I wants you to put my wife in the pen'tentiary," he said.

"What!" exclaimed Dave; then recovered himself. "What do you want that for?"

"She's forged my name, and she's got to go to the pen'tentiary," said he.

"Well, tell me about it," said Dave, seeing the gravity of the situation, and, turning, he led the way into his office and offered chairs.

"Well, it's this way: My oldest gal Sairy is been a-wantin to marry a feller named Torm Hackle for gwine on two years, and I wouldn't let her."

"Why?" said Dave in a professional tone, drawing a pen and paper toward him.

"'Cause Torm's on t'other side," said Dullet.

"Oh!" said Dave, writing down something. "Go on."

"Well, I wouldn't let Torm come over on our side. I sont him word ef he did to look out. And Sairy she got kind of sick and peaked, and my old woman she wanted me to do it then, and I wouldn't, 'cause I had to sign the dockiment. Then she got kinder worser, and my wife she wanted me to go for the doctor. So day before yistiddy I went down for the doctor, and he said he'd come today, and I staid at Jim Miggins' store all night and yistiddy a-waitin for him, and when I got home last night my wife she said, 'Whar's the doctor?' And I said: 'He's a-comin. How's Sairy?' And she said: 'She's done got well. She's got all the doctor she wanted. She's done married Torm Hackle.' 'How did she done it,' sys I, 'and I ain't signed the license?' says I. 'I signed your name for it,' says she. And I said, 'You has done commit a pen'tentiary offense, and I kin put you in the pen'tentiary for it,' says I And she bet me a dollar she hadn't and I couldn't. And I says, 'I bet you $2 I kin, and I will,' says I. And now I are gwine to do it. I kin do it, can't I?"

"Well," he said slowly, "there are not a great many precedents." The old fellow's face hardened. "But, of course," he added, "forgery is a very serious thing, and, ah!" The old fellow's eye was upon him. "How long have you been married?" he asked.

"Twenty year come next month."

Dave wrote it down.

"Wife always been good wife to you?"

"Ain't got no fault to find wid her till now, when she forged my name an"—

"Ever have any trouble with her?"

"Never at all, 'cept, of course, fights like all married folks has."

Dave wrote it down.

"Industrious?"

"Got no fault to find wid her about dat."

"Help you save what you got?"

"Ain't a hard workiner, saviner 'ooman on the mountain."

"How many children she got?"

"Nine—eight livin. I don't count that one."

"How many dead?"

"Four."

Dave wrote laboriously.

"Wife good to 'em?"

"Jes' as good as could be. Nursed 'em faithful."

"Sit up with 'em when they were sick?"

"Never went to bed at all; never took her clothes off."

"Go hard with her?"

"Went mighty hard, specially when Johnny died. He was named after me."

Dave wrote silently.

"Go hard with you?"

"Right sort of hard."

"Sort of lonesome after that?"

"Mighty lonesome."

"How old your youngest one now?"

"Gwine on 3; that's Billy."

"Fond of his mother?"

"Can't bear her out of his sight."

"Fond of you?"

"Sort of—right smart."

"Say Sairy was your oldest?"

"Yes."

"Thought right smart of her when you didn't have any others, just at first, I reckon?"

"Umh. Might 'a' done; don't remember."

"Wife did, anyhow?"

"Yes; always fool 'bout her. Oldest—see?"

"She was young and fresh then?"

"Yes; likeliest woman on the mountain."

"Bet she was! Used to have good time sitting up to her, going to see her summer evenings, walking through the woods?"

"Yes, sir; did that."

"She thought more of first baby than you. She had more trouble with her than you—when she was a baby, I mean?"

"Oh, yes; guess she did."

"Carried her round in her arms, nursed her when she was sick and made her little frocks for her?"

"Yes."

"As she did Johnny's?"

"Yes."

"And does little Billy's?"

"Yes. She's made Billy a little pair of breeches."

"With pockets in them?"

"Yes; two."

Dave laid down his pen, opened the code and read a little to himself. "Well, I can put her in the penitentiary for you," he said. "'Not less than one nor more than ten years,'" he read.

Dullet sat forward a little.

"How old is your wife?"

"'Bout 50 year."

"I'll draw the indictment. Let me see, the grand jury will meet when? Then the jury?" He was talking to himself, with his eyes turned up to the ceiling. "There might be some of those Hackles on the jury. Umh, that would be bad." Dullet twisted around in his chair. "They'd send her on for the full time, though—ten years. That would be good."

Dullet leaned forward. "Are them Hackles obleeged to be on that jury?" he asked.

"No," said Dave; "not at all. Only they may be on there, that's all." He lifted his eyes again to the ceiling. "That might be all the better. They'd of course be pretty rough on her. Ten years. She'd be about 60 when she came out. Umh! They'd have worked her pretty hard. Let me see. I suppose they'd put her with the thieves, dress her in stripes and maybe whip her." Dullet started to give an exclamation, but stopped to listen. "I suppose little Billy would be sorry at night at first, but he'd get used to it, or he might go down to see her once a year or so for a few minutes in his breeches if she lived. He'd miss her some. If she died, she'd go to Johnny. Well, the Hackles wouldn't be sorry. Yes. I can do it, I think," he said, bringing his eyes down on Dullet's face and speaking positively.

Dullet rose with a jump. "Look a-here, Mr.—Mr.—What's your name?" he said. "I'll just be durned ef any of them Hackles kin put my wife in the penitentiary, and ef anybody thinks they kin let 'em try it!"

Dave looked at him calmly. "I agree with you," he said, "and I'll help you."

There was a pause, in which Dullet was reflecting. Then he asked, "What would you advise me to do?"

"I don't advise you to do anything," said Dave "but I know what I'd do if I was in your place."

"What?"

"I'd go home and send for Sairy to come over to dinner next Sunday and tell her to bring that fellow with her—he's more Dullet now than he is Hackle, and every time my wife got uppish I'd tell her I could have put her in the penitentiary for ten years, but I was too good to her to do it."

Dullet reflected and then said: "I'll do it. What does I owe to you?"

"A good deal," said Dave, "but I want you to present it to Mrs. Dullet for me."

"Well"— He walked to the door, paused and then said slowly, "Th' nex' time you runs for anything, Jacksborough is a-gwine to vote for you." He went out.

Basque Funeral Customs.

Among the Basques funeral festivities were kept up not only after the funeral, but also for eight days more, and on New Year's day, when they were repeated. In their case this was a purely religious ceremonial observance, even if it originated in pagan days. For religion has entered into and still pervades the funeral rites of the Basques to a degree now hardly conceivable. The deceased who was the head of the family, probably belonging to the third religious order, was usually buried in the appropriate dress of the order. The funeral was presided over by the serore, who was a sort of nun. This probably, as O'Shea says, came down from the time when women held high ecclesiastical positions among the Basques.

The very feasts were relics of days when an offering of meat, bread and wine was wont to be taken into the church or churchyard not only at the funeral, but every day for two years afterward, for the supposed benefit of the deceased, but really for that of the clergy.

Up to 1766 in Guipuzcoa on the occasion of a funeral an ox was taken to the church door and then killed and subsequently eaten, a survival, of course, of pagan sacrifices in primitive times. In whatever way the habit of taking the deceased to the church on an open bier arose, there can be no question that the fire lighted at the nearest crossroads and the obligatory pater a l'intention du defunt are of deeply religious origin, and both in deed and in truth appeal to each neighbor to pray for the soul of a departed brother.—Gentleman's Magazine.

CAPITAL TEN PERCENTERS.

Government Clerks Who Lend to Their Fellow Workers.

"I reckon I'll sell my salary this month," remarked the young census clerk.

"To whom?" asked his friend.

Dialogues such as this are of frequent occurrence between government clerks in Washington toward the end of the month. When a clerk sells his salary to a ten percenter, he gives the latter an I O U for the entire salary due him on the following pay day and receives in exchange 90 per cent of the amount. The man who makes the loan retains the remaining 10 per cent, whence his name of ten percenter.

The ten percenter is said to exist under one name or another in all of the great federal department buildings in Washington. He is invariably a shrewd government clerk who has a bit of money of his own or has saved his salary until its accumulation represents a tidy little sum. This capital he is ever ready to lend in sums of from $10 to $100.

In a majority of the Washington offices the laws against usurers are so rigorously enforced that the ten percenter is unable to transact business in safety as an individual; he exists nevertheless under the protecting title of a beneficial society. These fake societies should not be confused with the mutual beneficiary organizations which have been established for a number of years in many of the departments, notably the government printing office, for the purpose of aiding sick or disabled members and their families and of burying the dead. The ten percenters' society never includes more than five or six members. They have their charter and a carefully drawn constitution and bylaws.

Each member contributes a certain amount of money to the funds of the concern, and the other employees of the office are quietly informed how they can be accommodated with a loan for a small bonus. On the first of every month the pool divides its profits. These organizations are usually short lived, as they become unpopular when the business begins to grow large. The death of one fake association is rapidly followed by the birth of a successor, differing from its predecessor in name only, so that the ten percenters are enabled to ply their trade without much interruption.—New York Sun.

"My wife was very much run down in flesh and strength. Commenced taking VINOL and she felt the beneficial results of it before the first bottle was gone. She took four bottles in all and received wonderful benefit. Her strength returned and she gained materially in weight. I am happy to state that she is now in perfect health and we give VINOL the entire credit for this happy result."

To Judge an Opal.

An expert on opal mining has recently explained how the opal is judged as to quality and desirability. First, he says, color is of the greatest importance. Red fire, or red in combination with yellow, blue and green, are the best. Blue by itself is quite valueless, and the green opal is not of great value unless the color is very vivid and the pattern very good. The color must be true—that is to say, it must not run in streaks or patches, alternating with a colorless or inferior quality.

Pattern is described as being an important factor, the several varieties being known as "pin fire" when the grain is very small, "harlequin" when the color is all in small squares, the more regular the better, and the "flash fire" or "flash opal" when the color shows as a single flash or in very large pattern. Harlequin is the most common and is also popularly considered the most beautiful. When the squares of color are regular and show as distinct, minute checks of red, yellow, blue and green, it is considered magnificent. Some stones show better on edge than on top.

An Object Lesson to Grant.

This story is told of the first time Grant ever had charge of a large body of men sent out to give battle. He was colonel in the early part of 1862, detailed to go to the relief of an Illinois regiment, supposed to be surrounded by Confederates at Palmyra, Mo., but when he arrived the regiment had relieved itself by retiring. Grant then went out to Florida, in the same state, and as the regiment toiled over the hill beyond which the enemy was supposed to be in waiting Grant says he would have "given anything to be back again in Illinois."

At the top of the hill, instead of troops drawn up in battle array, Grant saw a deserted camp. "It occurred to me at once that Harris had been as much afraid of me as I had been of him," said Grant. "From that event to the close of the war I never experienced trepidation upon confronting an enemy, though I always felt more or less anxiety. I never forgot that he had as much reason to fear my forces as I had his."—Syracuse Post-Standard

Reasons For a Divorce.

The Druses sometimes divorce their wives for apparently the most trivial causes. Thus a man named Soleiman Attala had a wife, Isbakyeh. The woman frequently worked for us, and on several occasions I had to complain that she talked too much and worked too little. At length I was obliged to tell Soleiman that owing to his wife's laziness I could employ her no longer. Shortly afterward I went to England.

On my return after a couple of months' absence I was surprised to find that Soleiman had divorced Isbakyeh and had already married another woman. On inquiring from him the cause of this he replied, "Your honor told me that you would not employ my wife again, so I thought I would get rid of her and marry another woman whom you would employ."—Blackwood's Magazine.

F. A. WERMAN, OF BALTIMORE, SAYS:

BALTIMORE, Md., March 30, 1901.

Gentlemen:—Being entirely cured of deafness, thanks to your treatment, I will now give you a full history of my case, to be used at your discretion.

About five years ago my right ear began to sing, and this kept on getting worse, until I lost my hearing in this ear entirely.

I underwent a treatment for catarrh, for three months, without any success, consulted a number of physicians, among others, the most eminent ear specialist of this city, who told me that only an operation could help me, and even that only temporarily, that the head noises would then cease, but the hearing in the affected ear would be lost forever.

I then saw your advertisement accidentally in a New York paper, and ordered your treatment. After I had used it only a few days according to your directions, the noises ceased, and to-day, after five weeks, my hearing in the diseased ear has been entirely restored. I thank you heartily and beg to remain Very truly yours.

Brain-Food Nonsense

Another ridiculous food fad has been branded by the most competent authorities. They have dispelled the silly notion that one kind of food is needed for brain another for muscles and still another for bones. A correct diet will not only nourish a particular part of the body, but it will sustain every other part. Yet, however good your food may be, its nutriment is destroyed by indigestion or dyspepsia. You must prepare for their appearance or to prevent their coming by taking regular doses of Green's August Flower, the favorite medicine of the healthy millions. A few doses aids digestion, stimulates the liver to healthly action, purifies the blood and makes you feel buoyant and vigorous. You can get Dr. G. G. Green's reliable remedies at J. J. Orr's. GAME WARDEN STILL WATCHING

St. Joseph, Mich., Nov. 20.—The second chapter was added yesterday morning to Deputy Game Warden Brewster's crusade against illegal fishing on Lake Michigan. The tug Dornbos, with Brewster and his assistants, cleared this port for the fishing grounds before daylight.

When Brewster returned to this harbor after his first attack he found only the tug Edwards awaiting him, the remainder having gone to Michigan City.

When the warden's boat arrived on the fishing grounds just at break of day Brewster was much surprised to find that the tugmasters had been informed during the night of his movements, and as a result the entire fleet of tugs was lined up and operating in Indiana waters, fully two miles from the Michigan line. The entire fleet of tugs remained motionless for some time, while Brewster remained in Michigan waters.

MICHIGAN BRIEFS.

Mrs. Mary Burleson, who claims to have tripped over a stake in the edge of a new cement walk in Flint, has sued the city for $5,000 damages.

The business men who are hunting for promises of acreage for the proposed Owosso sugar factory, are having no trouble, and will have the entire amount pledged in a few days.

A jury was finally secured in the Genesee county court to try C. K. Warner, the next of the alleged blackmail cases to be taken up. Brewer Raquet, the complaining witness, told the same story as that of the previous trials.

John Dinkle was driving a wagon loaded with barrels down the street of Pinckney Monday when his horses started to run and brought up at full speed against a telegraph pole. Dinkle, with the barrels, was thrown high in the air, but was not severely injured.

Soldiers to the Rescue.

Sofia, Nov. 20.—It is reported that Mr. Dickinson, the United States diplomatic agent here, has informed the government of Bulgaria that the abductors of Miss Ellen M. Stone and Mme. Tsilka, with their captives, are concealed in a defile of the Belleritz mountains, near Smotch, district of Bubnitza, and has requested that troops be sent to surround the place and liberate the captives. Both Mr. Dickinson and the Bulgarian foreign office decline to confirm or deny this report. Nevertheless, it is believed that Mr. Dickinson, persuaded of the impossibility of coming to terms with the brigands and relying upon his belief that they will not harm their captives if troops are employed against them, has, after consulting with Washington, decided upon this move. Only eight bandits now guard Miss Stone.

Looks Suspicious for Sherwell.

Evansville, Ind., Nov. 20.—The wife of Wilbur Sherwell, the policeman under arrest charged with the recent murder of two women in this city, has admitted Sherwell had their surry out on the night of the murder, but had enjoined her to deny the fact. The prisoner has employed counsel and will not talk. Rheinhold Pfohl saw a man and a woman in a surry on the night of the murder resembling Sherwell and Miss Renner.

Boy Blown to Atoms.

Alexandria, Ind., Nov. 20.—Charles Ott, a 13-year-old boy, was blown to atoms last evening in a peculiar manner. The boy found a nitro-glycerine can in the rear of his home, and tieing it about his waist, proceeded to beat on his improvised drum. A terrible explosion, which shook the city, followed. Both arms and legs of the boy were blown off and the front part of his head was torn away.

Miners Raising Hob.

Vincennes, Ind., Nov. 20.—Three hundred miners came here during Monday night and early yesterday marched to the shaft of the Protest Hill Coal Mine Co., where non-union miners are employed, and closed the shaft. They destroyed property, assaulted a number if miners, and are still in the vicinity of the mine. The entire city is excited and grave trouble is feared.

Plague is in Cape Town.

Norfolk, Va., Nov. 20.—The British steamer Monmouth, Captain Troop, which arrived here yesterday direct from Cape Town, South Africa, reports the existence of over 800 cases of bubonic plague in the vicinity of Cape Town when she left that port. Up to the time she sailed some 38 deaths from the plague had occurred.

No Sympathy for Boers.

The Hague, Nov. 21.—The administrative council of the court of arbitration decided yesterday that it was incompetent to consider the Boer appeal for intervention.

SEVEN MEN KILLED

Result of an Awful Collision on Santa Fe.

SIXTEEN PERSONS INJURED

Accident Occurs Near Franconia, Ariz., and Is the Result of Probable Carelessness of Trainmen in Obeying Orders.

Los Angeles, Cal., Nov. 21.—A fatal wreck occurred on the Santa Fe railroad, one mile west of Franconia, Ariz., a switch station, 20 miles east of Needles, Cal., early yesterday. Seven trainmen were killed, three passengers and fourteen trainmen injured. Limited trains, east and west bound, crashed together while running at full speed. The eastbound train was drawn by two engines, while the west bound train had but one locomotive. The three engines were crushed and blown to pieces by an explosion, which followed the collision. Both trains were made up of vestibule cars of the heaviest kind and while they stood the terrific shock well and protected the passengers to a great extent, several of the cars took fire at once and burned up. The dining cars, one on each train, one Pullman and two composite cars, were destroyed.

Following is a list of the casualties:

The dead—P. M. Elligott, engineer; P. P. Goldsmith, fireman; E. F. Barnhardt, barber; Walter Davorage, waiter; W. L. Case, fireman; A. H. Armitage, fireman; Sam Brown, waiter.

The bodies of the last three are missing.

R. R. Higgins, conductor westbound train, badly cut and scalded.

J. P. Williams, engineer westbound train, cut and bruised.

L. W. Fair, of Chicago, waiter, bruised.

H. W. Webb, of Chicago, porter, scalded.

Tony Larson, Chicago, second cook, head and legs badly burned.

Harry Letcher, Chicago, porter, badly hurt, cut and bruised.

F. Williams, Chicago, waiter, slightly scalded.

Thomas H. Owen, Chicago, waiter, hands, face and feet cut and scalded.

J. H. Arnold, Chicago, waiter, slightly scalded.

J. W. Bryant, Chicago, waiter, hands and face scalded.

W. L. Franklin, San Francisco, slightly bruised.

Mrs. H. H. Gibben, Oakland, Cal., slightly injured.

The collision is said to have been due to a disregard of orders by the crew of the westbound train, though full particulars on this point are as yet lacking. From all accounts, however, it is gathered that the eastbound train had orders to take the siding at Franconia and await the passing of the westbound flyer, which was running two hours late and trying to make up time. The eastbound train failed to reach the siding, and as the west bound train did not wait for it, the two trains came together without warning and with an awful crash. The bodies of Case and Armitage, firemen of the eastbound train, and Sam Brown, waiter of the opposite train, are missing, and it is believed they were cremated in the flames that followed the collision.

Government is Offended.

Sofia, Nov. 21.—The foreign office here resents the insinuations published abroad that the government is acting in bad faith in the matter of effecting the release of Miss Stone, and explaining its attitude toward Mr. Dickinson, the diplomatic agent here of the United States, affirms its entire readiness to take any action suggested by him. The latest intelligence received here sets forth that the brigands are holding out for a high figure of ransom and it is asserted that they are able to keep their captives as long as this may be necessary.

Negro Homesteaders Need Protection.

Guthrie, O. T., Nov. 21.—Notwithstanding the announcement of U. S. Attorney Horace Speed, that he will have cancelled the homestead entry of every man who makes an attempt to eject a colored homesteader from his claim, complaints of such action against colored men are filed daily with the U. S. Marshall, asking protection for negroes who drew claims in the recent government land lottery. More than 100 colored homesteaders have been driven out of that country.

Strikers to be Dispersed.

Madisonville, Ky., Nov. 21.—County Judge Hall has announced that today he will act upon the sworn proof, which he has been gathering for several days, and will issue an order directing the camp of striking miners at Nortonville to disperse. He says he will not permit the establishment of any more such camps within his jurisdiction. If his order shall not be obeyed promptly he shall call on troops to enforce obedience.

New Constitution for Alabama.

Montgomery, Ala., Nov. 21.—The governor, attorney-general and secretary of state opened and counted the vote on the new constitution yesterday. The result shows a majority of 28,429 for the constitution. The governor will issue his proclamation within a few days, and ten days thereafter the new law will go into effect.

Albion W. F. M. S. at Jackson.

Jackson, Mich., Nov. 21.—The Albion district, Woman's Foreign Missionary society of the M. E. church is holding its thirtieth annual meeting in this city, the sessions closing tonight. Presiding Elder Floyd, of Kalamazoo, preached last evening.

No Flies on the Negro.

Jacksonville, Fla., Nov. 20.—The negroes who have instituted a boycott against the street cars on account of the recent ordinance separating the races on the cars, held a mass meeting and agreed to organize a stock company of 20,000 shares, at $1 a share, to operate a stage coach service throughout the city exclusively for negroes.

TRIES TO COMMIT SUICIDE.

Detroit Woman Cuts Her Throat.

Rochester, Mich., Nov. 21.—Mrs. A. W. Freer, wife of the liveryman, at 24 John R. street, Detroit, made a desperate attempt to commit suicide at her parents' home here Tuesday night, and is in a precarious condition. She cut her throat. Mrs. Freer came out here Monday last. Last night she was heard to arise from her bed and go down stairs. She procured a pail and returned to her room. Her brother, M. S. Van Dedander, heard her moving about. She called to him that someone was trying to get into the house. He went down stairs, and returning found his sister standing over the pail with her throat gashed. He seized her, laid her on the bed and summoned two doctors. They say that her recovery is doubtful. Freer was summoned from Detroit.

MICHIGAN GETS THE BANNER.

National W. C. T. U. Convention Closed Yesterday.

Fort Worth, Tex., Nov. 21.—The twenty-eighth national convention of the W. C. T. U. ended yesterday. The convention has been memorable for the largest attendance of all the national conventions, for the largest amount of money raised and pledged to purposes of the union, and for the greatest enthusiasm shown in the cause of temperance. Michigan was awarded a district banner.

After Michigan's War Claim.

Lansing, Mich., Nov. 21.—Maj. Ralph Stone, private secretary to the late Gov. Pingree, was before the board of state auditors yesterday and explained fully the present status of Michigan's Spanish war claim. He and former Assistant Quartermaster-General McDonald will go to Washington next week to present the claim to the war department. Gov. Bliss, who signed some of the claims will join them a few days later and assist in the work. It consists of $18,000 expended for clothing and equipping the naval reserves and the Thirty-fifth regiment; $20,000 for subsisting the soldiers after they were mustered into the United States service; $17,000 for the care of the sick of the Thirty-third and Thirty-fourth regiments after their return from Cuba, and $12,000 for transporting these men to their homes after their arrival in Michigan. A further claim of $4,000 is for the maintenance of a hospital at Camp Eaton after the troops were mustered into regular service and $3,600 for funeral expenses. The balance of about $13,500 is made up of miscellaneous items.

Accidentally Shoots Himself.

Marshall, Mich., Nov. 21.—William Morris, the 12-year-old son of William Morris, of Fredonia, met with a fatal accident yesterday morning. He was tramping through the woods, and in crossing a ditch on a log, stumbled and fell. As he scrambled up the embankment he pulled his gun after him and the trigger becoming caught, the weapon exploded. The charge caught the youth in the breast, making a great hole through his body and literally tearing his heart into shreds. Death was instantanous.

VINCENT IS WARDEN

Alonzo Vincent, of St. Joseph, the Lucky Candidate.

TWENTY DELEGATES HELPED

Northrup and Hatch, the Defeated Candidates, Were Well Supported, But the Governor's Ballots Went For Vincent.

Lansing, Mich., Nov. 20.—Alonzo Vincent of St. Joseph will succeed the late William Chamberlain as warden of Jackson prison. This result was reached late yesterday afternoon after the full prison board, including Governor Bliss, had considered the matter in executive session for nearly two hours.

For an hour or more preceding this executive session the several candidates and their friends were given hearings. The Vincent men led off with a delegation of nearly 20 in charge of Victor M. Gore of Benton Harbor. Brief speeches in behalf of Vincent were made by Chairman Gore, Congressman Hamilton, L. C. Fyfe and Judge Thomas O'Hara of St. Joseph, and ex-Senator W. W. Potter of Hastings.

Deputy Warden Northrup followed, with ex-Senator John S. Sharp as his chief sponsor, and ex-Warden Hatch closed the engagement, having Assistant Quartermaster-General Avery, Dr. Demay and Joseph Wenhold of Jackson as his backers.

It is understood that on the first ballot Gov. Bliss voted for Vincent, Mr. Quinn for Hatch, and Messrs. Bills and Holmes for Northrup. Very soon thereafter, Mr. Quinn joined Gov. Bliss in his support of Vincent, and the matter stood in that shape until after a short recess Messrs. Bills and Holmes made the selection of Vincent unanimous.

Vaughan of U. of M. Testifies.

Howell, Mich., Nov. 20.—The defense in the Ryan trial began yesterday morning. Dr. Nancrede and Dean Vaughan of the U. of M. were the expert witnesses examined. The production of two vertebrae from the neck of Thomas Fitzsimmons caused Mrs. Fitzsimmons to leave the room much agitated with grief.

Dr. Nancrede testified that such an injury as the testimony described was usually caused by undue bending and twisting the neck. It might be caused by falling from a scaffold, and it is possible that the man walked about after receiving the injury. Two vertebrae were shown Dr. Nancrede, who said it was highly improbable that such an injury could have been produced by a blow from a quart whisky bottle or from a neck yoke or a club, such as shown the witness.

TO PRISON FOR LIFE

Is the Sentence of Detzlaff, of Menominee.

OTHER MURDER CASES CLOSING

Howell, Mich., Nov. 21.—Both sides have rested and the Ryan trial is up to the attorneys. The severe cross-examination of James Ryan was completed last evening. He told a straight story and stuck to it, no part of his direct testimany being shaken.

He testified that, after leaving his farm about 4 o'clock, he and Denehy went to Hamburg and put out their horse about 4:30. They went to the saloon and played pedro until supper time, going to bed about 7:30. Ryan says he was awakened and came down to a lunch about midnight, and stayed at Hamburg to complete some sales for the McCormack Co. the next day. The attorneys have 10 hours to argue the matter and the case will go to the jury late Friday.

Menominee, Mich., Nov. 21.—Judge Stone yesterday sentenced Joseph Detzlaff to life imprisonment at the Michigan state prison in Marquette for the murder of his wife and unborn child on Sept. 22, 1901. The prisoner showed no signs of emotion and when the jury brought in their verdict he said, "Thank you, gentlemen."

Thirteen witnesses were examined, but four sessions of court being held. The jury returned its verdict in 35 minutes.

When asked if he had anything to say, the prisoner said:

"My wife has come and sat by my side on the bed since I have been in jail five times. She said to me, 'If you are convicted, get a rope and kill yourself, then come over and be happy with me.'

"I am going to do it."

Charlotte, Mich., Nov. 21.—The closing arguments in the Burchfield murder trial commenced at 3 oclock yesterday afternoon. Prosecuting Attorney Dann opened for the prosecution, followed by Attorney Davids, who spoke for the defense. An adjournment was taken until today, when Assistant Dean will continue the arguments. The jury will get the case about noon.

Yesterday morning Mina Burchfield, the prisoner's mother, took the stand, and she, followed by Burchfield's sister, Clara, testified to his good character. Burchfield himself then denied that he was angry with Hickey, at whom he threw the bottle, and said he did not see Green in the doorway at the time, although considerable testimony has been introduced to show that Green had been there for some time prior to the throwing of the bottle.

TWO CHILDREN CREMATED.

Frank Stiven's Pomona Home Is Desolate.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Nov. 21.—The house of Frank Stiven, in Pomona, near Cadillac, burned last night and two children, aged 8 and 10, perished in the flames. Their grandmother was saved through a window.

Mammoth Furniture Trust.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Nov. 21.—Furniture men all over the country will be keenly interested in the work being done here yesterday to push the organization of a furniture trust. This project has been in the air for several months, but C. C. Loring is here in conference with the representatives of local factories with a view to organizing not a mere local trust, but effecting the oragnization of all case goods manufacturers in the United States.

A Big Barbecue.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Nov. 21.—Students with an unusual gift in the appetite line are saving up for the mammoth demonstration with which the present football season is to be topped off. The plan is no less than a mammoth barbecue at which whole animals are to be roasted and served to the mob of undergraduates that will turn out to the feast.

Bonine Jury All White.

Washington, Nov. 21.—The color line has been drawn in Mrs. Bonine's trial. Both prosecution and defense have agreed that no colored man shall be on the jury, because it is not desired to have colored men pass on questions that may mean death or life imprisonment to a white woman. A jury was finally drawn at 3 o'clock yesterday.

The Costliest Painting.

The Duke of Marlborough is believed to be the possessor of the costliest painting in the world, which was at one time the property of the first Duke of Marlborough. The picture is known as the "Blenheim Madonna," painted by Raphael in 1507 and now valued at no less than £70,000. It is eight feet high and represents the Madonna and Child seated on a throne, with a figure of St. John the Baptist on the left and that of St. Nicholas of Bari on the right. Its almost fabulous value is due to the fact that it is one of the best preserved of the artist's works in existence.

Spreads Like Wildfire

When things are "the best" they become "the best selling." Abraham Hare, a leading druggist, of Belleville, O., writes: "Electric Bitters are the best selling bitters I have handled in 20 years." You know why? Most diseases begin in disorders of stomach, liver kidneys, bowels, blood and nerves. Electric Bitters tones up the stomach, regulates liver, kidneys and bowels, purifies the blood, strengthens the nerves, hence cures multitudes of maladies. It builds up the entire system. Puts new life and vigor into any weak, sickly, rundown man or woman. Price 50 cents. Sold by C. A. Wright, druggist.

AT SEA.

Oh, we go down to sea in ships,
But Hope remains behind,
And Love, with laughter on his lips,
And Peace, of passive mind,
While out across the deeps of night,
With lifted sails of prayer,
We voyage off in quest of light
Nor find it anywhere.

O thou who wroughtest earth and sea,
Yet keepest from our eyes
The shores of an eternity
In calms of paradise,
Blow back upon our foolish quest
With all the driving rain
Of blinding tears and wild unrest
And waft us home again.

A CIVIL ENGINEER WANTED.

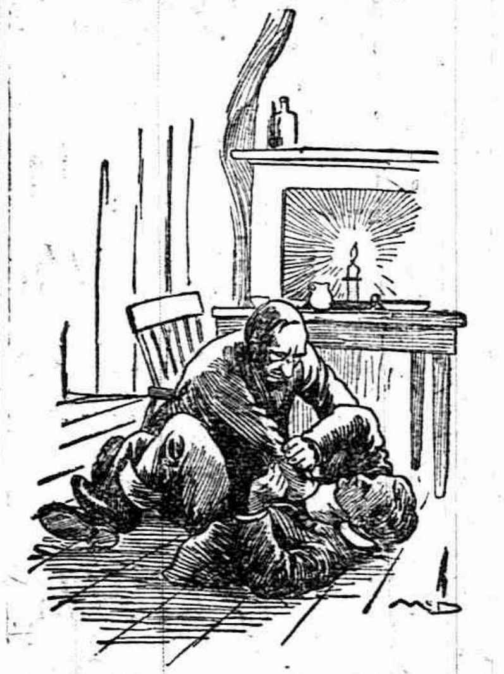
BY M. QUAD..............

Copyright, 1901, by C. B. Lewis.

One morning in my bachelor apartments in London I read the following advertisement in my newspaper:

"The undersigned desires the services of a competent civil engineer for several days in a rather strange enterprise and promises a most liberal reward. He must be a man who can keep a secret. Address ——."

I was a competent civil engineer and just then out of employment. I was a man who could keep a secret. I was therefore naturally interested in the advertisement. It might possibly be some job which would get me into trouble with the law, but if so I had only to decline to take hold of it after an interview. I was inclined to believe that some land or mine owner wanted a private and secret survey made for his own satisfaction, as is often the case. It is sometimes the case that where two neighbors quarrel one of them builds a house or barn on what he believes to be his line, but which is found to trespass by a few inches. I could see a dozen good reasons why the person should advertise as he did, and I hastened to answer him and post the letter. He gave his address as the office of the newspaper, but after four or five days I received a call from him in person. He gave me his name as James Bennett and his address as London and left me to infer that he was a man of leisure.



HE ATTACKED ME AND THREW ME TO THE FLOOR.

I was not exactly pleased with Mr. Bennett's personal appearance. He was a tall, dark faced man of troubled countenance. His eyes had a furtive look, and he was nervous and ill at ease. Had I met him while traveling I should have been inclined to look upon him with suspicion. He told a straight enough story, however, though a rather queer one. Being left an orphan at the age of 12 years, he had been brought up by an uncle living in Hertford county. He had always been given to understand that he would be his uncle's heir, and he was sure that a will had been made to that effect, but three years previous to his call on me the uncle had passed away, no will had been found, and the property had gone to the next of kin. While the uncle was rich, he was also an eccentric. Being a single man and living almost alone, he had been almost a hermit. The house he had occupied was a rambling old structure at best and now that it had been untenanted for several years was in a bad state. What Mr. Bennett had come to believe was that the will was concealed in the old house. He had searched and searched without avail, and he wanted my assistance for a new search. There might be secret closets he had passed over. If I would give him my faithful services for three days, he would pay me £25. If the will was found, he would present me with £200 more. I was to say nothing of my quest, make my appearance at the old house on a certain date, and he would assist in the search.

I didn't like Bennett's personal appearance and actions, as I have said, but there was nothing out of the way with his story, and I was glad to accept his offer. It would be combining romance with business to come upon the hidden will and restore the ousted heir to his own. His caution to me to make my way alone from the nearest station without asking or answering questions might have seemed queer but for the fact that we would both be trespassers while making the search. I had not a single suspicion. I was to arrive by a train which would enable me after a walk of three miles to arrive at the old house at dark, and he would have provisions at hand and fix up the best lodgings he could. I was especially warned not to betray my destination to any one I happened to meet en route, and I was to bring no baggage.

All these things seemed all right to me at the time. I reached the station by the train named, but found the distance to the house to be five miles instead of three. This brought about my arrival quite a spell after dark, and Bennett was waiting for me a quarter of a mile up the road. The first question he asked was if any one had spoken to me, and when I assured him that even the people at the station did not know where I was bound for he was somewhat elated. I found he had provisions for a cold lunch, but nothing very appetizing, while we must sleep on the bare boards of the family sitting room. It was while eating supper that I noticed a wild, strange look in the man's face and began to doubt him. He was restless and distrait and watched me in a furtive way, and it wasn't long before I felt that he had some sinister designs in luring me to the lonely old house. I put a bold face on the matter and demanded an explanation, and at that he attacked me and threw me to the floor. From his savage manner I believed he was going to murder me outright, but after growling in his throat like a wolf he lifted me up and shoved me into a closet and bolted the stout door on me. Of course I protested, argued and struggled, but without avail. I heard him laughing to himself after he had locked me in, but I did not hear him leave the house. Fifty times during the night I kicked on the door and called out, but I got no answer. Next morning, still failing to arouse him, I began to cut at the door with my pocketknife. It was of oak and my task was a hard one. It was almost night when I reached up and slid back the bolt, and as soon as out I found the house deserted and lost no time in getting away myself.

I went straight to the police with my story, and who do you think the man proved to be? No more or less than a lunatic who had escaped from an asylum three months before. He was under another name, lived far from the address he had given me, and his mania was the fear of starvation. Before going to the asylum he had locked up two different people in tenantless houses to see how long they could live without food or drink, and my capture was a third experiment in that line. I bore him no ill will, of course, but insisted that he be returned to the asylum, and I believe he is living today. In that old house, far from help and a place never visited, he would have wrought my death by inches but for my pocketknife, and months or years might have passed before my corpse was ever found.

Where Eloquence Is Wasted.

It might have been supposed that Addison, the most polished writer of our Augustan age; that Burke, with his versatile intellect and exuberant eloquence; that Mackintosh, with his almost encyclopedic learning, or that Jekyll, who had set a hundred dinner tables in a roar, would one and all have achieved conspicuous success in the house of commons.

But, as Macaulay has pointed out, exactly the reverse was the case. Their speeches produced no effect. They wearied and bewildered their audience. And their rising to speak was too often the signal for a general exodus; in fact, as was said of Burke, they acted as a dinner bell. Even Macaulay himself, though on two occasions his speeches changed the fate of a division, was in no sense of the word an orator or even a great debater. His voice was too shrill and monotonous, and he poured out a torrent of words with such headlong fluency as to confuse his hearers as well as to baffle the quickest of parliamentary reporters. Bulwer Lytton, again, could recite an admirable essay, but his delivery was bad, and the seesaw gestures which accompanied his speech were as "grotesque as those of an old fashioned postboy."

In our own generation no two men probably have had more highly cultivated minds than John Stuart Mill and Mr. John Morley, but as far as their parliamentary utterances go their names are "writ in water."—Blackwood's.

Tit For Tat.

The diners at a popular New York restaurant are said to have had the privilege of witnessing an amusing little incident one evening not long ago.

An Anglicized young man seated himself at a table at which there was only one other person, a writer well known throughout the country, but evidently a stranger to the newcomer.

The writer is a man whose dress is always fastidiously neat, but by no means fashionable in cut or expensive in material. When the young man took his seat, the writer glanced up at him and, seeing that it was no one whom he knew, returned to his study of the bill of fare.

The young man languidly placed his monocle in his eye, and, screwing up his face to keep the glass in position, treated the other guest at the table to a prolonged stare.

The stare ended abruptly, however, for suddenly the writer looked up. Quick as thought he seized an empty tumbler and, applying it to his right eye, stared gravely through its bottom at his vis-a-vis.

The monocle was dropped in a very few seconds, and then the tumbler was replaced on the table. But the young Anglomaniac's face was crimson, while that of the writer remained grave and unmoved, and through the dining room rustled the sound of something that suggested repressed merriment.

Skipped the Hard Words.

"While I was in practice," said Judge Gates of Kansas City, "I was before the supreme court on one occasion. While waiting for my case to be called I listened to a lawyer from the southeastern part of the state arguing his case. He was at least 6 feet 7 inches tall and had a voice so deep that when he spoke it seemed like the rumbling of Niagara. 'I will read,' he said, 'from a work with which your honors are no doubt familiar—Blackstone.'

"The judges did not smile, although there was a decided twinkle in their eyes as they glanced at each other. The man read a few lines and then said: 'There is reference here, your honors, to a footnote by Lord Granville. I would have your honors pay particular attention to this note because it is by Lord Granville.'

"The judges waited expectantly. The lawyer held the book in front of him, glanced at it two or three times and then coughed as many times in rather an embarrassed manner. Everybody waited for several seconds. Finally he said: 'Your honors, I see on closer inspection that this footnote is in Latin, so I reckon I'd better skip that.'"

Her Chef From Paris.

"An American woman," says the Boston Journal, "who lived in Paris was famous for her cook. Her dinners were popular and celebrated, and the conversation was largely a tribute to the chef. The day came when she should return to the United States. Could the cook be persuaded to go with her? 'What! Leave Paris? Never!' But she offered him a salary that was incredibly, preposterously high, and he went with her.

"She had hardly settled her house when she gave a dinner party that she hoped would be sensational. Not one dish was fit to be eaten. The hostess, almost hysterical, after the gloomy meal was over rushed to the kitchen to find out whether the cook's art was a matter of Parisian atmosphere, and then, and only then, she discovered that her famous chef had never cooked a dinner for her in Paris; that he had got it all from a world famous boulevard restaurant."

We do not believe that any one who makes it a practice to go around and tell people what they should be thankful for is ever liked.—Atchison Globe.

Her Brilliant Inspiration.

That the proverbial absentminded professor is sometimes ably abetted by his wife is illustrated by a story told of Professor Bunsen. One evening about the usual hour for retiring he took it into his head to run over to the club just as he and madam were returning from an evening call.

"But," said the lady, "I must have the front door locked before I retire."

This emergency staggered the professor, and as he looked bewildered at his wife the lady, seized with an inspiration, continued:

"I'll go in and lock the door and throw you the key from the window."

This programme was carried out, and when he reached the club the professor related the incident to a friend as evidence of his wife's unusual sagacity.

The friend greeted the story with a roar of laughter.

"And why, my dear professor," he said, "did you not simply admit your wife, lock the door from the outside and come away?"

"True," ejaculated the learned man of science; "we never thought of that."

The climax of the incident was reached an hour later when, returning home, the professor discovered that the lady in her excitement had thrown out the wrong key.

Not a Rosy Dreamer.

"What would you do if you had a billion dollars?"

"Oh," answered the languid man, "I don't see why I should expect to prove any exception to the rule. I would probably go to one of the usual extremes and either buy yachts or else walk to save car fare."—Washington Star

IMPORTANT.

Twelve townships were represented by supervisors, clerks and health officers at the meeting held at Adrian Monday afternoon, pursuant to call issued by Supervisor Hayden, to consider ways and means to prevent the spread of the cholera, or whatever name may be given to the disease that is working such havoc among the hogs in this section of the county.

Sup. Lindsley, of Clinton, was made chairman, and F. B. Bauer, of Tecumsoh, secretary. After thoroughly discussing the subject, a committee of five was appointed, consisting of Drs. Catlin, of Tecumseh, Morden, of Macon, Nixon, of Raisin, Blatchford, of Clinton, and Westgate, of Adrian township, to draft resolutions, which were adopted as follows:

It is recommended that the township boards of health pass the following resolutions:

The health officers, or any member of the township board be empowered to quarantine any sick hogs within their township, or that have been exposed, allowing none to be removed, or brought on the premises. The quarantine shall continue until all sick hogs fully recover and the premises are disinfected; and all diseased hogs be kept in pens or yards separate from other animals; and that all droppings or bedding of all quarantined hogs be burned.

We also recommend that one man have the care and feeding of same; that they wear rubber boots, to be removed after attending to same; that all other persons remain away from the pen; that all pens shall be kept clean, the floors to be sprinkled with ashes and lime, and the hogs to be given plenty of fresh water and unfermented food; and that all dead hogs be burned.

INSTANTLY KILLED

WABASH FAST TRAIN

While unloading Beans at the Depot

Richard Hope, aged 55, a well to do farmer living in the village of Belleville and owning a farm a short distance out was unloading beans at the station Tuesday morning, when the fast Wabash train came in. He was driving a span of colts, which became unmanageable and started to run along the road, which for forty rods parallels the track and then crosses it. They plunged across the track and were struck square by the train. The driver and both horses were instantly killed and the wagon badly demolished.

Mr. Hope was terribly mangled, one leg being cut off entirely, the scalp taken off the back of his head and his face disfigured. A coronor viewed the remains and an inquest was held. Mr. Hope leaves a widow and one daughter, an aged mother, who resides in Tecumseh with her daughter, Mrs. M. A. Freeman. The news of the death of her only son comes with crushing force to the mother. Mrs. M. A Freeman and J. J. Freeman went to Belleville to attend the funeral.

Horse and Cattle Feed.

Recent scientific tests by expert feeders at the experiment stations show the surprisingly high feeding value of wheat bran and middlings.

Bran may be fed to all classes of horses at rest with excellent results, because of the large amount of protein and mineral matter it contains. In the case of work horses a smaller amount of bran may be fed with corn or middlings or both. Corn meal alone is a sodden substance and should be diluted with something of a light character. Bran is desirable on account of its lightness and cooling effect, as well as for the protein and mineral matter. The tests prove that bran and middlings are of equal worth to oats for feeding horses.

Wheat bran contains 12.5 per cent of protein, middlings 12.8 per cent, corn 7.9 per cent.

Bran is par excellence a leading feed for the dairy, furnishing the qualities that are so much needed in the formation of milk.

The danger from overfeeding bran is exceedingly small, while in the case of other feeding stuffs the eye of the feeder must be constantly watchful. Extensive feeding trials, with a large number of animals(447) were recently made. The conclusion of the experts, as stated, was that wheat bran is equal in feeding value to a mixture of barley and oats. In other tests middlings were substituted for mixed grains, a slightly larger milk yield being obtained thereby.

At the Missouri Agricultural college, trials of middlings with corn proved the former superior. The comments of the investigator are as follows. "The economy of shipstuff (middlings) compared with corn has been noted by me every year for several years, the figures of which are as 108 to 100." The so called concentrated commercial feeding stuffs are often adulterated with cheap material, and at their best have a tendency to produce disorders of digestion. They are not to be compared with the wholesome feeds above referred to. Milk is often impaired in quality by the use of these commercial feeds. The following notice from the Michigan Condensed Milk works, explains itself:

"TO OUR PATRON."

Howell, Mich., Oct. 6, 1900.

"Please take notice that, from and after this date, no gluten meal or gluten feed (so called) can be fed by you to cows from which you wish to sell us milk, as our company is convinced that milk from such feeding is injurious to our business. Yours truly,

Michigan Condensed Milk Co.,
E. P. Gregory, Supt."

LITERARY NOTES

As we come toward the Christmas holidays, larger space in the magazine is given to fiction. The Cosmopolitan includes a tragic story of the Mexican foot-hills by Thomas A. Janvier, a very clever society story by Carolyn Wells, one of the old French Romances by Richard Le Gallienne, an unusually interesting Indian narrative by H. T. George and a wierd story by S. R. Crockett.

The leading features of Modern Culture for November are "Emma Goldman and the Cleveland Anarchists," an account from an eye witness of the meeting of Cleveland Anarchists at which the brain of Leon Czolgosz was fired by Emma Goldman's speech; Husbands as Portrayed by Women Novelists by Nina R. Allen; Glimpses of India (Illus.) by Bella Hicks Hassett.

"Among the Dunkers" by Nelson Lloyd, gives the first adequate account of the picturesque lives and primitive worship of this strange people, identified with one of the most beautiful valleys of Pennsylvania. For years they have preserved the simple ways of worship and ceremonies of the founder of the sect, including a belief in omens and the services of the powwow doctor. Mr. G. W. Peters has made a number of illustrations from actual scenes.—November Scribner's.

The November Century—in many respects an unusually striking number—will begin the magazine's thirty-second year, which is to be a Year of American Humor. A group of humorous stories, poems, etc., including "Two Little Tales" by Mark Twain, "More Animals" by Oliver Herford, and prose and verse by Carolyn Wells, Paul Dunbar and other well known humorists.

Steamship Cuba Stranded.

Escanaba, November, 20—The wrecking tug Tomlinson was ordered to the release of the steamer Cuba, which is stranded on Whaleback shoal in the middle of Green Bay. The condition of the steamer is not known.—Detroit Free Press. This despatch about the Cuba seems singular, as the people from Tecumseh who went to Montreal, were holding a little reunion of their trip on this boat the same evening. It is to be hoped the old boat will pull through alright.

The Indian and the Northwest.

A handsomely illustrated book just issued, bound in cloth and containing 115 pages of interesting historical data relating to the settlement of the great Northwest, with fine half-tone engravings of Black Hawk, Sitting Bull, Red Cloud and other noted chiefs; Custer's battleground and ten colored map plates showing location of the various tribes dating back to 1600. A careful review of the book impresses one that it is a valued contribution to the history of these early pioneers and a copy should be in every library. Price 50 cents per copy. Mailed postage prepaid upon receipt of this amount by W. B. Kniskern, 22 Fifth avenue, Chicago, Ill.

The Water Carnivora.

The number of carnivorous creatures found in the water seems out of all proportion to the usual order of nature, but this is perhaps because the minute, almost invisible creatures of which the rivers and ponds are full and which are the main food of the smaller water carnivora, live mainly on decaying vegetable substance, which is practically converted and condensed into microscopical animals before these become in turn the food of others.

It is as if all the trees and grass on land were first eaten by locusts or white ants and the locusts and white ants were then eaten by semicarnivorous cows and sheep, which were in turn eaten by true carnivora. The water weeds, both when living and decaying, are eaten by the entomostraca, the entomostraca are eaten by the larvæ of insects, the perfect insects are eaten by the fish and the fish are eaten by men, otters and birds.

Thus we eat the products of the water plants at four removes in a fish, while we eat that of the grass or turnips only in the secondary form—beef or mutton.

Fish That Go Forty Miles an Hour.

Few of us have an accurate idea of the rate at which fish swim. When we say that a person is "as fast as a porpoise" we hardly associate a quick rate of swimming with that individual, yet he and everybody else would like to be able to get through the water as rapidly. Porpoises have been seen to dart round and round a steamer traveling seventeen miles an hour, thus proving their capacity to swim at a greater rate than that.

The dolphin may be placed on a level with the porpoise, but the bonito has occasionally been known to approach forty miles for short distances.

Herrings, in shoals, move steadily at a rate between ten and twelve miles; mackerel swim much faster, and both trout and salmon go at a rapid pace when migrating up a stream for spawning.

Whales are not fish in the scientific sense, but it is interesting to note that these monsters swim at a rate of sixteen miles an hour when excited, although their ordinary speed is estimated at between four and five miles.

An Advanced Course.

"Oh, Mr. Johns," exclaimed Miss Gush; "I heard you talking to papa about plants, and I do so want to talk to you, for, you know, I am very interested in botany. I like all kinds of plants and flowers, as, of course, you do, too, Mr. Johns; but what varieties of plants are you particularly interested in?"

"The plants which I am most interested in," replied Mr. Johns, "are machinery plants."

Miss Gush looked mystified for a moment, but soon brightened up, remarking:

"I haven't got so far as that yet."—London Tit-Bits.

A SUDDEN ATTACK

Causes Surrender of Colon to the Liberals.

U. S. BOAT LANDS TROOPS

Government Feared Transportation Across the Isthmus Would Be Suspended—Fighting is Anticipated—Troops Will Protect Railroad.

Colon, Columbia, Nov. 21.—Liberals made an unexpected attack on Colon at 8 o'clock Tuesday night. The government was not prepared and there was little resistance. After some fighting in front of the Cuartel and in certain streets for an hour and a half the Liberals gained possession of all the public offices and the town of Colon.

The perfect, Guardia, is a prisoner. Over 12 men were killed and about 30 men were wounded.

Washington, Nov. 21.—The confirmation of the reported capture of Colon by the Colombian Liberals caused a decided commotion in the state and navy departments yesterday. There were long conferences between Secretary Long and Admiral Crowninshield, and between the admiral and Acting Secretary of State Dr. Hill. Later the two last named went over to the white house and saw President Roosevelt.

The governor decided to take no chances, however, and Consul General Gudger was directed to notify all parties who are engaged in molesting or interfering with free transit across the isthmus that such interference must cease.

Capt. Perry, commander of the United States battleship Iowa, now lying at Panama, was cabled by Secretary Long to land marines if necessary for the protection of free transit across the isthmus in accordance of the treaty rights and obligations of the United States. At the same time Capt. Perry was enjoined to avoid bloodshed if possible.

Meanwhile news came that Commander McCrea of the Machias, which is now lying at Colon, had anticipated this instruction from the navy department by landing a force of blue jackets at Colon and occupying the railway station.

Later dispatches reveal that no fighting had occurred at Panama, that everything was quiet, and that the city was still in the hands of the government.

The liberals are busy raising reinforcements locally. They are reported to have several hundred men at different railroad stations between Colon and Panama.

Servian Queen Reported Assassinated.

Vienna, Nov 21.—An unofficial rumor reached Vienna that Queen Draga has been shot at in the streets of Belgrade. The Neue Freie Presse and other Vienna papers publish various rumors, one declaring that the Servian queen was assassinated, another that she was wounded and a third that she committed suicide. Rumors from other sources deny the statement that Queen Draga was killed and assert that the rumor of her death was caused by an hysterical scene with King Alexandria There is no reliable information on the subject here, but it is generally believed a serious crisis exists.

Roosevelt Against the Chinese.

Washington, Nov. 21.—President Roosevelt in his message to congress will not only recommend the re-enactment of the Chinese exclusion act, but will go farther and recommend that it be strengthened to increase its efficiency. The president gave this information today to Representative Needham, of California, who talked with him upon the subject.

Shot Husband in Self Defense.

Youngstown, O., Nov. 21.—Mrs. Ann Allen, charged with the murder of her husband, was placed on the witness stand yesterday by the defense and admitted the shooting, but claimed she acted entirely in self defense. Her testimony was to the effect that her husband had threatened to shoot her and had pointed a revolver directly at her, when she shot him.

Bald Through Fright.

The recent case of a boy who became bald through fright has been discussed by some people who do not believe it possible. But other cases have occurred. Dr. Pozzi, a Paris physician, once treated a fashionable woman who had been frightened by spending a night in a lonely country villa evading the attacks of her husband, who had been seized with violent hydrophobia. When rescue came, she dropped paralyzed, and during the next few days every hair of her head fell out.—London Standard.

Eskimo Wrestling.

Next to gambling the Eskimo men like to wrestle. The usual way of doing this is a test rather of strength than skill. The wrestlers sit down on the floor or in any convenient place side by side and facing in opposite directions, say, with right elbows touching. Then they lock arms, and each strives to straighten out the other's arm.

Hats in the House of Commons.

Speaker Denison if he saw a member wear any unwonted headgear other than the regulation tall hat would send for him and point out the irregularity. In these days a billycock hat has frequently been seen in one particular quarter of the house, and the innovation is tolerated. What Speaker Denison would have said or thought if he had seen a few straw hats in the extremely hot weather of last session the writer cannot venture even to conjecture.

A reference to hats recalls the curious custom which prevails, that when a member wishes to interpose with a point of order after the question has been put from the chair he must speak "covered." On one occasion Mr. Gladstone wished to speak in this way, and, as he never brought a hat into the house, he was obliged hastily to borrow a hat. It happened that the hat which he borrowed belonged to his then solicitor general, Sir F. Herschell (afterward the lord chancellor), and it proved to be far too small for Mr. Gladstone's head. He was unable for some time to address the House owing to the shouts of laughter which his appearance called forth.—Good Words.

Not Visible to the Naked Eye.

"What," asked the proud young mamma, "do you think of the baby's features?"

Her big, coarse brother looked down at the precious little innocent for a moment and then asked:

"Where are they?"—Chicago Times-Herald.

WHAT'S IN A NAME.

Many Times Nothing, Sometimes a Fund of Knowledge.

It's a good old saying, and a true one too, "Know all men by their works." The public have been imposed upon so many times by unscrupulous claims made for selfish means of profit, they look for something more substantial; they ask for deeds. The little conqueror has earned the reputation made in Michigan and no imposter can steal it. From north to south, from east to west, in every city, town and hamlet in the state, people stand ready to testify to merit. Gratitude for comfort brought to thousands of homes brings emphatic rejoicings and words of praise the like of which has not been equaled in modern times. Is it a wonder the name Doan is a familiar one in every household? Is it surprising the public appreciate Doan's Kidney Pills and will not be led astray by the ingenious efforts of would be competitors? A Detroit citizen tells here why the name Doan is dear to him:

Mr. R. N. Elliott, of 143 High St., Detroit says: "My knowledge of Doan's Kidney Pills dates back to five years ago. I was then living in the town where Dr. Doan was located. I was tortured with kidney troubles and inflammatory rheumatism. The doctor prescribed the pills for me which have since become so justly famous. Their use quickly eliminated the uric acid from my system and with its departure came the cure of my kidney troubles. It took but a few boxes to accomplish this end and I feel that I owe Dr. Doan an everlasting debt of gratitude for prescribing such a valuable remedy. I have taken great pleasure in recommending this medicine to a number of my friends. I always keep a box of these pills on hand so that should I take a severe cold and feel that it is settling on my kidneys a few doses of Doan's Kidney Pills relieves all apprehension.'

Women And Jewels.

Jewels, candy, flowers, man—that is the order of woman's preferences. Jewels form a magnet of mighty power to the average woman. Even that greatest of all jewels, health, is often ruined in the strenuous efforts to make or save the money to purchase them. If a woman will risk her health to get a coveted gem then let her fortify herself against the insiduous consequences of coughs, colds and bronchial affections by the regular use of Dr. Boschee's German Syrup. It will promptly arrest consumption in its early stages and heal the affected lungs and bronchial tubes and drive the dread disease from the system. It is not a cure all, but it is a certain cure for coughs, colds and all bronchial troubles. You can get Dr. G. G. Green's reliable remedies at J. J. Orr's. Get Green's Special Almanac.

A Clara Morris Story.

"The play had twice failed in Paris, which was, to say the least, discouraging. But after brief reflection I concluded I would risk it, and then, just by way of encouragement, Mr. Cazauran declared that all my acquired skill and natural power of expressing emotion would prove useless to me, that 'Miss Multon' was to be my Waterloo, and to all anxious and surprised 'Whys?' he sapiently made answer, 'No children.' His argument was that, not being a mother in reality, I could not be one in imagination.

"Always lacking in self confidence, these words made my heart sink, but the ever ready jest came bravely to the fore to hide my hurt from the public eye, and at the next rehearsal I shook my head mournfully and remarked to the little man: 'Bad—bad! Miss Cushman must be a very bad Lady Macbeth. I don't want to see her!'

"'What!' he exclaimed. 'Cushman not play Lady Macbeth! For heaven's sake, why not?'

"'No murderess!' I declared, with an air of authority recognized by those about me as a fair copy of his own. 'If Miss Cushman is not a murderess, pray how can she act Lady Macbeth, who is?'"

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflamation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surface.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

SOME LOST SECRETS.

FAMOUS PROCESSES THAT WERE KNOWN TO THE ANCIENTS.

Things That Our Forefathers Were Able to Do That We Now Find Well Nigh Impossible—Cement of the Greeks and Romans.

Taking into consideration the marvelous strides we have made in almost every branch of knowledge during the last 200 or 300 years, it seems exceedingly strange that our forefathers should have been able to do things which we find impossible and that we cannot discover secrets which were almost common knowledge hundreds of years ago. But despite the fact that the average modern man knows more than did the learned men of long ago, there are mysteries of knowledge and science which our most advanced scientists cannot solve.

Thousands of years ago, for instance, the Egyptians used to embalm the bodies of their dead kings and nobility so perfectly that the bodies are in wonderful preservation today, as may be seen at the British museum. Clever as we are in this age, we cannot do the same. The valuable secret is lost and modern science cannot recover the lost knowledge. We can, of course, and we do embalm bodies, but only for temporary preservation and, comparatively speaking, in a most unsatisfactory manner. Bodies which are embalmed nowadays will not be preserved for more than a few days at most. Very many of the bodies the Egyptians embalmed before the birth of Christ are still so perfect that the lines of their faces are still as clearly marked as when they were first embalmed.

Sheffield turns out the finest, hardest and most perfect steel the world produces, but even Sheffield cannot produce a sword blade to compare with those the Saracens made and used hundreds of years ago, and the Saracens never possessed the machinery we have or had the advantage of knowing so much about metals as we are supposed to know. A huge fortune awaits the man who discovers the secret which enabled the Saracens to make sword blades so keen and hard that they could cut in two most of the swords used today.

There are a dozen different methods of making artificial diamonds, but none of the stones produced by these methods can compare with those made of old French paste, the secret of which is lost. So perfect were paste diamonds that it was difficult for even a person with expert knowledge of diamonds to tell that they were artificially produced, whereas most of the modern artificial diamonds can easily be detected, and their durability is nothing like so great as the old paste diamonds.

Probably not one out of every ten thousand buildings standing in all parts of the world, and built by modern masons, will still be standing 500 years hence. We do not know how to put stones and bricks together as the ancients did, and consequently the buildings we raise nowadays are really mere temporary structures and will be in ruins when the ancient buildings of Greece and Italy, which were built thousands of years ago, are in as good condition as they are now. The secret is not in the bricks or the stone, but in the cement and mortar, neither of which essentials can we make as the ancients made them.

In modern buildings the cement and mortar are the weakest points; in buildings which the Romans and Greeks raised thousands of years ago the cement and mortar are the strongest points and hold good while the very stones they bind together crumble away with age. We cannot, with all our science, make such cement and mortar, and therefore we cannot build such buildings as the ancients raised.

Chemistry, one might imagine, is the science which has, perhaps, made the greatest strides. Yet modern chemists cannot compound such dyes as were commonly used when the great nations of today were still unborn. Now and again it happens that searchers after antiquities come across fragments of fabrics which were dyed thousands of years ago, and they are astonished by the wonderful richness of the colors of the cloths, which, despite their age, are brighter and purer than anything we can produce.

Modern artists buy their colors ready made and spend large sums on pigments with which to color their canvases. The pictures of modern artists will be colorless when many of the works of ancient masters are as bright as they are today. Just as the secret of dyeing has been lost, so has the secret of preserving the colors of artists' paints. Yet the secret was known to every ancient artist, for they all mixed their own colors.

How to make durable ink is another great secret we have lost. Look at any letter five or ten years old and you will probably notice that the writing has faded to a brown color and is very indistinct. Go to any big museum and you will find ancient MSS., the writing of which is as black and distinct as if the MSS. were written the day before yesterday.

The secret of glass blowing and tinting is not yet entirely lost. There are still a few men who can produce glass work equal to the things of this kind which the ancients turned out hundreds of years ago. But the average glass manufacturer cannot produce anything that could at all compare with some of the commoner articles the Egyptians, and later, the founders of Venice, manufactured, and those who still hold the ancient secret guard it so closely that it will probably die with them and be added to the long list of things in which our ancestors beat us hollow.—Exchange.

In place of wedding cake in Holland wedding sweets are given—"bruidzuikers," they are called. They are handed round by children and are served in flower trimmed baskets.

Thinking It Over.

"Do you think you will marry that titled gentleman from abroad?"

"I haven't quite decided," answered the American heiress. "I am not sure I can support him in the style to which his ancestors were accustomed."—Exchange.

An Informal Introduction.

When Mark Twain lived in Buffalo, he made the acquaintance of some neighbors under peculiar circumstances. Emerging from his house one morning, he saw something which made him run across the street and remark to the people who were gathered on the veranda:

"My name is Clemens. My wife and I have been intending to call on you and make your acquaintance. We owe you an apology for not doing it before now. I beg your pardon for intruding on you in this informal manner and at this time of day, but your house is on fire!"

THE PEOPLE KNEW HIM.

(Benson's Plaster is Pain's Master.)

George Washington made and sold flour, and every barrel of flour in the market branded "G. Washington, Mount Vernon," sold without delay. No question was ever raised as to quality or weight.

Benson's Porous Plaster sells on its reputation everywhere. All the buyer wants to be certain of is that the plaster offered him really is Benson's, and not a worthless imitation of it or substitute for it.

A plaster is the best form of external remedy, and Benson's is the best plaster; 5,000 physicians and druggists, and a multitude of people no man can number, have settled that. "You can trust it," they say.

Coughs, colds, lame back, lumbago, muscular stiffness and rheumatism, troubles of the liver and kidneys, influenza or grip, pneumonia, and all other diseases open to external treatment, are at once relieved and cured by Benson's Plaster.

Do not assume that Belladonna, Capsicum or Strengthening plasters are "just as good as" Benson's. They are vastly inferior.—No other plaster is as good as Benson's.

In competition with the best-known plasters of Europe and America, Benson's have received fifty-five highest awards.

The Lost Bargain.

It is Monday morning. Down the street hurries a stylishly dressed woman.

Why does she hasten so? Why that look of intense excitement in her eyes? Is she going to the office of her lawyer, there to hear the will of her favorite uncle read? Or is she hastening to the bedside of the dying? No; none of these. She pulls a newspaper out of her pocket and reads again the announcement of the wonderful bargains to be had at the department store.

She rushes frantically into the store. Yes; she can see before her the remnant of pongee silk which is selling at only 15 cents a yard. What a crowd of excited women are clustered about the prize!

She forces her way into the thickest of the crowd. She is tossed this way and that. She cares not. Her hat is pulled off and walked on by the half crazed mob. She cares not. She reaches the counter. Ten yards only of the silk is left.

"I will take it," she says, just in advance of four other women, all reaching for the coveted prize.

The clerk says, "It is yours." The woman feels for her purse. She has left it at home.

The other women exult. They buy the pongee. The wonderful bargain is gone. The bargain day is over. There will be no more bargain sales for one week.—Chicago Tribune.

Every Man to His Trade.

The Green Bag tells of a lawyer who was about to furnish a bill of costs.

"I hope," said his client, who was a baker, "that you will make it as light as possible."

"Ah," said the lawyer, "you might perhaps say that to the foreman of your establishment, but that is not the way I make my bread!"

A General Theory of Machines.

In the Comptes Rendus of the Paris Academy of Sciences M. Koenigs has printed a sketch of a general theory of mechanisms. Every machine consists of a number of material bodies, resistances, joined together reciprocally, upon which natural forces act to produce a desired effect, and the effect may be either a state of rest or one of motion. The resisting bodies and their connections are the mechanism. Its effect is not known until we define the acting forces. The same machine will produce different effects according as different forces play upon it.

Machines are subject to three effects—static when the forces produce equilibrium; kinetic when the result is motion, and, finally, dissociative when the connections of the machine are changed. The latter effect is usually not considered, but it is essential to take it into account. A machine could not be built, in the first place, unless it was capable of dissociation. In some machines—locks, for instance—the parts are dissociated every time the apparatus operates. It is desirable to design most machines, however, so that the dissociative effects do not come into play during their operation.

The cold bath in the morning is not so popular as it was formerly. There is much energy expended in the reaction and just at the time of day when this energy is at its lowest ebb. Then, too, cold water has very little cleansing effect. Very hot water stimulates the nerves, which is the effect that we are seeking from the cold water, while it does not demand the energy of reaction of the latter. The duration of the morning bath should be as short as possible—hardly longer than the mere application of the water to the skin, followed by a brisk rubbing. However, many prefer a cool sponge bath in the morning, and if this is followed by a warm glow and a feeling of well being it certainly is beneficial. Many people are not strong enough to react well. A hot bath at night is most cleansing and restful. General bathing must be regulated by individual peculiarities.—Emma E Walker. M. D., in Ladies' Home Journal

Why She Was Married.

It is queer how ironclad is the hold of convention and conventional considerations. They have a tighter grip and a wider influence than law, reason, sentiment or ethics itself. A woman whose marriage may be termed mediumly successful admitted candidly not long ago that at the very last moment never, never would she have married her husband had it not been for the thought of all the conventional considerations involved.

"On the way to our wedding," said the woman, "we had the most awful kind of a row that made me vow inwardly never, never to marry him. Then at the thought of the ceremony to come off at a friend's house, the breakfast that, thanks to her, was prepared and the invited guests, and how they would all talk at any change of plan, I grit my teeth and went through it. But it was the thought of the conventions alone that kept me up No other possible pressure could have induced me to marry him after such a row as we had on our way to the wedding."—New York Sun.

To Dwarf Trees.

To dwarf trees as the Chinese do you must follow their methods. They take a young plant, say a seedling or a cutting of cedar when two or three inches high, cut off its taproot as soon as it has enough other rootlets to live upon and replant it in a shallow pot or pan, allowing the end of the taproot to rest upon the bottom of the pan. Alluvial clay molded to the size of beans and just sufficient in quantity to furnish a scanty nourishment is then put into the pot. Water, heat and light are permitted on the same basis.

The Chinese also use various mechanical contrivances to promote symmetry of growth. As, owing to the shallow pots, both top and roots are easily accessible, the gardener uses the pruning knife and the searing iron freely, so that the little tree, hemmed on every side, eventually gives up the unequal struggle and, contenting itself with the little life left, grows just enough to live and look well.

Great Memories.

Otto Schultze, a stenographer, wrote in the Brandenburg Schulblatt that Bismarck had a wonderful memory. "When he had delivered a two hours' speech and looked over our shorthand reports the next day, he remembered every expression he had used exactly and did not forget them for years."

The novelist Spielhagen once told Schultze that he could recall vividly every one of the thousands of persons he had met in his life and every word spoken by casual acquaintances, together with their gestures and the cut of their hair and clothes.

is both effect and cause of weakened nerves. Deprived of nerve-force, the stomach cannot perform its labors, nutrition is perverted, food is converted into acid ferments that poison the nerves, cloud the intellect and weaken the entire system. There is one remedy, and one only. Build up the nerves.

"My stomach was so weak that I could not take any solid food, and I was nervous, restless, irritable and unable to sleep. After taking Dr. Miles' Nervine I gained rapidly in flesh and in six months I was well."

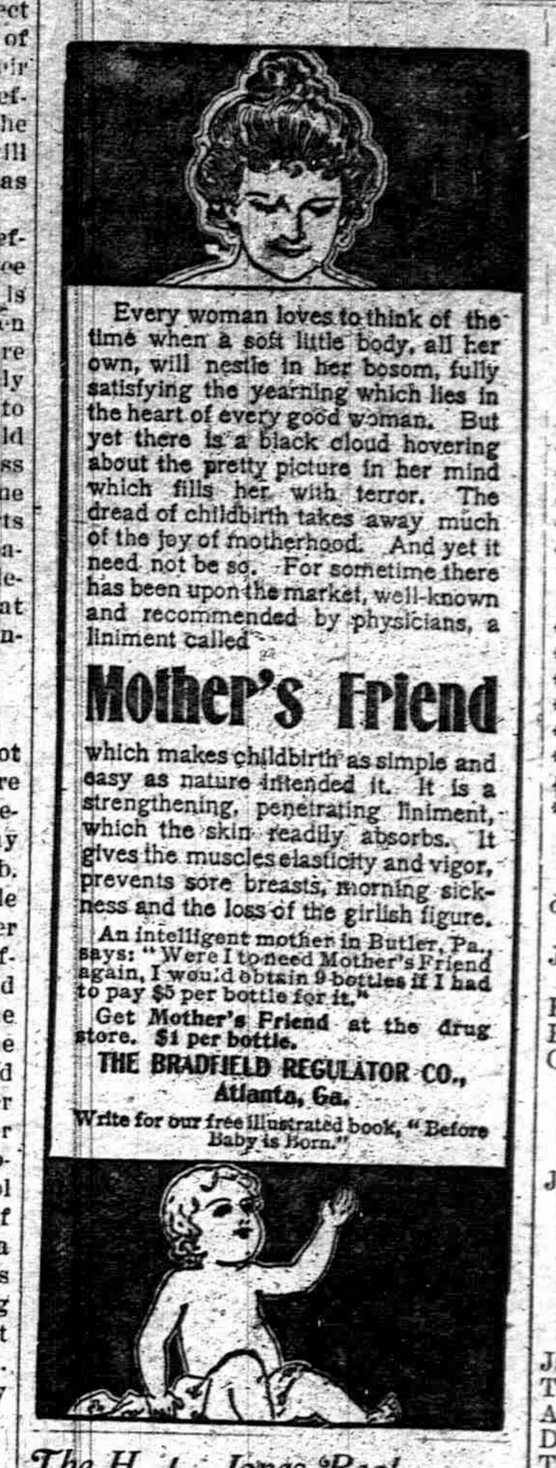
SAPOLIO

LIKE A GOOD TEMPER SHEDS A BRIGHTNESS EVERYWHERE.



Every woman loves to think of the time when a soft little body, all her own, will nestle in her bosom, fully satisfying the yearning which lies in the heart of every good woman. But yet there is a black cloud hovering about the pretty picture in her mind which fills her with terror. The dread of childbirth takes away much of the joy of motherhood. And yet it need not be so. For sometime there has been upon the market, well-known and recommended by physicians, a liniment called which makes childbirth as simple and easy as nature intended it. It is a strengthening, penetrating liniment, which the skin readily absorbs. It gives the muscles elasticity and vigor, prevents sore breasts, morning sickness and the loss of the girlish figure.

An intelligent mother in Butler, Pa., says: "Were I to need Mother's Friend again, I would obtain 9 bottles if I had to pay $5 per bottle for it."

HOW THE STRUGGLE OCCURRED.

Discussion of Mrs. Bonine's Scuffle With Ayres.

Washington, Nov. 28.—The principal witness yesterday before the criminal court in which Mrs. Lola Ida Bonine is being tried for the murder of James S. Ayres, Jr., was Dr. Martin W. Glazebrook, the deputy coroner for the District of Columbia, who conducted the autopsy on the body of Ayres. He described in detail the three wounds on the young man's body, and the court crier, stripped to the waist, was used to illustrate the location and course of the wounds for the instruction of the jury. Dr. Glazebrook also testified Mrs. Bonine had given him her version of the manner in which Ayres came to his death, claiming that the wounds were inflicted while the pistol was in Ayres's hand and illustrating how the tragedy occurred, but he thought that it was impossible for the wounds to have been made with the weapon in Ayres's own hand. She told him that he was at her back and had his arms clasped about her when the shots were fired. Several other witnesses gave details of Ayres's last night alive. Three colored female servants related incidents of his life at the Kenmore hotel. One of them said that she had heard Ayres order Mrs. Bonine to get out of his room and remain out. Another that she saw Ayres and Mrs. Bonine coming out of the former's room together and a third that upon an occasion Ayres had shown indifference when told that Mrs. Bonine was ill.

New Boats for the Navy.

Washington, Nov. 28.—The naval board of construction Wednesday completed its recommendations called for congress relative to two new battleships and two armored cruisers, and also covering many technical questions which have arisen as to naval architecture, armor, batteries, turrets, etc. The recommendations for two battleships call for two ships of 16,000 tons each, and two armored cruisers of 14,500 tons each. The battleships carry the following batteries: Four 12-inch guns in two turrets, forward and aft; eight 8-inch guns, in four separate turrets; twelve 7-inch guns; twenty 14-pounders and a large number of auxiliary machine guns. The armored cruisers are to have an armament making them in effect battleships, as follows: Four 10-inch guns with two turrets forward and aft; sixteen 7-inch guns; twenty 14-pounders and the usual complement of small guns in the secondary battery.

Will Revise Their Creed.

Washington, Nov. 28.—Members of a section of the committee of 20 appointed to consider a revision of creed of the Presbyterian church assembled here yesterday and probably will hold their first session today. Rev. Dr. Herrick Johnson of the McCormick theological seminary at Chicago will preside as chairman of the section. Others who have arrived are Rev. Dr. S. P. Sprecher of Cleveland; Rev. De Minton, moderator of the Presbyterian assembly and chairman of the entire committee, and Rev. Dr. John Dewitt of Princeton, N. J. Justice Harlan of United States supreme court, who also is a member, conferred with Dr. Johnson on the work of the committee.

Turkeys for the President.

Washington, Nov. 28.—President Roosevelt's Thanksgiving turkeys have arrived and Henry Pinckney, the colored steward of the White house, is expecting to put before the chief magistrate and family today one of the finest birds ever cooked in the executive mansion. The regular annual contribution from Horace Vose of Rhode Island came Wednesday morning. It weighs 30 pounds and is one of the largest turkeys he has ever sent to the White house.

Ex-Communication Recalled.

Chicago, Nov. 28.—Announcement was made Wednesday by Thomas A. Moran, attorney for Rev. Archbishop Feehan, that the sentence of ex-communication which was pronounced against Fr. Jeremiah J. Crowley would be recalled within a few days. This is expected to put an end to the case against the deposed priest and the injunction proceedings begun against him to prevent his worship in the cathedral of the Holy Name will be withdrawn.

Mississippi Boat Sinks.

Memphis, Tenn., Nov. 28.—The steamer John K. Speed, bound from New Orleans to Cincinnati with 700 tons of freight on board, struck an obstruction in the river a short distance below the Memphis railroad bridge yesterday and sank. No lives were lost. The Speed was one of the largest boats in the river traffic. It is thought she can be raised without difficulty.

ARMY AND NAVY CLASH

WEST POINT VS. ANNAPOLIS ON THE GRIDIRON.

PRES. ROOSEVELT AND GOVERNMENT OFFICIALS TO ATTEND.

DEMAND FOR TICKETS EXCEEDS ACCOMMODATIONS.

Philadelphia, Nov. 28.—Preparations for the army and navy football game on Franklin Field on Saturday, which will be witnessed by President Roosevelt, are rapidly nearing completion. Never before in the history of football in this city has there been such a demand for tickets. All those who will see the game will be guests of either the university of Pennsylvania or of the academies, no tickets being sold for the contest. Following out its custom of the past two years, the university tendered Franklin Field as a neutral ground for the contest. Pennsylvania bears the entire expense. The university retains about 10,000 tickets and the Annapolis and West Point academies distribute the remainder of the 23,000 cards of admission. The enormous demand for tickets this year is due to the announcement that the president will attend the game. The university authorities say that applications for tickets from Pennsylvania alone has been fully 20,000 above the seats at the disposal of the athletic association.

President Roosevelt will arrive here Saturday morning accompanied by a number of other government officials. The party will be escorted to the grounds by army and navy officers. During the first half of the contest the president will sit with the followers of one of the academies, and during the ten minutes' intermission between the halves he will be escorted across the field and will occupy a seat with the sympathizers of the other academy for the remainder of the game. The president will return to Washington immediately after the contest.

Ship Stranded—Passengers Destitute.

Seattle, Wash., Nov. 28.—Advices from the north bring news that the long overdue schooner Ralph J. Long, from Nome, lies stranded at Unalaska with 115 passengers. The vessel is out of food, the passengers have spent all their money to obtain the absolute necessities of life, and they now appeal for help to the war department. L. Frank Brown of this city presented a resolution to the Seattle chamber of commerce yesterday reciting the facts in the case and urging the necessity of immediate aid for the passengers and crew. The members of the chamber were unanimously in favor of acting on the matter at once, and a request will be made to the authorities at Washington, asking them to send a revenue cutter or some government vessel to bring down the starving people.

Alleged Hunters Shot by Indians.

Janesville, Wis., Nov. 28.—Rumors of a startling nature, which throw new light on the alleged accidental killing of hunters through reckless shooting on the part of their companions, have reached this city. It is now alleged that in several instances Indians have intentionally shot the men down. The invasion this fall by thousands of sportsmen has resulted in a wholesale slaughter of deer at the very door of the Indian wigwam. This is said to have driven the red men wild with jealousy. Half-civilized Indians have informed old-time hunters the only way to rid the pineries of city sportsmen is to scare them out by means of sending a few stray bullets here and there wherever the hunter happened to be lying in wait.

Hundreds of Horses Entered.

New Orleans, Nov. 28.—When the Crescent City Jockey club shall open its gates today, what bids fair to be the most successful meeting in its history will be ushered in. A thousand horses, mainly the property of western stables, are already upon the ground, and six carloads of horses will leave for New Orleans after the close of the Bennings meeting. The entries are of a much better class than is usual in winter racing.

Notorious Robber Captured.

Great Falls, Mont., Nov. 28.—Deputy Sheriff Ledbetter has arrested at Neihart a man known as Bob Collins, who is believed to be O. C. Hanks, alias Camilla Hanks, alias "Deaf Charlie," a partner of Harry Longbaugh, Kid Curry and George Parker in the Malta, Mont., Great Northern train robbery on July 3 last. Collins does not confess his identity, but admits he helped to rob the train and that he has $12,500 buried.

Carrie Nation Divorced.

Medicine Lodge, Kan., Nov. 28.—David Nation was yesterday granted a divorce from Carrie Nation, "the joint smasher." The court exonerated Mrs. Nation from the charge of cruelty to her husband and divided the property. The Medicine Lodge home will go to David and outlying property to Carrie. Mrs. Nation said that one reason she fought the proceedings was that she wished to continue to share the pension money drawn by her husband.

Railroad Taxation Too Small.

Columbus, O., Nov. 28.—A petition in mandamus was filed in the Ohio supreme court to require a re-distribution of the valuation for taxation of the Cleveland & Pittsburg railroad. The relator is a taxpayer of Tuscarawas county, who claims the road should be valued as a part of the main line of the Pennsylvania system, at $105,560, instead of being valued as a branch at $31,262.

Some Fast Mail Handling.

Chicago, Nov. 28.—Four hundred and eighteen sacks of Australian London mail are being rushed across the continent to reach New York in time for the steamer leaving Saturday for Queenstown. The mail left San Francisco Monday and is due at Council Bluffs, Ia., at 3:45 p. m. today. It will be transferred to the fast mail of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy railroad. In case the mail shall be late in reaching Council Bluffs a special train will be in readiness for a race across Iowa and Illinois to catch the Lake Shore mail, which is to leave Chicago for New York at 3 o'clock Friday morning. This is the second installment of Australian mail diverted from the Suez canal route to the trans-American pathway.

BOILER WAS WEAKENED.

Theories as to the Cause of the Detroit Boiler Explosion.

Detroit, Nov. 28.—Now that the full magnitude of the Penberthy Injector Co. explosion has been measured and the public has turned from its first flood of awe and horror at the loss of life and limb to sympathize with and succor the living, interest begins to manifest itself strongly in ascertaining the cause of the disaster.

Competent engineers declare that the Penberthy Injector Co.'s boiler was burned above the water line at one of the boiler seams, and so weakened that with the 95 pounds of steam on, which Engineer Riley says was the case five minutes before the explosion, and with the water well heated, a sudden throwing off of the load or power in one of the company's shops was likely to develop sufficient pressure in from one to three minutes to cause the seam or rivets at the seam to break.

A careful examination of the boiler was made yesterday with a competent engineer. He declared it his belief that the boiler was burned above the water line, right under one of the flanges of the boiler that sat in the brick wall.

"I believe," he said, "that a sharp blow at that spot would break that steel easily. It is very white and brittle at that spot."

Smaller Boiler Burst.

The boiler that was running the power plant at the time of the explosion was the smaller of the two horizontal boilers used for power purposes.

The boiler is in full view, the most prominent object now in the ruins. Engineers and experts crowd about it all the time. One seam, running the entire length of the boiler, is ripped from end to end, and the sheet steel rests 20 feet away from where the boiler originally stood, covering part of the boiler tubes like a tent. Rivets have been broken from the heads, separating them entirely from the body of the boiler.

The point at which it is declared the boiler is burned, and was weakened, is just below the flange of the boiler, about two-thirds the way up from the bottom. The fire underneath the boiler is shut off two or three inches below the water line by fire brick, and the flange comes just above this. The evidence of the boiler being burned would seem to indicate that the fire brick just underneath the flange burned away, and the flames underneath the boiler managed to lick the boiler above the water line.

A third theory of the boiler explosion is that of low water and that cold water was let into the boiler suddenly. Boiler Inspector [illegible] is said to be of this belief.

The complete list of the dead now numbers 30, and several employes are still unaccounted for.

To the Jury Soon.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Nov. 28.—Yesterday was another dreary day in the Salsbury trial. Witnesses were put on by the prosecution to clinch some points which in the general shake-up have been uninteresting and almost lost sight. The prosecution then rested. For the defense, T. E. McGarry declared it was infamously false that the $7,500 paid him as a fee by Taylor was part of the first installment of $25,000 which was paid with no string attached. Evidence will probably be all in by Saturday or early next week, and it is expected that the case will go to the jury by Wednesday or Thursday.

Promise to Be Good.

St. Joseph, Mich., Nov. 28.—The fishermen whose nets and tugs were seized by Deputy Warden Brewster are putting up a great whine these days. Now that they have been caught red-handed, they are making all sorts of promises to be good forevermore if the warden will kindly return their property to them instead of confiscating and destroying it. Heretofore the state has been very lenient with the violators of the fish laws, generally contenting itself with confiscating the fish immediately taken and returning the other property.

Crushed Under a Locomotive.

Imlay City, Mich., Nov. 28.—Richard Newsbaumer, a fireman on the Pontiac, Oxford & Northern railroad, was under his engine, cleaning out the firebox here Tuesday night when the engineer, supposing him out, backed the engine. Newsbaumer was terribly bruised and internally injured. There is but a slight chance for his recovery. He was taken home to Pontiac.

Austrian Embezzler Nabbed.

New York, Nov. 28.—Joseph Aros, an officer in the army reserves and bookkeeper of the Bank of Murkacs, Hungary, has been arrested here at the instance of the Austro-Hungarian authorities, charged with the embezzlement of 23,000 krone (about $5,000) part in cash and part in Austrian government bonds. Aros left Murkacs Oct. 26 last and was recognized through descriptions sent out by the immigration bureau at Washington when he arrived at this port Tuesday on the Zeeland from Antwerp. With him was a young woman whose name, in the description sent out, was Agnes Galambosa, a gypsy girl said to be the cousin of Rigo, who eloped with the Princess Chemay.

A HEAD-ON COLLISION

ON WABASH ROAD—LOSS OF LIFE TREMENDOUS.

OCCURRED NEAR SENECA, ELEVEN MILES FROM ADRIAN.

WRECK CAUGHT FIRE, ADDING HORROR TO THE SCENE.

Adrian, Mich., Nov. 28.—Two passenger trains on the Wabash railroad met head-on near Seneca, 11 miles west of here, between 7:30 and 7:45 last evening. Both trains were heavily loaded and the loss of life is enormous.

No. 13 was an emigrant train from the east and was made up in nine coaches, all of them practically full. No. 4 was the limited passenger train going west and contained eight coaches. The principal damage was done the emigrant cars on No. 13.

Immediately after the collision the emigrant cars caught fire, the country all about being lighted up from the flames. The farm houses in the neighborhood are filled with the injured and are being attended to by physicians summoned from Morenci, Sand Creek, Weston, Adrian and Montpelier, O.

One train load of the injured has been taken to the Wabash hospital at Peru, Ind. Not only are the farm houses filled with the injured and dying, but the two coaches of the emigrant train that were in the rear and unharmed, as well as the depot, are filled.

No. 4 had engine 609, Engineer Strong, Conductor G. J. Martin, and No. 13 double-headed engine 88, Engineer Work, and engine 151 Engineer Parks and Conductor Charles Troll. No. 4, it is believed, disobeyed orders in not waiting at Seneca for No. 13, thereby causing the wreck.

Train No. 13 consisted of a baggage car and day coaches filled with Italian immigrants bound from New York to western points, and two Pullmans. The immigrants were transferred from No. 3 yesterday afternoon in Detroit, and were packed into the day coaches like sardines. Wabash officials in Detroit estimate that the greatest loss of life occurred in these coaches, which were light. Advices state that the baggage car and coach next to it were smashed into splinters and afterwards caught fire, creating a holocaust in which the dead and dying found a fiery death.

The third coach was telescoped as well as part of the next car, which was a Pullman.

No. 4 consisted of a baggage car, a combination coach and sleeper. Most of the passengers were in the Pullman. Being a vestibuled train, the officials here believe that the loss of life will not be heavy.

No. 13 Crew Blamed.

The track at the point where the collision occurred was straight, and at first the officials could not understand how the accident could have happened. No. 13, which ordinarily is due to leave Detroit at 2:30 o'clock, was two hours late, leaving at 4:20. The two trains meet at Montpelier, O., according to schedule, but yesterday, according to reports, No. 4 had orders to wait for No. 13 at Seneca. The blame is therefore placed on the conductor or engineer of No. 4. Had this train been held at Seneca, the accident would not have occurred. The train No. 4 was due at Seneca at 6:43, according to the change in schedule, but apparently orders to wait were disobeyed, and the probabilities are that the true story of why will never be told, as the train crews undoubtedly met instant death.

Medical Assistance.

As soon as the news of the disaster reached Division Supt. Burns of Detroit the wires were kept hot ordering specials from Adrian and Peru and Montpelier to the scene of the wreck. At 8:40 a special train from Detroit, carrying 32 physicians and surgeons, started for Seneca and was given the right of way. When it reached the scene of the wreck the work was at once commenced succoring the wounded. A special from Adrian bearing all the doctors and physicians in the city had been at work for an hour, but the flames retarded the work of rescue. The wounded had been placed on stretchers in the coaches sent from Adrian.

It has so far been impossible to give any accurate estimate of the killed and injured. Estimated by a railroad man here, however, the number cannot be less than 75 to 100.

Rifles for State Militia.

Lansing, Mich., Nov. 28.—The state military board is in receipt of a letter from the chief of the ordnance department at Washington, announcing that the government is now prepared to issue Krag-Jorgensen rifles with equipments and ammunition, on requisition therefor by the governor on the secretary of war, and charge the money therefor against the state's quota of annual appropriation by congress for arming and equipping the militia. Michigan's quota is about $24,000 per year, and the rifles cost about $13.75 apiece. The military board will acquire the rifles at the rate of about 500 per year until the entire national guard is equipped with them.

Ineffective Brakes Cause Accident.

Lansing, Mich., Nov. 28.—Owing to the failure of the brakes on the northbound car to work, two street cars came together with terrific force on the Franklin avenue curve at North Lansing last evening. Fred Pike, motorman on the southbound car, failed to jump in time, and both of his feet were caught in the vestibule and horribly crushed. They may have to be amputated.

Can It Be Possible?

Washington, Nov. 28.—Secretary Hay received a dispatch from Constantinople yesterday respecting a rumor that has reached there that Miss Ellen M. Stone, who has been held a captive by the Bulgarian brigands for several months, and her companion in captivity, Madame Tsilka, are dead. The report, however, lacks confirmation.

RIDING IN CHINA.

Using the Donkey, the Shentzu and the Wheelbarrow.

Here comes a gorgeously clad lady riding a donkey, her husband by her side. She rides straddle legs, but round her is drawn an embroidered petticoat, displaying all its beauties when riding, her face is painted and powdered, her lower lip is one large daub of vermilion, and her wonderfully dressed hair is shining with grease and gum. She wears no hat, however hot the day, but she carries a fan or an oil paper parasol, and she looks very glum as the barbarian passes, for he is not supposed to see her, though very probably she stops and chatters to her lord and master once he is well out of the way.

Next there comes a shentzu—that is, a long chair with a hood hung between two mules walking tandem fashion. Sometimes there is another gayly dressed woman in it, sometimes a magistrate or other grandee, but oftenest of all come the shrieking, creaking wheelbarrows, the universal vehicle of China.

The wheel is in the middle, and there is a seat on either side, and the way those tortured wheels cry out is excruciating—the air is full of the sound. The Chinaman cannot be prevailed upon to grease them. In the first place, he is economical and would not waste the grease, and in the next he looks upon a silent wheel with suspicion. "Would you have him going like a thief?" he asks plaintively.

Nevertheless these wheelbarrows are the only wheeled vehicles, and a cooly will wheel two men and their baggage easily. The bishop of northern China declares he has traveled thousands of miles on a wheelbarrow.—Empire Review.

THE FIRST CAMERA.

It Was Invented by an Italian In the Sixteenth Century.

The cemera was invented by an Italian named Baptista Porta, though it was not at first used for photographing. It was in reality merely a dark room, into which the light was admitted through a little round hole in one side. The rays of light coming from objects outside of this room entered it through this aperture and made a picture on the other side of the room glowing in all the beauty and color of nature itself, but rather indistinct and upside down.

This dark room was contrived by Porta about the middle of the sixteenth century. He improved it later by placing a glass lens in the aperture and outside a mirror which received the rays of light and reflected them through the lens so that that image upon the opposite wall within was made much brighter, more distinct and in a natural or erect position. This was really the first camera obscura, an invention which is enjoyed to the present day, being situated often upon a hilltop, where a picturesque country surrounding may be reflected through a lens which is placed in the center of the conical roof.

Now, our modern photographic camera is merely a small comera obscura in its simplest form, carrying a lens at one end and a ground glass screen at the other. It is, however, often much more complicated in its construction.

Shopping In Athens.

In his volume on "Modern Athens," George Horton says that shopping in the Greek capital is a more elaborate, time consuming and minute process even than with us. "The oriental method of doing business still prevails. The dealer sets a price, the buyer another, and often three or four hours of patient will contest pass before a compromise is reached. The patron asks, 'How much is this piece of silk?' 'One dollar a yard.' is the reply. 'Thirty cents' is offered. The merchant is thrown into something resembling an apoplectic fit. He swears by his father's soul that it cost 95 cents.

"The lady takes a seat with a sigh and after twenty minutes inquires innocently, 'Finally, 30 cents?' 'Never! But to keep you and not lose your custom, you may have it for what I paid, 95 cents.' 'You poor thing!' sighs the lady sarcastically. There are a dozen or more women sitting about the store. When finally the proprietor comes down to a price that one is willing to pay, she rises, receives her bundle and departs, declaring good naturedly that she had been swindled and that she will never come back again."

A Question of Ownership.

"Are you the man who advertises 'Own your own home?'" said the dejected looking caller.

"I am." answered the real estate dealer.

"Well, I'd like to get the recipe."

"The what?"

"The recipe. The modus operandi. I want to know what to do to own my own home. [illegible] has a temper like [illegible] and muscles like Hercules [illegible] you can, tell me how to dispossess her. Money's no object."—Washington Star.

HE KILLED THE CASE

FATAL EFFECT OF BROTHER SPEARS' MUSICAL TESTIMONY.

After the Jury Heard It They Acquitted the Naughty Children Who Laughed In Church and Disturbed the Religious Assemblage.

A well known lawyer of Lancaster, Mo., related the following legal incident: One of the most original lawyers I ever met in my life was Sam Dysart, who many years ago was a resident of our county. Sam was a born humorist and could have made his fortune in the lecture field. When he lived up our way, he was engaged on one occasion to defend a lot of boys and girls charged with disturbing a religious assembly out in the country. "Laughing and giggling" is the way the information read. The case was tried before Squire A. C. Bailey, a good old man who has long since gone to his final reward. Like all cases of the sort, it attracted an immense crowd from the vicinity of the alleged outrage.

T. C. Tadlock prosecuted, and he was instructed by the church people to spare no pains to convict the disturbers, who were very much frightened by being dragged into court. All the defendants were children of good families, and it was their first offense. They candidly admitted they laughed out in church, and the state insisted that by their own mouths they were condemned.

Brother Tice Spears, a righteous man of Puritanic type, was the main prosecuting witness. He had conducted the service, and he testified that the peace was sadly disturbed by the unseemly behavior of the "rioters." After he told his story in chief he sat down with clasped hands, waiting for the defendants' attorney to begin on him. He didn't have long to wait. The examination began like this:

"Brother Spears, you led the meetin' that night?"

"I did, sir."

"You prayed?"

"I did, sir."

"And preached?"

"I tried to."

"And sang?"

"I sang."

"What did you sing?"

"'There Is a Fountain Filled With Blood,' sir."

Here Mr. Dysart pulled a hymnbook from his pocket and handed it to the witness with the remark:

"Please turn to that song, Brother Spears."

The witness did so.

"That's what you sang that night?"

"It is, sir."

"Well, stand up and sing it now, if you please."

"What!"

"You heard what I said, Brother Spears."

"But I can't sing before this sort of crowd."

"Brother Spears," with much apparent indignation, "do I understand that you refuse to furnish legitimate evidence to this jury?"

"No, no—but, you see"—

"Your honor," said Mr. Dysart, "I insist that the witness shall sing the song referred to just as he did on the night of alleged disturbance. It is a part of our evidence and very important. The reason for it will be disclosed later on."

There was a long jangle between the lawyers, and the court finally ordered the witness to get up and sing.

"And mind you, Brother Spears," said Dysart seriously, "you must sing it just as you did that night. If you change a note, you will have to go back and do it all over again."

The witness got up and opened the book. There is a vast difference between singing to a congregation in sympathy with you and a crowd of courtroom habitues. Brother Spears was painfully conscious of the fact. You know how these old time hymns are sung in the backwoods settlements? You begin in the basement and work up to the roof and then leap off from the dizzy height and finally finish the line in the basement.

That's the way the witness did. He had a good voice—that is, it was strong. If Gabriel's trumpet ever gets out of whack he could utilize that voice and wake the dead just as readily. It seemed to threaten the window lights. The crowd didn't smile, it just yelled with laughter. The jurymen bent double and almost rolled from their seats. The court bit his corncob pipe harder and looked solemn. It wasn't any use. There were only two straight faces in the house. One belonged to a deaf man and the other to Sam Dysart. The singer finished and sat down. He looked tired. Sam immediately excused him.

When the time for speechmaking came Sam remarked to the jury: "If you gentlemen think you could go to one of Brother Spears' meetings and behave better than you have here, why you may be justified in convicting these boys and girls."

That was all he said, but it gave the jury lots to think about. They brought in a verdict of not guilty, with the request that Brother Spears sing another song. But that gentleman had gone home and court adjourned.—Macon Republican.

People Who Used to Eat Spiders.

The enjoyment of particular kinds of food is, after all, a matter of custom, and the African who revels in white ants is no more peculiar in his tastes than the European who eats cheese mites. A lady whom M. Reaumur knew was accustomed to devour spiders as fast as she could catch them, and a German lady gave it as her opinion that these creatures resembled in taste the most delicious nuts. A fellow countryman of this lady was in the habit of regularly hunting spiders in his own and his friends' houses. He used to spread them on bread, Rozel tells us, and vowed that they were far pleasanter to the palate than butter.—Cornhill Magazine.

"Eh? Turned out?"

"Yes; you read it there that the crowd turned out N. Mass. Who was N. Mass?"

"Why, I suppose he's some Frenchman. You ought to listen closer."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

A BURSTING BOILER.

How It Looks When a Locomotive Is Blown Up.

"I am one of the very few persons who ever saw a locomotive blow up," remarked an old railroad man to a reporter the other day. "Generally the men who witness the explosion of a steam engine are so dead when the smoke has cleared away that they are never able to give an account of the disaster.

"Like many other accidents, the one I saw was the result of carelessness—low water in the boiler—for the engine had just come from the shops and was in complete repair. It was on the Baltimore and Ohio railroad in West Virginia a number of years ago. I was on a locomotive some distance behind the one which exploded and was looking ahead out of the cab window, so that the ill fated engine was immediately before my eyes. Suddenly I saw the machine rise in the air. It seemed to me to be about as high as the telegraph poles beside the track, which, as you doubtless know, are not so high as telegraph poles in the city. Then came a cloud of dense black smoke and dust, which hid the engine from view, and almost simultaneously I heard the roar of the explosion.

"Both the engineer and the fireman were killed, and the locomotive was fit for nothing much but the scrap heap when it fell to the ground. The crown sheet over the firebox had blown out.

"The strange thing about the explosion was that no white steam was seen. You know that perfectly dry steam is invisible, being like the air, and before it had time to condense it was probably smothered by the cloud of smoke and dust raised by the bursting of the boiler."—Baltimore Sun.

PREPARED CHALK.

Practically all the tooth powders of commerce have the same base—prepared chalk. This is mixed with some saponaceous compound, flavored a little, put up in an attractive bottle or jar and, behold, a tooth powder costing from 15 to 50 cents per vessel, according to the place you buy it and the celebrity of the name on the label.

For 15 cents enough tooth powder to last a family a year can be put together. Buy the chalk in bulk and with it some ground castile soap, which all druggists sell. Put them together in the proportion of one-eighth soap to seven-eighths chalk, mix well and fill any and all the empty tooth powder jars or bottles that you may have around. If flavoring is liked, it is easy to add a little wintergreen or peppermint.

So with the various antiseptic and disinfecting solutions that, attractively bottled and judiciously advertised, coax pennies unnecessarily out of our purses. There is no better cleanser and general sweetener than a saturated solution of bicarbonate of soda. Fill a pint or a quart bottle, if you want to, with clear water and add bicarbonate of soda got from the druggist, not the grocer, until the liquid will take up no more. Keep this on your toilet shelf and use it as a mouth wash, etc.

When it comes to an antiseptic fluid, any surgeon will tell you that there is practically nothing in materia medica better than salt and water. It is always at hand and is safe and effectual.—New York Post.

An Ample and Sweet Revenge.

A young Englishman who had been repeatedly and unnecessarily annoyed by the St. Malo custom house officials made up his mind to get even with them. The last time he had crossed he had brought a ferret over with him, and a minute or so before landing he transferred the creature to a black bag, which he carried with extreme care and an evident desire not to attract attention. This immediately fetched one of the douaniers, and he swooped down on it with joyful alacrity.

Our young Englishman pretended not to understand the official until the Frenchman made his meaning clear by unmistakable signs. Then he slowly and reluctantly unlocked the bag. The douanier plunged in his hand, and—but my pen (let me put it down to my pen) refuses to adequately describe the dramatic scene that ensued. Suffice it to say that the bare recital of it was balm to my wounded spirit. I only hope it was our friend at the custom house who made the ferret's acquaintance. Revenge is sweet.—Continental Chit-Chat.

What Two Scotchmen Did.

In the early days of California two Scotchmen emigrated thither. One of them, an enthusiastic lover of Scotland, took with him a thistle, the national emblem. The other took a small swarm of honeybees. Years have gone. The Pacific coast is, on the one hand, cursed with the Scotch thistle, which the farmers find impossible to exterminate; on the other hand, the forests and fields are laden with the sweetness of honey, which has been and still is one of the blessings of the western slope of the Rocky mountains.

One reason why plants often do not succeed in window culture is the want of moisture in the air. Anything that tends to supply this lack is so much gained. On this account plants often do best in the kitchen window.

The petals of a single flower fall sooner than do those of a double one for the reason that the inner petals are transformed more slowly and retain the power of adherence they need when performing their original function.

RIDING IN CHINA.

Using the Donkey, the Shentzu and the Wheelbarrow.

Here comes a gorgeously clad lady riding a donkey, her husband by her side. She rides straddle legs, but round her is drawn an embroidered petticoat, displaying all its beauties when riding, her face is painted and powdered, her lower lip is one large daub of vermillion, and her wonderfully dressed hair is shining with grease and gum. She wears no hat, however hot the day, but she carries a fan or an oil paper parasol, and she looks very glum as the barbarian passes, for he is not supposed to see her, though very probably she stoops and chatters to her lord and master once he is well out of the way.

Next there comes a shentzu—that is, a long chair with a hood hung between two mules walking tandem fashion. Sometimes there is another gayly dressed woman in it, sometimes a magistrate or other grandee, but oftenest of all come the shrieking, creaking wheelbarrows, the universal vehicle of China.

The wheel is in the middle, and there is a seat on either side, and the way those tortured wheels cry out is excruciating—the air is full of the sound. The Chinaman cannot be prevailed upon to grease them. In the first place, he is economical and would not waste the grease, and in the next he looks upon a silent wheel with suspicion. "Would you have him going like a thief?" he asks plaintively.

Nevertheless these wheelbarrows are the only wheeled vehicles, and a cooly will wheel two men and their baggage easily. The bishop of northern China declares he has traveled thousands of miles on a wheelbarrow.—Empire Review.

THE FIRST CAMERA.

It Was Invented by an Italian In the Sixteenth Century.

The cemera was invented by an Italian named Baptista Porta, though it was not at first used for photographing. It was in reality merely a dark room, into which the light was admitted through a little round hole in one side. The rays of light coming from objects outside of this room entered it through this aperture and made a picture on the other side of the room glowing in all the beauty and color of nature itself, but rather indistinct and upside down.

This dark room was contrived by Porta about the middle of the sixteenth century. He improved it later by placing a glass lens in the aperture and outside a mirror which received the rays of light and reflected them through the lens so that that image upon the opposite wall within was made much brighter, more distinct and in a natural or erect position. This was really the first camera obscura, an invention which is enjoyed to the present day, being situated often upon a hilltop, where a picturesque country surrounding may be reflected through a lens which is placed in the center of the conical roof.

Now, our modern photographic camera is merely a small comera obscura in its simplest form, carrying a lens at one end and a ground glass screen at the other. It is, however, often much more complicated in its construction.

Shopping In Athens.

In his volume on "Modern Athens," George Horton says that shopping in the Greek capital is a more elaborate, time consuming and minute process even than with us. "The oriental method of doing business still prevails. The dealer sets a price, the buyer another, and often three or four hours of patient will contest pass before a compromise is reached. The patron asks, 'How much is this piece of silk?' 'One dollar a yard,' is the reply. 'Thirty cents' is offered. The merchant is thrown into something resembling an apoplectic fit. He swears by his father's soul that it cost 95 cents.

"The lady takes a seat with a sigh and after twenty minutes inquires innocently, 'Finally, 30 cents?' 'Never! But to keep you and not lose your custom, you may have it for what I paid, 95 cents.' 'You poor thing!' sighs the lady sarcastically. There are a dozen or more women sitting about the store. When finally the proprietor comes down to a price that one is willing to pay, she rises, receives her bundle and departs, declaring good naturedly that she had been swindled and that she will never come back again."

A Question of Ownership.

"Are you the man who advertises 'Own your own home?'" said the dejected looking caller.

"I am," answered the real estate dealer.

"Well, I'd like to get the recipe."

"The what?"

"The recipe. The modus operandi. I want to know what to do to own my own home. [illegible] has a temper like [illegible] week, Hon[illegible] and muscles like Hercu[illegible] you can, tell me how to dispossess her. Money's no object."—Washington Star.

Spreads Like Wildfire

When things are "the best" they become "the best selling." Abraham Hare, a leading druggist, of Belleville, O., writes: "Electric Bitters are the best selling bitters I have handled in 20 years." You know why? Most diseases begin in disorders of stomach, liver kidneys, bowels, blood and nerves. Electric Bitters tones up the stomach, regulates liver, kidneys and bowels, purifies the blood, strengthens the nerves, hence cures multitudes of maladies. It builds up the entire system. Puts new life and vigor into any weak, sickly, rundown man or woman. Price 50 cents. Sold by C. A. Wright, druggist.

HE KILLED THE CASE

FATAL EFFECT OF BROTHER SPEARS' MUSICAL TESTIMONY.

After the Jury Heard It They Acquitted the Naughty Children Who Laughed In Church and Disturbed the Religious Assemblage.

A well known lawyer of Lancaster, Mo., related the following legal incident: One of the most original lawyers I ever met in my life was Sam Dysart, who many years ago was a resident of our county. Sam was a born humorist and could have made his fortune in the lecture field. When he lived up our way, he was engaged on one occasion to defend a lot of boys and girls charged with disturbing a religious assembly out in the country. "Laughing and giggling" is the way the information read. The case was tried before Squire A. C. Bailey, a good old man who has long since gone to his final reward. Like all cases of the sort, it attracted an immense crowd from the vicinity of the alleged outrage.

T. C. Tadlock prosecuted, and he was instructed by the church people to spare no pains to convict the disturbers, who were very much frightened by being dragged into court. All the defendants were children of good families, and it was their first offense. They candidly admitted they laughed out in church, and the state insisted that by their own mouths they were condemned.

Brother Tice Spears, a righteous man of Puritanic type, was the main prosecuting witness. He had conducted the service, and he testified that the peace was sadly disturbed by the unseemly behavior of the "rioters." After he told his story in chief he sat down with clasped hands, waiting for the defendants' attorney to begin on him. He didn't have long to wait. The examination began like this:

"Brother Spears, you led the meetin' that night?"

"I did, sir."

"You prayed?"

"I did, sir."

"And preached?"

"I tried to."

"And sang?"

"I sang."

"What did you sing?"

Here Mr. Dysart pulled a hymnbook from his pocket and handed it to the witness with the remark:

"Please turn to that song, Brother Spears."

The witness did so.

"That's what you sang that night?"

"It is, sir."

"Well, stand up and sing it now, if you please."

"What!"

"You heard what I said, Brother Spears."

"But I can't sing before this sort of crowd."

"Brother Spears," with much apparent indignation, "do I understand that you refuse to furnish legitimate evidence to this jury?"

"No, no—but, you see"—

"Your honor," said Mr. Dysart, "I insist that the witness shall sing the song referred to just as he did on the night of alleged disturbance. It is a part of our evidence and very important. The reason for it will be disclosed later on."

There was a long jangle between the lawyers, and the court finally ordered the witness to get up and sing.

"And mind you, Brother Spears," said Dysart seriously, "you must sing it just as you did that night. If you change a note, you will have to go back and do it all over again."

The witness got up and opened the book. There is a vast difference between singing to a congregation in sympathy with you and a crowd of courtroom habitues. Brother Spears was painfully conscious of the fact. You know how these old time hymns are sung in the backwoods settlements? You begin in the basement and work up to the roof and then leap off from the dizzy height and finally finish the line in the basement.

That's the way the witness did. He had a good voice—that is, it was strong. If Gabriel's trumpet ever gets out of whack he could utilize that voice and wake the dead just as readily. It seemed to threaten the window lights. The crowd didn't smile, it just yelled with laughter. The jurymen bent double and almost rolled from their seats. The court bit his corncob pipe harder and looked solemn. It wasn't any use. There were only two straight faces in the house. One belonged to a deaf man and the other to Sam Dysart. The singer finished and sat down. He looked tired. Sam immediately excused him.

When the time for speechmaking came Sam remarked to the jury: "If you gentlemen think you could go to one of Brother Spears' meetings and behave better than you have here, why you may be justified in convicting these boys and girls."

That was all he said, but it gave the jury lots to think about. They brought in a verdict of not guilty, with the request that Brother Spears sing another song. But that gentleman had gone home and court adjourned.—Macon Republican.

Look the Other Way.

There are many thousand fathers who are terrorizing their little sons by seeing too much. Let all such learn to look the other way at times. Don't see everything your boy does. Give him some latitude and longitude. Don't keep the little fellow in a shiver of apprehension lest you find out some peccadillo. He must have his fun or die. If you see too much, he grows thin. Look the other way.—New York Press.

People Who Used to Eat Spiders.

The enjoyment of particular kinds of food is, after all, a matter of custom, and the African who revels in white ants is no more peculiar in his tastes than the European who eats cheese mites. A lady whom M. Reaumur knew was accustomed to devour spiders as fast as she could catch them, and a German lady gave it as her opinion that these creatures resembled in taste the most delicious nuts. A fellow countryman of this lady was in the habit of regularly hunting spiders in his own and his friends' houses. He used to spread them on bread, Rozel tells us, and vowed that they were far pleasanter to the palate than butter.—Cornhill Magazine.

Who He Was.

"Wait a minute, John. Don't read so fast. Who was it that there crowd turned out?"

"Eh? Turned out?"

"Yes; you read it there that the crowd turned out N. Mass. Who was N. Mass?"

"Why, I suppose he's some Frenchman. You ought to listen closer."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

A BURSTING BOILER.

How It Looks When a Locomotive Is Blown Up.

"I am one of the very few persons who ever saw a locomotive blow up," remarked an old railroad man to a reporter the other day. "Generally the men who witness the explosion of a steam engine are so dead when the smoke has cleared away that they are never able to give an account of the disaster.

"Like many other accidents, the one I saw was the result of carelessness—low water in the boiler—for the engine had just come from the shops and was in complete repair. It was on the Baltimore and Ohio railroad in West Virginia a number of years ago. I was on a locomotive some distance behind the one which exploded and was looking ahead out of the cab window, so that the ill fated engine was immediately before my eyes. Suddenly I saw the machine rise in the air. It seemed to me to be about as high as the telegraph poles beside the track, which, as you doubtless know, are not so high as telegraph poles in the city. Then came a cloud of dense black smoke and dust, which hid the engine from view, and almost simultaneously I heard the roar of the explosion.

"Both the engineer and the fireman were killed, and the locomotive was fit for nothing much but the scrap heap when it fell to the ground. The crown sheet over the firebox had blown out.

"The strange thing about the explosion was that no white steam was seen. You know that perfectly dry steam is invisible, being like the air, and before it had time to condense it was probably smothered by the cloud of smoke and dust raised by the bursting of the boiler."—Baltimore Sun.

PREPARED CHALK.

Practically all the tooth powders of commerce have the same base—prepared chalk. This is mixed with some saponaceous compound, flavored a little, put up in an attractive bottle or jar and, behold, a tooth powder costing from 15 to 50 cents per vessel, according to the place you buy it and the celebrity of the name on the label.

For 15 cents enough tooth powder to last a family a year can be put together. Buy the chalk in bulk and with it some ground castile soap, which all druggists sell. Put them together in the proportion of one-eighth soap to seven-eighths chalk, mix well and fill any and all the empty tooth powder jars or bottles that you may have around. If flavoring is liked, it is easy to add a little wintergreen or peppermint.

So with the various antiseptic and disinfecting solutions that, attractively bottled and judiciously advertised, coax pennies unnecessarily out of our purses. There is no better cleanser and general sweetener than a saturated solution of bicarbonate of soda. Fill a pint or a quart bottle, if you want to, with clear water and add bicarbonate of soda got from the druggist, not the grocer, until the liquid will take up no more. Keep this on your toilet shelf and use it as a mouth wash, etc.

When it comes to an antiseptic fluid, any surgeon will tell you that there is practically nothing in materia medica better than salt and water. It is always at hand and is safe and effectual.—New York Post.

An Ample and Sweet Revenge.

A young Englishman who had been repeatedly and unnecessarily annoyed by the St. Malo custom house officials made up his mind to get even with them. The last time he had crossed he had brought a ferret over with him, and a minute or so before landing he transferred the creature to a black bag, which he carried with extreme care and an evident desire not to attract attention. This immediately fetched one of the douaniers, and he swooped down on it with joyful alacrity.

Our young Englishman pretended not to understand the official until the Frenchman made his meaning clear by unmistakable signs. Then he slowly and reluctantly unlocked the bag. The douanier plunged in his hand, and—but my pen (let me put it down to my pen) refuses to adequately describe the dramatic scene that ensued. Suffice it to say that the bare recital of it was balm to my wounded spirit. I only hope it was our friend at the custom house who made the ferret's acquaintance. Revenge is sweet.—Continental Chit-Chat.

What Two Scotchmen Did.

In the early days of California two Scotchmen emigrated thither. One of them, an enthusiastic lover of Scotland, took with him a thistle, the national emblem. The other took a small swarm of honeybees. Years have gone. The Pacific coast is, on the one hand, cursed with the Scotch thistle, which the farmers find impossible to exterminate; on the other hand, the forests and fields are laden with the sweetness of honey, which has been and still is one of the blessings of the western slope of the Rocky mountains.

PURITAN DAY

At West Branch School Wednesday

BRAVE INDIANS

And Puritan Maidens Give an Interesting Entertainment.

The West branch school house was the scene of a very pretty Colonial day Wednesday afternoon as a prelude to Thanksgiving vacation. Miss Richardson's and Miss Corey's rooms united in preparing a program, which was beautifvlly carried out by the pupils of both rooms. Even the pines of New England were in evidence and formed a background in decorations for the little pilgrims and pilgrim maidens who sang and recited and read and spun and went through several hair breadths escapes from capture by Indians. The old fireplace was there and even the boat which brought its cargo of pilgrims from Holland to New England's stern and rock bound coast.

All the children were in some sort of Puritan costume and half the boys in Indian war paint and feather and with air guns and pistols made the afternoon very exciting for the other half with unexpected sallies and attacks.

The Pilgrim in Song and Story was an interesting part in which each little entertainer told the story of the early time Georgie Witheral was the chief of a band of Indians that one would hate to meet even now after dark and he told the story of civilization from the Indian's standpoint. It was a very enjoyable afternoon for the little folks and their visitors and reflects great credit upon the teachers, who have so patiently trained the children for all their parts. There were many guests present and a ten cent collection was taken to purchase pictures for the rooms. Following is the program:

November Song.

UPDIKE--POTTER

Miss Edna Potter and Mr. Earl Updike

UNITED FOR LIFE.

Happy Home Wedding took Place Last Evening.

The marriage of Miss Edna Potter and Mr. Earl Updike was solemnized last evening at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Potter on Pottawatamie street, in the presence of only the immediate families. Rev. M. T. Seelye was the officiating clergyman.

The groom is well known and popular in Tecumseh, where he has always resided. He has secured for his life partner a most charming young lady prepossessing in appearance, with a grace of manner and kindliness of disposition that have won for her a large circle of friends. She has been employed for some time as operator at the telephone office. The HERALD unites with numerous friends in extending congratulations and best wishes.

Resolutions.

At a meeting of the physicians of Tecumseh called at the office of Dr. George Howell, Tuesday evening, Nov. 26, 1901, to take professional action relative to the death of the lamented Dr. Lemon Barnes, the following resolutions were adopted:

RESOLVED that in the death of Dr. Lemon Barnes, we lose a professional brother who was ever a sincere and true lover of his profession; that in fraternal intercourse he won our esteem, respect and love; that to his patients he was gentle, honest and sincere; that to professional life he added a Christian faith; by which in his last hours, when he lay down to rise not again, he was, sustained and soothed by an unfaltering trust like one who wraps the drapery of his couch around him and lies down to pleasant dreams."

RESOLVED that as far as possible we attend his funeral together as expressive of our respect to the memory of a professional confrere.

RESOLVED that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the sorrowing companion of our deceased brother, and a copy be offered each of our village papers for publication.

PROF. WALLACE'S

Sanitarium at Adrian Completed and Named by

THE FAMOUS MYOPATH

The "Physicians' Auxiliary Retreat" is the name Prof. Wallace has chosen for his new sanitarium, located at 51 West Maumee street, Adrian. This is in honor of the physicians who have aided and made possible the establishing of such a home for the proper treatment by myopathy massage and electric baths of cases not benefited by medical assistance.

At last the carpenters and plumbers are through and Prof. Wallace is permanently located in his own building. No one is more pleased than the professor, for things have been in an unsettled state for some time back, but now that the last nail has been driven and the doors are thrown open for business and the professor's face bears nothing but smiles and his future success will be watched by all with interest.

Professor Wallace started the practice of Myopathy about nine years ago, having previously prepared himself by diligent study and persistent attention to the details of this line of work. His first lesson in massage was given by Dr. H. D. Hull, his first lesson in anatomy by Dr. V. A. Baker. Starting at the foot of the ladder with only a few timely suggestions the professor has worked himself up to a standard that brings people here to take his treatment from all parts of the country.

Following is a list of physicians who have taken kindly to and made possible the building up of a home for Myopathy. The professor extends his sincerest thanks to these worthy sirs and appreciates their efforts in his behalf greatly: Drs. A. M. Stephenson, J. K. Piersol, H. D. Hull, Geo. B. M. Seager, M. R. Morden, D. L. Treat, V. A. Baker, J. H. Reynolds, S. Henri Browne, and ex-Mayor Hon. Willard Stearns. From out of town the list comprises Dr. Frost of Tecumseh; Dr. Tracy, of Manchester; Dr. Knight, of Detroit; Dr. McDonald, Petersburg; Dr. Yale, Deerfield; Dr. Blair, Morenci.

The professor also feels as though thanks was due to those who so ably and willingly assisted him in remodeling the buildings of his new home: Taylor Bros., hardware; D. M. Baker, lumber; A. Stevenson & Son, lumber; Matthes Bros., tile and cement; Beck & Vogt, the carpenter contractors; Richardson & Alexander, masons, and G. H. Matthes, the painter and paper hanger contractor. Thanks is also due Henry Harris and John Lawson for their willing assistance.

The plumbing was ably looked after by Crittenden & Son and Harry Fee, of the Adrian Electric Light Co., attended to the wiring of all the buildings.

A large, commodious barn has just been completed that will house the retreats carryalls. This barn is 46 feet long, 21 feet wide, 18 feet high, furnished with water and incandescent lights. The carryalls make trips to all parts of the city day or night; can be called by both phones. Thanks is extended to the following workmen who raised this barn: Bert VanDoren, foreman; Will H. Taylor, Melville Lane and Louis Spivins carpenters.

The professor's scope for treatment when Myopathy is suggested is unlimited. He personally gives all treatments, will call at your home if need be and makes trips out of town at a nominal fee.

The rooming accommodations for patients at the Physicians' Auxiliary Retreat will not accommodate over a dozen at the present time; meals may be had at the Gibson House at special rates.

To those who desire treatment or wish to know more about Myopathy, the professor will gladly send them detailed information and testimonials from most any part of the country. Among the many so called incurables the professor has been unusually successful. Out of 50 hopeless cases last year, he succeeded in all but eleven, divided as follows: Two in Manchester, one in Clinton, one in Ann Arbor, one in Detroit, one in Tecumseh, one in Morenci, two in Clayton and two in Adrian.

A THIEVES' MARKET.

ONE OF THE PROMINENT PLACES IN THE CITY OF MEXICO.

Any Policeman Will Show You the Way to It and You May There Purchase Stolen Goods by the Single Piece or by the Carload.

If you want to know the time in the City of Mexico; if you need household goods, objects of art or of personal adornment; in fact, if there is anything you desire from a pincushion to a redhot stove—just ask a policeman.

He will point the way to the thieves' market without any more idea of laws that deal with those who receive stolen goods than if you had asked him the way to the best hotel in the city or to one of the theaters or to the National palace. The official of the law will not hesitate to tell you that it is directly across the street from the National palace, east of the Zocalo—the park of the peons—and that if you are timid about the size of the load you wish to take there the gate is large enough to drive the biggest truck through without inconvenience. It is a very simple matter to find the thieves' market.

It is no small establishment, but a city institution, with a court as large as a city block, and it is crowded from morning to night with those who are looking for bargains without the slightest idea of moral wrong in buying stolen goods. Indeed it is stated that now and then persons find property once belonging to them exposed there for sale at prices so reasonable that it would be absurd to go to law about it and lay up against the delightful convenient "manana" the trouble of appearing in court.

The market is just what its name implies—a thieves' market, where moths do not corrupt, because there is always a stream of purchasers for goods at ridiculous prices. Nothing remains in stock over a few days. Spread out on tables or piled high on the ground can be found samples of almost anything, for the Mexican ratero is not particular what he steals. The thieves do not themselves act as the salesmen, for this would be dishonest even to the Mexican mind. They dispose of their plunder either for a lump sum or take a commission from the sellers.

There is no assortment of goods as to class or kind. It is a case of pick and choose. Crockery, cutlery, tinware and cooking utensils are the main staples, for the Mexican is careless, and the thieves of his kind find this sort of plunder easy to get and with a ready market. The proprietor of one of the well known local restaurants admits that nearly all his knives, forks and table linen come from the thieves' market. He makes it a point regularly to visit there to replenish what may have been stolen from his own place.

But it is perhaps in the line of curiosities, books and objects of art that the thieves' market is most interesting. The libraries of the monks, scattered in the war of reform, are represented now and then. The thieves, of course, know nothing of the value of the books.

Recently a folio of Shakespeare, bound in vellum, in splendid condition, notwithstanding the long ago date of its publication, was picked up by a book lover for $1.50 in Mexican silver. Several bibliophiles of the United States have regular agents in the thieves' market, and it pays them.

With Maxmilian and his court many rare works of art came to Mexico. In the rush away from Mexico these were left behind. Within the last month a fan, beyond doubt by Watteau, was bought in the thieves' market for $8. The painting is still bright, the lace exquisite and rare, and the ivory sticks, inlaid with gold, are still intact.

Mexico's many wars have made the country an arsenal of obsolete weapons. Swords, guns and firearms from the time of Cortes to the present decade can be picked up in the thieves' market for little or nothing. Some of them, outside of their value as curios, are of intrinsic worth, as an American discovered not long ago. He bought for a trifle an old sword, tarnished and dirty. The style of the hilt pleased him. When he had it cleaned, he found that scabbard, hilt and blade were inlaid with rich gold of marvelous artistic design.—City of Mexico Letter in New York Times.

The Last Nickel.

The Philadelphia Record tells of a little Sunday school boy who always receives a nickel from his father to place in the collection plate. Last Sunday his father gave him two nickels, saying, "One is for the Lord, and the other is for yourself." As it was too early to start for Sunday school the little boy sat on the porch steps, playing with the two nickels. After awhile he dropped one of them, and it disappeared down a crack. Without a moment's hesitation and still clutching the remaining coin in his clinched fist, he looked up at his father, exclaiming, "Oh, pop, there goes the Lord's nickel!"

SINGULAR MAXIMS.

Old Time Rules For the Table by the German Poet Von Zirkler.

That our ancestors were not so well managed as we are is evident from the following rules, which were laid down by Tommasin von Zirkler, a German poet, in regard to the conduct of a host and his guest at a dinner party. These singular maxims were recently unearthed and have now been reprinted:

"Every host should take care that his guests have enough to eat and that they are not served with dishes that they do not want. In return the guests should behave properly and should be satisfied with whatever is placed before them.

"A guest should not eat all his bread before the first dishes are served, neither should he eat with both hands nor drink nor talk when his mouth is full.

"It is not polite to turn toward one's neighbor and to offer him a winecup from which one is still drinking.

"One should not eat greedily and hastily, as though the dinner had been paid for, neither should one take any food from his neighbor's plate. In a word, each person should accept what is offered and ask for nothing else.

"When there is some one on the right hand, it is permissible to eat with the left hand.

"While one is drinking the eyes should be steadily fixed on the winecup.

"It is improper to place one's hand in a dish while another person is taking some food from it.

"One should always have the hands clean and the nails cut short, as otherwise those persons who are eating from the same dish are likely to become disgusted.

"A guest should never put his elbows on the table, neither should he chatter all the time nor clean his teeth with a knife."—Chicago Herald.

TOOK HIS ADVICE.

A Veterinary Surgeon of Battle Creek Tells About It.

How many times in life a few words of good advice coming from a friend one can depend upon, will save us hours perhaps months of misery. The following which coming from Battle Creek will interest our readers. Dr. Oliver Guiteaux, a veterinary surgeon of that city, a well known man there, as well as in Kalamazoo and Marshall, speaks of his experience with the little conqueror and the result of a few timely words of advice, he says:

"I was standing in Amberg & Murphy's drug store in Battle Creek one day when a friend of mine came in and asked for a box of kidney pills. After he had made his purchase I said quietly to him, "You have made a mistake in buying those." His reply was "How is that?" I said Doan's Kidney Pills are worth all others put together. As he wanted to know my reasons for thinking so I told him that my kidneys had bothered me for years, that I suffered from backache until I could scarcely stand it, that I had nearly every symptom to be found where the kidneys are affected, that I had used remedy after remedy, including box after box of the one he had just purchased, and that until I had used Doan's Kidney Pills I might have taken as many spoonfuls of water, in fact, I think some of them hurt me. A couple of weeks after this I met him on the street, when he said: "Doc. Doan's Kidney Pills are just as you represented. After using the box about which we had a conversation in Amberg & Murphy's drug store I was as bad as ever. I then procured Doan's and stuck to their treatment until they cured me."

Mistress—Mary, Mary! I've just broken my handglass. You know how unlucky it is—seven years' unhappiness.

THE HOME DOCTOR.

A soft linen bandage saturated with a 1 per cent solution of carbolic acid is excellent for a blistered finger.

To relieve a nervous headache apply hot water to the temples and back of the neck. A hot footbath will also materially aid.

Earache can frequently be cured by wringing out a flannel in boiling water, sprinkling a few drops of laudanum on it and applying it to the ear.

A small quantity of vinegar will generally destroy immediately any insect that may find its way into the stomach, and a little salad oil will kill any insect that may enter the ear.

When your feet are very tired and hot, plunge them into a basin of cold water and keep them there until a sensation of warmth begins. Then dry them and put on fresh stockings and shoes.

A writer states that a teaspoonful of finely grated nutmeg in a teacupful of cold water taken night and morning the first day and then missing a day, repeated on the third day, is a sure cure for boils.

A Four Footed Bird.

There is a four footed bird, the Opisthocomus cristatus, which has such anomalies of structure that it is impossible to class it along with any other family. It is one of those survivors which tell us of extinct groups of whose past existence we would otherwise have remained forever ignorant. These, the only species of four footed birds, inhabit the island of Marajo in the lower Amazon. It is only during infancy that this remarkable feature of these birds is seen, the two fore feet appearing early in the development of the embryo and continuing perfectly formed for several days after hatching, when they are gradually shed. It is also known as the hoactzin or evil smelling bird, the flesh having an unpleasant odor, making it unpalatable to both man and carnivorous animals, which is probably one cause of its survival.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflamation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surface.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Dolls.

The ivory doll of the Roman child was too costly for the ages that followed the fall of the empire. For many centuries dolls must have been chiefly of home manufacture. The first shop made dolls after the middle ages were the jointed wooden dolls of the Netherlands. These were known in England and in this country, too, in colonial times as "Flanders babies."

HE COULD NOT FACE IT

RETIRING TREASURER OF LOUISVILLE COMMITS SUICIDE.

DEFALCATION IN ACCOUNTS PROMPTS HIM TO DO IT.

DID THE ACT UPON SEEING HIS PICTURE IN A PAPER.

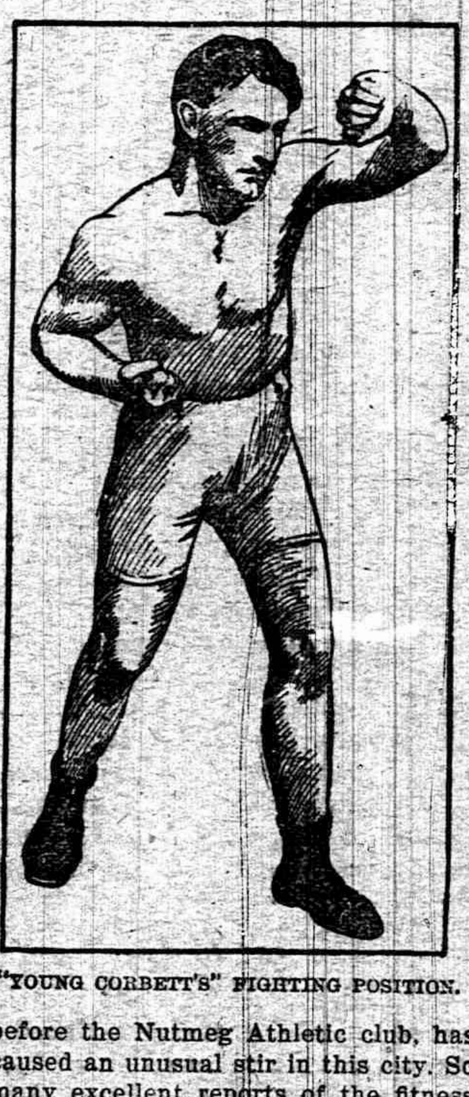
Louisville, Nov. 28.—Stuart R. Young, retiring city treasurer of Louisville, committed suicide by shooting early Wednesday evening in the rear of a warehouse at Nelson and Sixth streets. Mr. Young's books as city treasurer have been under examination by accountants at the city hall preliminary to the office being transferred to the new treasurer, recently elected.

A great sensation was created when the last edition of an evening paper appeared with the story that discrepancies had been found in his accounts. Immediately the friends of Mr. Young began to look for him, not believing the reports. Shortly after 6 p. m. Mr. Young was seen at the ladies' entrance of the Louisville hotel on Main street, where he lived with his bride of a few months. Two newsboys, who knew Mr. Young, ran up and said: "Mr. Young, don't you want a paper? It's got your picture in it." One glance at the double-column headlines told Mr. Young why the paper had printed a double-column picture of him. Instead of entering the hotel he walked down Sixth street towards the river, the newsboys following him on the other side of the street. Just after passing Nelson street Mr. Young turned off between some box cars. The boys feared to follow him any further, and returning to the Louisville hotel described Mr. Young's action to "Kid" Johnson, a hackman, whose carriage stand is in front of the hotel. Johnson followed the direction given by the newsboys and finally found Mr. Young lying face downward in the cinders, his right arm under him. Seeing a bullet hole behind Mr. Young's right ear, Johnson turned the body over. Then he saw a pistol in Mr. Young's right hand. Life was extinct.

FOR WORLD'S CHAMPIONSHIP.

Billy Rothwell to Meet Terry McGovern at Hartford.

Hartford, Conn., Nov. 28.—The fight for the featherweight championship of the world between Terry McGovern of Brooklyn, the present holder of the title, and Billy Rothwell, better known as "Young Corbett," of Denver, Colo., which is to take place this afternoon before the Nutmeg Athletic club, has caused an unusual stir in this city. So many excellent reports of the fitness of "Young Corbett" have been current that opinions of staunch adherents of the champion have been slightly shaken. That the contestants are pretty equally matched as to hight, girth and age there is no question. Everyone who has seen McGovern fight knows that the champion is a rugged, intrepid, two-handed boxing machine, and while the newcomer has shown a world of cleverness on nearly every essential point, no one seems satisfied that he is up to a grueling mix-up.



"YOUNG CORBETT'S" FIGHTING POSITION.

Dragged Over Frozen Ground.

Owosso, Mich., Nov. 28.—James Bryant, 60 years of age, an Ohio man who has just moved to Bancroft, was fatally injured at that place yesterday noon. His team ran away, dragging Bryant, entangled in the reins, over the frozen grounds. He was terribly cut on the head and face and is unconscious.

Heart Beats

that are too fast or too slow, too strong or too weak, are not the kind that come from a healthy heart. Remember, every heart that pains, flutters, palpitates, skips beats, and every heart that causes fainting spells, shortness of breath or smothering, is weak or diseased, and cannot keep the blood circulating at its normal rate.

"My heart was very weak and kept skipping beats until it missed from one to three beats a minute. Well knowing what the result would be if this trouble was not stopped, I began taking Dr. Miles' Heart Cure, and two bottles brought the heart action to its normal condition."

POOL TABLE POCKETS.

They Are Made For the Most Part In Farmers' Houses.

"An odd occupation, surely," said a man acquainted with the business, "is that of knitting pool table pockets. A few persons find steady employment at it, but the greater number of those engaged in it take it up incidentally to some other employment.

"Of all the pool pockets used the largest proportion is made in farmhouses by farmers' wives and daughters. The women who do this work are mostly Germans and Swedes.

"Pool table pockets are all handmade. The largest producer of pool pockets is a concern in New York that employs at this work about thirty families, these mostly residing on Long Island. The bundles of material for the several families thus employed are made up in the shop and delivered to them, the finished pockets being at the same time collected.

"The knitting is done with a needle twenty inches in length, and the pockets are knitted with a peculiar knot that will not pull out. You might cut a hole in a pocket with a knife, but the hole would go no farther. As the pocket is knitted it will not pull or draw apart.

"Pool pockets are made of cotton, of wool and of silk. The first are sold for $1.25 or thereabouts a dozen. Silk pockets sell for about $10 a dozen.

"I should say that of all the pockets made perhaps half are of cotton, three-eighths of wool and one-eighth of silk. The pockets are most commonly green, but they are made in other colors as well—in maroon, for example, and in yellow and in blue for tables with cloths in those colors.

"Output? Well, the production of them is somewhat scattered. I should say that it might amount annually to about 10,000 dozen, valued on an average, roughly estimated, at $4 a dozen, making the total value of the output somewhere about $[illegible]0,000."—New York Sun.

There Was a Tale to It.

The girl at the music counter has some funny experiences. For instance, the other day a well dressed woman bustled up to the music department of a great store and said in a loud voice:

"Have you got a piece of music called 'The Crocodile's Tail?'"

"No, madam," answered the clerk. "We have one called"—

"But you had it here last week. I saw it," she interrupted. "It is from 'The Burgomaster,' and I want it today."

"Are you sure that is the name of it?" asked the clerk.

"Yes, that's the name. I remember it distinctly. Are you sure you haven't got it?"

"We have one called 'The Tale of the Kangaroo,' from 'The Burgomaster,'" volunteered the clerk, and after some hesitation on the part of the customer "The Tale of the Kangaroo" was sold.—New York Herald.

The Rival Gorillas.

Once upon a time a gorilla was in love, and while he delayed his proposal a rival appeared on the scene, gained the affections of the one he loved, proposed, was accepted and soon married her.

A year passed, and the disappointed lover called on his successful rival while he was swinging on a hickory limb, with a crying baby in his arms, and silently listened to his wife scolding him for some fancied breach of household regulations.

"That was a narrow escape," he said as he turned quickly in his tracks and hurried away.

Moral.—Delays are dangerous for the other fellow.—New York Herald.

He Didn't Think So.

"Do you believe all geniuses are egotists?"

"No. Look at me. Ever since I can remember I have kept myself back by placing too light an estimate on my importance and ability."—Chicago Record-Herald.

(Benson's Plaster is Pain's Master.)

These are days of records and of the beating of records. Benson's Porous Plaster, for quickness of action and thoroughness of cure, has no records to beat except its own.

Benson's Plaster, always the best, always the leader, is to-day better than ever. It sticks to the skin but never sticks in its tracks. It marches on.

The people not only want to be cured but cured quickly—and Benson's Plaster does it. Coughs, colds, lumbago, asthma, bronchitis, liver and kidney complaints, and other ills approachable by an external remedy, yield to Benson's as ice does to heat.

Neither Belladonna, Strengthening or Capsicum plasters are to be compared with Benson's. People who have once tested the merits of Benson's Plaster have no use for any other external remedy.

More than 5,000 physicians and druggists (and a thousand times as many non-professional persons) have called Benson's Plasters one of the few (!) home remedies that can be trusted.

Fifty-five highest awards have been made to it in competition with the best known plasters of Europe and America. Better proof of its merits is inconceivable. Be sure to get the genuine.

For sale by all druggists, or we will prepay postage on any number ordered in the United States, on receipt of 25c. each.

If a Woman

wants to put out a fire she doesn't heap on oil and wood. She throws on water, knowing that water quenches fire. When a woman wants to get well from diseases peculiar to her sex, she should not add fuel to the fire already burning her life away. She should not take worthless drugs and potions composed of harmful narcotics and opiates. They do not check the disease—they do not cure it—they simply add fuel to the fire.

Bradfield's Female Regulator should be taken by every woman or girl who has the slightest suspicion of any of the ailments which afflict women. They will simply be wasting time until they take it. The Regulator is a purifying, strengthening tonic, which gets at the roots of the disease and cures the cause. It does not drug the pain, it eradicates it. It stops falling of the womb, leucorrhea, inflammation and periodical suffering, irregular, scanty or painful menstruation; and by doing all this drives away the hundred and one aches and pains which drain health and beauty, happiness and good temper from many a woman's life. It is the one remedy above all others which every woman should know about and use.

HEAD NOISES CEASE IMMEDIATELY.
F. A. WERMAN, OF BALTIMORE, SAYS:

BALTIMORE, Md., March 30, 1901.

Gentlemen:—Being entirely cured of deafness, thanks to your treatment, I will now give you a full history of my case to be used at your discretion.

About five years ago my right ear began to sing, and this kept on getting worse, until I lost my hearing in this ear entirely.

I underwent a treatment for catarrh, for three months, without any success, consulted a number of physicians, among others, the most eminent ear specialist of this city, who told me that only an operation could help me, and even that only temporarily, that the head noises would then cease, but the hearing in the affected ear would be lost forever.

I then saw your advertisement accidentally in a New York paper, and ordered your treatment. After I had used it only a few days according to your directions, the noises ceased, and to-day, after five weeks, my hearing in the diseased ear has been entirely restored. I thank you heartily and beg to remain Very truly yours,

F. A. WERMAN, 730 S. Broadway, Baltimore, Md.

Women And Jewels.

Jewels, candy, flowers, man—that is the order of woman's preferences. Jewels form a magnet of mighty power to the average woman. Even that greatest of all jewels, health, is often ruined in the strenuous efforts to make or save the money to purchase them. If a woman will risk her health to get a coveted gem then let her fortify herself against the insiduous consequences of coughs, colds and bronchial affections by the regular use of Dr. Boschee's German Syrup. It will promptly arrest consumption in its early stages and heal the affected lungs and bronchial tubes and drive the dread disease from the system. It is not a cure all, but it is a certain cure for coughs, colds and all bronchial troubles. You can get Dr. G. G. Green's reliable remedies at J. J. Orr's. Get Green's Special Almanac.

RESULT OF CONGRESS CAUCUSES

Republicans Favor Old Staff, Democrats New Ones.

Washington, Dec. 2.—The caucus of the republican members of the house was held in the hall of representatives Saturday afternoon and lasted about three hours. Speaker Henderson and the old officers of the house were made the unanimous choice of the caucus and the major portion of the time was devoted to an effort, led by Representative Hepburn of Iowa, to effect some change in the rules of the last house.

Mr. Sherman of New York then offered an omnibus resolution for the re-election of the old employes of the house:

Alexander McDowell of Pennsylvania as clerk.

Henry Casson of Wisconsin, sergeant-at-arms.

W. J. Glenn of New York, doorkeeper.

Joseph C. McElroy of Ohio, postmaster.

Henry N. Couden of Michigan, chaplain.

This resolution also was unanimously adopted.

The democratic members of the house met in caucus in the hall of the house at 11 o'clock Saturday. Mr. Hay of Virginia, chairman of the democratic caucus, presided. Without opposition the following selections were made for officers of the house, to be presented at the meeting of the house today:

Speaker—Mr. Richardson of Tennessee.

Clerk—Ex-Rep. James Kerr of Pennsylvania.

Sergeant-at-Arms—Ex-Rep. E. V. Brookshire of Indiana.

Doorkeeper—Charles Edwards of Texas.

Postmaster—James K. Jackson of Alabama.

The most important part of the democratic caucus was the introduction of the following resolution, in substance, by Rep. McClelland of New York:

"Resolved, That we shall promote to the utmost of our power the removal of the oppressive, restrictive and often prohibitory features of the existing tariff.

"2. We shall favor just and generous treatment of the inhabitants of Porto Rico and Cuba.

"3. We are opposed to the subsidy bill presented at the last session as calculated to create a shipping monopoly. We shall oppose the use, in any form, of the money of all the people for the exclusive benefits of all the people.

"4. We shall insist upon the sacred force of the fundamental American rule of democratic self-government."

The presentation of these rules created some dissatisfaction. Mr. Richardson proposed to refer all resolutions to a committee of 12, to report at a future caucus, but his motion was ruled out and instead Ball of Texas proposed the Kansas City platform as a substitute. But this did not take, and the assembly again became noisy. Richardson again introduced his resolution and it was carried.

Some minor resolutions then followed and were accepted.

TWENTY PERSONS DROWNED.

Two Ferry Boats Collide—Dense Fog Causes Accident.

San Francisco, Dec. 2.—The ferry boats Sausalito and San Rafael collided Saturday night in a dense fog and the San Rafael sank in between 10 and 15 minutes. It is thought that not more than 20 persons were drowned, although the San Rafael carried between 150 and 200 passengers. The Sausalito was not seriously injured, and after rescuing all the passengers on the San Rafael that she could, she proceeded to San Francisco under her own steam. The boats belonged to the San Francisco & North Pacific railway. They plied between San Francisco and Sausalito, a suburb across the bay in Marin county. At Sausalito a train connects for Ross Valley and San Rafael, where many San Francisco business men make their summer and winter homes. The San Rafael left San Francisco at 6:15 with between 150 and 200 passengers. There had been a dense fog on the bay all day, and towards evening it seemed to thicken. Captain McKenzie of the San Rafael sent his ship along under a slow bell. He was somewhere near Alcatraz island when the Sausalito, coming from Sausalito to San Francisco, crashed into her. There were but few passengers on the Sausalito, but they were badly frightened and for a few moments it looked as if both ships were going down. When it was seen that the Sausalito was not badly injured, she stood by the San Rafael and officers, crew and passengers engaged in the rescue of the unfortunate passengers of the sinking vessel. Both ships are sidewheelers, and ordinarily carry many hundred passengers. Fortunately this was the winter season and the last trip, so there were not so many passengers as usual.

A later telegram from San Francisco contradicts the report of some 20 being drowned.

San Francisco, Dec. 2.—The number of lives lost in Saturday night's collision on the bay between the ferry boats San Rafael and Sausalito is still a matter of conjecture, and probably will never be accurately determined. So far as known late Sunday afternoon, only three persons are actually known to be missing. They are W. G. Crandall, a resident of Sausalito; Greorge Tredway, a waiter on the San Rafael, and the three-year-old son of Mrs. Waller of Ross Valley. The officers of the sunken vessel strongly maintain that nearly all were saved. About 20 people were injured.

Guerilla Warfare Will Result.

Colon, Dec. 2.—The recapture of Colon is admitted to be almost a death blow to the liberal cause. There is no doubt that guerilla warfare will be resumed in the mountains, but stronger forces and better organization are considered essential requisites for the liberals if they intend to resume the struggle seriously. Both Panama and Colon are quiet. Trains on the railroad still carry armed American guards and are running on time.

Saw Death Near.

"It made my heart ache," writes L. C. Overstreet, of Elgin, Tenn., "to hear my wife congh until it seemed her weak and sore lungs would collapse. Good doctors said she was so far gone with Consumption that no medicine or earthly help could save her, but a friend recommended Dr. King's New Discovery and persistent use of this excellent medicine saved her life." It's absolutely guaranteed for Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, Asthma and all Throat and Lung diseases. 50c and $1.00 at C. A. Wright's. Trial bottles free.

GRAVES UPROOTED

Hogs Get Into a St. Joseph Cemetery.

CITIZENS ARE MUCH PUT OUT

Animals Do Much Damage Besides Uprooting About a Dozen Graves—No Fence Protection Offered—Trouble May Ensue.

St. Joseph, Mich., Dec. 2.—Three years ago this city purchased the Highland cemetery, on Cleveland avenue, two miles south of the limits. For several years William Pike, living on a nearby farm, has been engaged in the pig-raising industry. Andrew Wessing, whose father lives on a farm just west of the cemetery, came to this city Sunday and reported that he saw a drove of hogs roaming about the place. Upon personal investigation he discovered the sensational fact that the hogs had not only trampled over the flowers, but had rooted up several graves and surrounding lots. Dozens of graves and lots have been destroyed and several citizens who have relatives buried in the cemetery are indignant. It has been reported that no fences protect the cemetery proper from the adjoining farm, and that the hogs have been at liberty to roam at large for years.

No Bride for Him.

St. Joseph, Mich., Dec. 2.—Joseph Anderson of Chicago arrived in this city Sunday morning. Anderson's mission to St. Joe was to meet and wed Miss Amanda Johnson of Evansville, Ind., but he failed to find his would-be bride. Two weeks ago Anderson visited Miss Johnson at her Indiana home and it was agreed that marriage would take place in this city yesterday morning. It was further planned that Miss Johnson would leave Evansville early Saturday morning and journey alone, arriving in this city during the night. Anderson was to arrive a few hours later from Chicago, and the couple were to be married at noon. Anderson is grief-stricken over the disappointment and returned to Chicago last night. Anderson before leaving for Chicago said that he is satisfied that Miss Johnson never intended to marry him and for that reason chose St. Joe for the ceremony.

HE MADE NINE WILLS.

The Family Was Dissatisfied and One Was Broken.

Jackson, Mich., Dec. 2.—The jury in the Tisch will case came in Sunday morning with a verdict setting aside the will. The case, which has been on trial ten days in the circuit court, involved property amounting to about $12,000, the estate of William Tisch of Waterloo township. He died a year ago, leaving a will which bequeathed most of the property to his wife and son George. Tisch made nine different wills, which are mentioned in the testimony, and it is said even more were made. The contestants claimed Tisch was incompetent and unduly influenced when the last will was made. A son swore he would not attend his father's funeral because of the ill-feeling he had towards his mother, and the testimony indicated the Tisch family tendency to be beligerent. If a division of the property is made according to the statutes, the children will get about a thousand each, while the widow gets dower, etc., amounting to $5,000. It is said the litigation will continue, as much hard feeling has been engendered.

GIRL DIES FROM EXCITEMENT

Caused by the Terrible Penberthy Explosion.

Detroit, Mich., Dec. 2.—When the ill-fated boiler in the Penberthy building let go with such terrible results on Tuesday, some one told Jennie Taggert of 313½ Michigan avenue it was the American Lady Corset Co.'s plant that was destroyed and that her sister who was employed there, and 15 others were killed. Without a word, Jennie started and ran all the way home, hatless and coatless.

When informed by her mother that her sister was safe and that the corset factory had not been destroyed, she sat in a chair and cried hysterically for more than an hour and then gradually became unconscious. Oct. 16, a year ago, she was nearly killed in the Witchell shoe factory fire. The sudden shock of Tuesday, bringing back all the horrors of her own experience, was too much for her. Inflammation of the brain set in and she died Saturday night.

Lowe was knocked to the ground several times before bystanders and the authorities could interfere. He received several blows about the face and heart and was removed to a nearby house and revived. A report received here stated he had suffered a relapse and was suffering from internal injuries. Great fear is being entertained for his recovery.

Financial Condition Alarming.

Manila, Dec. 2.—The financial situation in the Philippine islands is causing considerable alarm. In an interview published in Manila, Henry C. Ide, chief of the department of finance and justice, referred to the probable enforcement of an alteration in the immediate future, of the present government parity of two Mexican dollars for one gold dollar. The United States postoffice here now refuses, except to government employes, to issue money orders in exchange for Mexican silver. The banks of Manila have been making from 6 to 8 per cent on exchange. Merchants and others are forced to carry their accounts in Mexican silver.

FIRE FIEND AGAIN

Makes Big Holes in Two Western Towns.

DYNAMITE CHECKS FLAMES

Plainfield, Wis., and Waukee, Iowa, Are the Suffering Villages—Damages in Wisconsin Town Amount to $50,000, Covered by Insurance.

Milwaukee, Nov. 30.—A special from Plainfield, Wis., says: Seven buildings, all frame save one, valued at $30,000, with stocks valued at $20,000, were destroyed by fire last night. The loss is covered by insurance.

The fire was checked by the use of dynamite, with which frame buildings in the patch of the flames were blown up.

Des Moines, Iowa, Nov. 30.—The north part of the village of Waukee was destroyed by fire last night. Both telephone offices were burned.

Some Favorable News.

Sofia, Nov. 30.—According to a letter dated Duznitza, Nov. 28, Miss Stone and Mme. Tsilka are still alive. The letter further says that at a recent meeting of the committee, held in Dubnitza, it was definitely decided not to kill the prisoners upon any pretext whatever. Nevertheless the committee insisted upon the payment of the full amount of the ransom. A naive suggestion is current in political circles here to the effect that the United States should force Turkey to pay the balance of the ransom and as soon as the prisoners are in safety force Bulgaria to punish those persons guilty of their abduction.

A New Pugilist.

Cleveland, Nov. 30.—Tom Jenkins, the champion wrestler, intends to turn pugilist and has issued a challenge to meet James J. Jeffries in a glove contest for the world's championship and a reasonable side bet. Jenkins has long been known by the public only as a wrestler, but he is equally skillful with the gloves, and he believes that the greater financial emoluments accruing from the ring would warrant his adopting pugilism as a profession. He does not intend, however, to give up wrestling entirely, but will meet all bona fide challengers in both wrestling and boxing.

She Entertained Indians.

New York, Nov. 30.—Mrs. Russell Sage, who is interested in the subject of Indian education, invited the entire Carlisle Indian football team to her home on Fifth avenue yesterday. Mrs. Sage invited the boys to her home early in the morning, and they went up in a body from the Fifth Avenue hotel. The arrival of the "tribe," many of whom bore traces of Thursday's struggle with Columbia, was a complete surprise to Mr. Sage, but he received the Indians cordially. Mrs. Sage gave each of them a present before leaving.

A Great Secret.

Charlie—Oh, I want to be rich.

THE AUTHORITIES DIFFER

As to Number of Seneca Wreck Train Passengers.

Adrian, Mich., Nov. 30.—The inquest over the dead on the Wabash wreck started yesterday morning in the court house. Prosecutor Jacob W. Sampson conducted the investigation in behalf of the county. Judge Richard A. Watts of the firm of Watts, Bean & Smith, represented the Wabash railroad. Three witnesses were examined and the inquest was adjourned until afternoon.

Train Dispatcher Harvey G. Mann of Montpelier was the first witness. He testified to the system of train dispatching and to the records of order No. 82, which it is claimed was disobeyed by the conductor and engineer of train No. 4. The testimony of Dispatcher Mann and both the operators at Montpelier and Holloway, and all the records of the Wabash railroad produced before the jury showed the following state of affairs:

Operators at Montpelier and Holloway received the order No. 82 at 6:08. The operator at Montpelier in copying it made three copies with a stylus on flimsy paper. The top two copies he gave to Conductor Martin of train 4 when it arrived at Montpelier. Conductor Martin read aloud the order, handed back to him and then signed it. The operator then took the order as signed to the telegraph instrument and telegraphed the train dispatcher conductor's signature in receipt of the order. This completed the order, and the dispatcher was assured that the proper signature of receipt had been attached by Conductor Martin. The Montpelier operator then gave the two copies of the order back to Conductor Martin. It was the conductor's duty to then take one copy to the engineer and read it aloud to him before giving it to him. The conductor should then do the same with the brakeman, while the engineer with his copy should read same to the fireman.

According to Conductor Eames, who took up the tickets of the emigrants, he had 190 passengers on board the whole train. One through passenger got on at Holloway, one through and seven locals at Adrian.

The officials of the road, however, fail to agree among themselves as to the number of victims. Attorney Winston, who represented the head office in the investigation, stated that there was only one emigrant car, containing not more than 43 persons; that 30 of these went safely to St. Louis; that 20 were at Peru injured, and seven unidentified dead.

Superintendent Burns stated there were not more than 50 emigrants, 15 in the hospital at Peru and 20 gone to St. Louis, and that the dead would not reach 22.

Conductor Trowl of No. 13 said that not more than 25 were dead out of 190 passengers on his train.

NOW FOR THE JURY.

Mrs. Quimby's Case Will Be Consigned to Them Today.

Ithaca, Mich., Nov. 30.—At the morning session of the circuit court in the murder trial of Mrs. Quimby, Prosecuting Attorney Kirby, in opening his argument, made the motion that the question of insanity be excluded from the consideration of the jury, as well as that of coercion. Judge Stone, after excusing the jury, said that he would take the matter of insanity under advisement, but that the question of coercion could not in any sense be argued before the jury, as he should entirely eliminate it from their consideration.

Mr. Kirby, in a very strong argument, said that the defendant was responsible for the commission of the crime as charged; that she was competent to distinguish between right and wrong, and had administered the morphine which had caused the death of the children. She had made a confession to that effect, stating that she expected to spend her days in prison.

Mr. Mathews followed for the defense in a very strong plea, setting forth the theory of insanity. He took the ground that the respondent, being a mother, the murder was an unnatural act, and therefore she must be insane, her conflicting statements also indicating a diseased mind. Mr. Myers and Mr. Leet spoke for the defense, the latter comparing Mrs. Quimby's several statements to those of other insane persons.

T. W. Whitney closed for the people.

THE FIREMAN'S ...WOOING

The Story of a Girl Who Chose Not Wisely.

"Sit here, please," said Fanny as she stood with her shapely hands upon the back of a chair that she had drawn a little way out from the table. It was the boast of the proprietor that he had the handsomest lot of waitresses on the road, and the queen of the collection was Fanny McCann. That's how she happened to be head waitress, for she could not know much of the business. She had come to the place partly because her widowed mother was poor and partly to gratify a consuming desire to pose as the prettiest girl there, for she had been consulting her mirror.

The fireman frowned, but took a seat next to the proprietor of the Mint Julep. The fireman's face, newly washed and hardly rubbed, glistened in the glare of the electric light, and the same light played upon the jeweled hands and immaculate shirt front of the Julep man. The fireman bowed coldly, and the other, feeling a certain superiority in the matter of dress and personal appearance, smiled.

The head waitress, taking a position at one of the windows, stood looking at the two men, both of whom had made love to her. She had purposely seated them so as to get their faces in one frame, as it were, for she had been unable to forsake one and cleave to the other. She respected the fireman—she had loved him once and had acknowledged it to him—but she was dazzled by the handsome, well groomed proprietor of the Mint Julep. Once or twice the fireman ventured to look up, but each time he saw her gazing upon his rival, and his heart was filled with dread.

"What time shall I call?" he asked as Fanny handed him his ticket.

"Not before 9. I detest being first in a ballroom."

"Suppose we say 8:30? It will be 9 by the time we reach the hall."

"Nine," said Fanny, nodding at the Julep man as he passed out, with his chinchilla thrown gracefully over his shoulders.

"But I'm on the reception committee."

"Then go and 'recep' and come back for me. I shan't leave the house before 9. My, how gay you are!"

The fireman went out with a heavy heart. Fanny was getting on. She had not used such language to him before, and it cut him to the quick. He remembered how he had begged her to keep out of the eating house and tried to hint to her mother that the place was full of lures.

"It's only a short step in the direction of danger," he said. "A public dinner room, camp meeting, the skating rink, and"—

"Stop," said Fanny's mother. "I will not have you hint even that Fanny is capable of being bad."

And so the fireman had been powerless to prevent the pure young girl from putting herself in this position.

Promptly at 9 o'clock he called for Fanny. She would be out in a moment, her mother said.

During the half hour in which he waited for the expiration of a woman's "moment" the fireman noticed a number of new pieces of furniture; also he noticed that Fanny's mother was a little reserved. Fanny herself, while amply deliberate, was irritable and nervous. Conversation seemed to go slowly with them, like a heavy train on an up grade.

When they entered the ballroom, the fiddlers were already fiddling, and they fell in line for the opening walk round.

Over in one end of the hall there was a bank of plants and ferns, loaned by leading citizens for the firemen's annual ball, and just in front of the oasis stood the Julep man, immaculate as ever and wearing the only evening dress suit in the room.

He was radiant and all the more so by comparison, for not a few of the respectable suits worn by the firemen and their friends were beginning to take on that unmistakable shine that comes with age.

"Oh, Isaac," exclaimed Mrs. Wolfstine to her husband, "what a beautiful young lady! Who is she?"

"She ees not what you say—a lady. She is waitress from zee eating house."

"And who is the handsome gentleman writing on her card?"

"He ees not one gentleman, my dear. He ees ze proprietor of ze Mint 'Ulep."

Now Mrs. Wolfstine marveled that this man should be there dancing with the daughters of the best families in the growing western town. But why should he not be there? Every fireman on the division had sold or tried to sell him a ticket for the annual ball.

The fireman was surprised upon taking Fanny's card to find that his rival had already written upon it.

A half an hour later he took the card again to select a number and found the face of it black with "Julep, Julep, Julep."

This man had been called by that name so much that he had come to answer to it and write it. Indeed, few people in the place knew that he had another name.

It was two hours after midnight when the fireman opened the gate in front of the little frame cottage where the girl's mother lived.

"Well," said the girl, putting the gate between them, "was the ball a success?"

"For some people it was a decided success."

"And for others?"

"A flat failure."

The Cat and the Tail.

Once upon a time a cat who prided herself on her wit and wisdom was prowling about the barn in search of food and saw a tail protruding from a hole.

"There is the conclusion of a rat," she said.

Then she crept stealthily toward it until within striking distance, when she made a jump and reached it with her claws. Alas, it was not the appendage of a rat, but the tail of a snake, who immediately turned and gave her a mortal bite.

Moral.—It is dangerous to jump at conclusions.

A Good Use For Old Graveyards.

These include 100 plots of ground which have been used for interment, parish churchyards and other disused burial grounds, of which the largest is eleven acres and the smallest a few yards square.—Humanitarian.

PROSECUTION ABOUT THROUGH.

Bonine Trial Defense Will Soon Begin Testifying.

Washington, Nov. 30.—Upon the eve of the adjournment yesterday of the criminal court before which Mrs. Lola Ida Bonine is being tried for the killing of James S. Ayres, Jr., District Attorney Gould announced that the government would rest its case after the introduction of one or two more witnesses, and that he expected to conclude at the morning session of the court today. Mr. T. W. Keane will then make a preliminary statement in Mrs. Bonine's behalf and witnesses for the defense will be introduced. It is expected that about 25 of these will be heard. Mrs. Bonine's counsel say that they have not yet decided whether she shall be put upon the stand.

Deputy Coroner Glazebrook yesterday concluded his testimony, and Detective Horne told of the confession which Mrs. Bonine first made to him of her part in the tragedy. Her confession to the chief of police also was read. Dr. Glazebrook gave it as his opinion that the abrasions on Ayres's legs might have been caused by a woman kicking him with sharp-heeled slippers, and said that the bruises on Mrs. Bonine's arms looked as if they might have been made by a man's thumb when he was gripping the arms.

The Philippine Money Question.

Washington, Nov. 30.—Accompanying the annual report of Secretary Root is a report made by Special Commissioner Charles A. Conant, who was sent to the Philippines to investigate the currency situation. His recommendations are submitted to congress for its action. The most important are: That there should be a distinctive Philippine coin of silver which shall be legal tender for 50 cents in gold, to be called the peso, and to contain 25 grammes of silver. The coin is to be issued in such quantities as the trade requires and sustained at a parity with gold by limitation of the amount coined. The Mexican silver dollar and other coins shall cease to be legal tender after a certain date. It also is recommended that national banks in both the Philippines and the United States should have authority to establish branches throughout the islands and in the United States.

Porto Rico's New Treasurer.

San Juan, P. R., Nov. 30.—William Franklin Willoughby, the newly appointed treasurer of the island of Porto Rico, succeeding Jacob Hollender, resigned, has arrived here. He will take his oath of office today. The executive council of Porto Rico, at a special session, raised the bond of the treasurer of the island from $100,000 to $150,000; this action was taken because of the increased funds handled by the treasurer.

Soldiers Are Like Children.

To the medical man the soldier is very like a child—that is to say, he suffers from precisely the same diseases as children. In any large army hospital you will find rows of patients down with measles, scarlatina, diphtheria, mumps and sometimes whooping cough. In fact, the soldiers' hospital is as like as can be to the children's hospital.

Knew an Exception.

"It's always the man with one idea that succeeds in life," the strong minded woman observed.

"I don't know about that," replied the girl. "The only idea Harold Billmore has had in his head for six years is that I'll marry him some day, and I wouldn't do it if he were the last man on earth!"—Chicago Tribune.

An accepted prayer is not always an answered one.

J. W. Bryan, of Lowder, Ill., writes: "My little boy was very low with pneumonia. Unknown to the doctor, we gave him Foley's Honey and Tar. The result was magical and puzzled the doctor, as it immediately stopped the racking cough and he quickly recovered." J. J. Orr.

Ice in the Sickroom.

A medical journal tells how a saucerful of shaved ice may be kept in a sickroom through a day and night if need be, even with a fire in the room. Put the saucer holding the ice in a soup plate and cover it with another. Then place the soup plates thus arranged on a good, heavy pillow and cover with another pillow, pressing the pillows so that the plates are completely imbedded in them. The paragraph adds that one of the best ice shavers is an old jack plane set deep. It should be turned bottom upward and the ice moved backward and forward over the cutter.

Dr. Lemon Barnes.

Dr. Lemon Barnes was born in London, Canada, Sept. 3, 1830 and died at his residence in this village Nov. 26, 1901.

Dr. Barnes was one of a family of fourteen children, of whom three brothers and three sisters are living. When he was about six months old his parents moved to Orion, Mich. He was educated at Grand Rapids, Albion and Ann Arbor. In 1856 he graduated with honor from the Michigan University and later took the degree of M. D. from the Cincinnati Eclectic college. After practicing medicine for three years he entered the army as a surgeon.

Dr. Barnes was married to Miss Harriet Doty, of Manchester, Miss., in 1857. Four children were born to them, all of whom have long preceded their father to the eternal home.

Brother Barnes was converted and joined the M. E. church when but fourteen years of age. At eighteen he was licensed to exhort and after he left the army, he joined the Detroit M. E. conference and began regular ministerial work on such charges as Addison, Ishpeming and Vassar. He spent nineteen happy, successful, consecrated years in the active ranks, then superannuated and came to Tecumseh to live.

For fifteen years Dr. Barnes has resided in Tecumseh and in all that time he has been closely connected with every good work. In the home, in the village, in the G. A. R. post, in the church, everywhere, he has been known for his purity of life and Christian manliness. We shall miss him, all of us, the people whom he served, the minister to whom he was always loyal, his bible class, which he had taught for fourteen years, the church where he was steward, class leader and treasurer for twelve years. We buried him, citizens, members of the G. A. R., members of the church, from the M. E. church in Tecumseh, Nov. 29, 1901 with many tributes of praise from the lips and hands of his friends.

There were several ministers from abroad, who took part in the funeral services: Rev. A. J. Bigelow, Adrian; Rev. B. Gibson, Addison; Rev. M. D. Mott, Ridgeway; and J. P. Varner, Owosso.

CARD OF THANKS.

I hereby wish to express my sincere gratitude to the many kind friends, who have given me their faithfull help and sympathy in this hour of my great affliction. You have all been exceedingly kind to me.

MRS. HARRIET S. BARNES.

The family altar has altered many a family.

FOOT BALL GAME

ADRIAN AND TECUMSEH

Adrian Fought Desperately Against Defeat.

Thanksgiving foot ball game between Adrian and Tecumseh was the hottest game played here since Tecumseh has been in the "game."

Promptly at 3:15 game was called and Dean from Adrian started the ball a rolling and Tecumseh brought the ball back very near the center where a very pretty tackle was made by one of Adrian's men and then started the game in earnest. Tecumseh played two silent plays which Adrian bit so hard that Tecumseh placed the ball about ten more yards in their opposite line, then Rosacrans showed good speed and plenty of knee action and placed the ball still farther along but there came a standstill. Heesen kicked the ball and it sailed through the air and amid cheers and yells it lit behind the goal line and was touched back by one of Tecumseh's men. Then again Adrian took the ball to the center of the field and Dean again placed the ball in play by making a kick off and again the pig skin was pulled and pushed back very near to where it had started, but Adrian held our boys in good shape until Brewer was given the ball and started for Adrian's goal like a race horse and Redner, Adrian's star harbor back, was not in it with "Ribs" for he had started and was too swift for the Red tops of the team.

Heesen kicked goal and at the ending of the first half both teams were fighting at the call of time.

2ND HALF.

Tecumseh kick off Heesen kicked the ball across the line then came a good lively fight Adrian keeping the boys a guessing. Tecumseh recovered the ball on a third down and rushed the ball over the line for a touch back then Heesen again kicked off and Adrian rushed the ball across Tecumseh's goal in short order Dean kicking goal.

Heesen again kicked off and again Adrian's man Redner went down the line and scored a goal and Dean the kick over or goal kick. Once more Heesen kicked and the ball soared out of bounds and at last when the ball was placed in play Adrian had the ball and still held it until the close of the game, which ended in Tecumseh's favor 13 to 12. Adrian's team was a great deal heavier than ours, their team averaging 160 to 170 and our boys 135 to 140.

ROUND ABOUT US.

After being out nine hours, the jury in the case of Mary Hyatt against the Lake Shore railroad, brought in a verdict for the defendant. The case will be carried up to the supreme court.—Ex.

The signs of winter come slowly. Last week J. H. Vandevort, while in the woods picked four violets, whose blossoms were scarce in keeping with the Thanksgiving season.—Hudson Post.

Clarence Bliss has begun suit against the Lamb Wire Fence Co., of Adrian, for $10,000 damages, resulting from injuries received in the company's factory several months since.—Hudson Post.

She was a smart and pretty girl. She wrote the advertisments for a large millinery store in Detroit. Her mind used to run so much on her business that one day when she wrote to her lover to meet her that night at her home she unconsciously added as a postscript, "come early and avoid the rush."—Adrian Press.

Jean Gilday, a handsome high school Miss at Monroe, while at work in the chemical laboratory last week, upset a bottle of pure nitric acid which spattered freely over her neck and shoulder, and ran down her back burning her painfully, but not fatally. This being the second accident of the kind, the authorities will find it necessary to so arrange the acid section that further danger will be averted.—Adrian Press.

An exchange tells of a lady who decided to scare her husband, who was quite a hard drinker, so he would reform To do this she procured a costume of a devil which she saw at a masquerade. The next time the erring spouse came home feeling happy she quickly donned the costume; and as he opened the door she stepped forward and said in a sepulchral tone: "Come with me, I am the devil." The result rather startled her as the answer to her greeting was: "Zat so? Shake, old boy, I'm your brother-in law; I married your sister."

The scientific American gives this receipt, which the whole world should know: At the first indication of diphtheria in the throat, make the room close, then take a teacup and pour in it an equal [illegible] of tar and turpentine, then hold this cup over the fire so as to fill the room with fumes. The patient inhaling the fumes will cough out the membranous matter and the diphtheria will pass off. The fumes of the tar and turpentine loosen the throat and thus afford the relief that has baffled the skill of physicians.

A Wyandotte minister found his people too poor to buy hymn books and being offered the same by a patent medicine house providing they be allowed to insert their advertisement, ordered three dozen for his congregation. He was elated upon receiving them to find no advertisement in the same. The next Sunday he distributed the books, telling them of his good fortune and requesting that they sing 119. His charin may be imagined when they sang the hymn, "Hark, the heavenly angels sing—Johnson's pills are just the thing. The angelic voices meek and mild—two for a man and one for a child."—Fowlerville Review.

Mrs. Will Hawkins was alone at her home last Monday doing the washing. She had removed a hollow oven from over the blaze of a gasoline stove and put in its place a boiler. This boiler extinguished the blaze. Mrs. Hawkins did not notice this. After some time had elapsed she started for the adjoining room, when suddenly she became extremely ill, nearby objects assumed a hazy appearance and she fell unconscious to the floore, where she remained an unknown length of time. then partially regaining her senses she half carwled, half walked to the couch where she again lapsed into uoconsciousness. Here she again remained for a time when by some unknown cause she was aroused and succeeded in getting into the fresh air. The young child sleeping in the adjoining bed room was not apparently affected. It is needless to say that this experience had a very fortuntate ending, considering the circumstances connected with the case. The physicians tell us that the gas from gasoline is even worse than coal gas. Mrs. Hawkins was very weak for a day or two, but is now entirely recovered from the fortunately terminated experience.—Onsted News.

HOW IT SPREADS.

People all over Michigan Talking About it.

How it spreads.

Can't keep a "good thing" down.

Ever notice how good things are imitated?

Better the article, more imitators.

Fortunately the public has a safeguard.

Praise can't be imitated.

And true praise takes root and spreads

Claim is one thing, proof another.

Claim is what the manufacturer says.

Proof is what the people say.

W. S. Kilmer, passenger engineer on the M. C. Ry. residing at No. 214 Orange St., Jackson, Mich., says:

"In 1895 I had considerable trouble with my kidneys from the result of a severe cold which settled there and though I tried every means at hand and treated with doctors the pains through the small of my back became more persistent and severe. To add to my troubles the kidney secretions were unnatural and irregular. At last I was obliged to lay off work. When at home getting no better under the treatment I was then taking, some one advised me to use Doan's Kidney Pills and I procured a box more out of curiosity than from any expectation that they might help me. Now I want this thoroughly understood, when I had finished the box I went back to work without a pain or an ache. But to make matters doubly certain I took a second box. Since that time and that is three years ago, I have neither had an ache nor a pain. Is it any wonder this date, 1898, I recommended Doan's Kidney Pills."

Doan's Kidney Pills for sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Mailed by Foster-MilburnCo., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the U. S.. Remember the name Doan and take no substitute.

A great object in life—A giant.

"Neglected colds make fat graveyards." Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup helps men and women to a happy, vigorous age.

Don't insist on plucking the fruit of blessing before it is ripe.

Bodily pain loses its terror if you've a bottle of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil in the house. Instant relief in cases of cuts, burns, sprains, accidents of any sort.

A Giant Tree.

Near Dakar, in lower Senegal, is an enormous baobab tree whose trunk measures fully seventy-five feet in circumference at the base. The fruit of the baobab, which grows abundantly in Senegal, is called "monkey bread." It is used by the natives for curdling milk and as a specific for certain diseases. Decoctions of the dried leaves are also used as medicine. From the bark strong cords are made, and the gum that exudes from it is employed as a salve. The root of the young baobab is sometimes eaten by the natives.

A Household Sandbag.

A sandbag is a very useful thing to have in the house. Dry the sand thoroughly in the oven and then make a flannel bag about eight inches square. Fill it with the sand, sew up the opening carefully and cover the bag with cotton or linen. This will prevent the sand from sifting out and will allow of the bag being quickly heated when required by placing it in the oven. Sand holds heat a long time and is softer to the feet of an invalid than the ordinary hot water bottle.

The Artichoke.

The artichoke has nothing to do with art or the choking of it. The artichoke is an innocent vegetable, known to the Arabians as the ardischauki, or earth th[illegible]. The Jerusalem artichoke was never seen near Jerusalem. Its first name is a corruption of the Italian girasole, which means turning to the sun. It is a species of sunflower, bearing a tuber like that of a potato.

Her Objection.

"You are not singing that beautiful song, 'I Want to Be an Angel,' with the rest of us," said the teacher.

The little one shook her head.

"What's the use of telling a story about it?" she demanded. "I'm having enough trouble learning to play the piano without bothering with a harp."—Chicago Post.

Snails Are Queer Creatures.

The snail is found everywhere, 3,332 species being known, serving in France as an important item of diet and in this country an attractive inhabitant of the fernery. Some of the large tropical snails, as bulimas, form nests of leaves, their eggs being as large as a pigeon's.

The snail is extremely skillful in mending its shell, and some curious experiments may be tried with them. Thus I have seen a helix of a yellow species attached to another shell of a reddish hue by cutting off the top whir of the latter, when the snail will proceed to weld the two shells together and occupy both, using [illegible] addition as a door and possibl[illegible] wondering at this sudden exte[illegible]ension of its house.

[illegible] the winter some of the snails hibernate or lie dormant until warm weather, just as the snakes do in California. A snail of the Philippine Islands has a faculty of throwing off its tail when seized. This is also true of a West Indian variety—stenophus.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address,

Tried to Improve.

A little girl who made frequent use of the word "guess" was corrected for it and told to say "presume" instead. A lady friend, noticing the admirable set of the little girl's apron, asked something in regard to the pattern.

"Mamma don't cut my dresses an' aprons by a pattern," said the small lady. "She just looks at me an' presumes!"

Well Forged.

Joakley—I understand there's considerable talk now in naval circles about some orders that were forged very skillfully.

Jimson—You say your wife threw the poker at a stray dog and hit you instead.

Jester—Yes, but it was my fault. I had no business standing behind her when she threw.—Ohio State Journal.

Startled the Natives.

Herrara, the Spanish historian, says that Pizarro, when he landed in South America, owed his life and those of his companions to the fact that one of the party fell off his horse by accident. The natives had succeeded in cutting off the retreat of the Spaniards to their ships, when one of the riders was thrown. The Indians were so astonished at the dissolution of partnership that they took flight at once. They had supposed horse and man to be one animal.

Chas. Replogle, of Atwater, O., was in very bad shape. He says: "I suffered a great deal with my kidneys and was requested to try Foley's Kidney Cure. I did so and in four days I was able to go to work again, now I am entirely well." J. J. Orr.

The Ear.

As delicate as the organ of vision is that of hearing, and as careful a watch should be kept upon it, so that no loss of that more exquisite sense may occur.

When several blind persons were questioned as to which they would rather do without, their visual organs or those of hearing, the majority declared in favor of hearing. We feel a compassion for the blind; for the deaf we are not often sympathetic. The spectacle of a sightless individual touches us to tears; that of one who cannot hear provokes almost a feeling of drollery. Yet no doubt the loss of one organ is as pathetic a thing as the loss of the other.

Many erroneous ideas still exist in the public mind that interfere seriously with the work of the skilled aurist. Too many people think that the ear is so delicate an organ that nothing whatever can be done to alleviate any distress arising therein and allow[illegible] a trivial disorder that might b[illegible] rectified by an aurist to bring a[illegible] about a case of partial deafness [illegible] hat settles into permanency.

Dirt In Dainty Carpets.

For housewives who pride [illegible] selves upon the spotless floor coverings The Druggists' Circular gives the following recipe for removing spots of dirt from carpets:

Make a suds with a good white soap and hot water and add fuller's earth to this until the consistency of thin cream. Have plenty of clean drying cloths, a small scrubbing brush, a large sponge and a pail of fresh water. Put some of the cleaning mixture in a bowl and dip the brush in it. Brush a small piece of the carpet with this; then wash with the sponge and cold water. Dry as much as possible with the sponge and finally rub with dry cloths. Continue this till you are sure that all the carpet is clean; then let it dry.

Joseph Jekyll's Repartee.

An attorney named Else, rather diminutive in his stature and not particularly respectable in his character, once met Jekyll. "Sir," said he, "I hear you have called me a pettifogging scoundrel. Have you done so, sir?"

"Sir," said Jekyll, with a look of contempt, "I never said you were a pettifogger or a scoundrel, but I said you were 'little Else.'"

The following epigram was written on Dr. Letsom, then a well known doctor:

When folks are sick and send for me,
I purges, bleeds and sweats 'em;
If after that they choose to die,
What's that to me? I Letsom.

—Gentleman's Magazine.

Portuguese Hotel Clocks.

It is the fashion for Portuguese clocks to strike the hour twice over. Heaven only knows why, for certainly the people are not so keen about the profitable use of their time that they require to be reminded thus of its flight. The habit is apt to be irritating, especially in the night, when your bed, like enough a straw mattress and a bran pillow, chances to be near one of these monsters which dings its four and twenty strokes at midnight, with a pause between the dozens which merely stimulates expectation. If there are five clocks in the establishment, all with sonorous works—and the supposition is reasonable—they will, of course, differ widely, so that twenty-four may be striking, with intervals, during a maddening half hour.

You may happen to want to know badly which one of the monsters is the least mendacious, and the bells at your bed head communicate with two servants, one a Gallego and the other a Portuguese. In such a case ring for the despised stranger without hesitation. He will be with you in a minute, fresh and smiling, though half naked, and if he distrusts his own judgment about the clocks he will not mind saying so and hasten to awaken the landlord himself rather than that you should remain in doubt.

I regret to add that his more conceited fellow servant will more probably say whatever first comes to his tongue, more heedful of his own comfort than of your desires.—Chambers' Journal.

The Last Gladiatorial Combat.

Gladiatorial games were prohibited by an edict of the Emperor Constantine in A. D. 325, but from some cause, probably the loudly expressed disapprobation of the people, the edict was allowed to fall into disuse, and its penalties were never visited on its violators. During the reign of Honorius the defeat of the Goths in Italy was celebrated by games, but in the midst of the fights in the amphitheater of Vespasian a monk named Telemachus found his way into the arena and parted the combatants with a large processional cross.

The populace swarmed over the barricades and tore the monk to pieces, but the moral effect of the heroic act was permanent, and in A. D. 404 an imperial edict abolished gladiatorial sports in the Coliseum and shortly after throughout the Roman empire. The fight stopped by Telemachus was the last in the Coliseum, and that structure is now consecrated to the honor of Telemachus and the Christian martyrs who perished in the persecutions by Nero and other emperors.

Two Cruel Punishments.

The gantlope, or gantlet, was military and naval punishment for theft. A man had to run the gantlet of a long file of his fellow soldiers, each provided with a switch, and to prevent the sinner going too rapidly and to see that no man, impelled by motives of friendliness or kindness, failed to strike hard, a sergeant walked backward, facing the said sinner, with a halberd pointed at the latter's breast.

After a lengthy experiment this was found to be inconvenient and degrading, so recourse was had to another method, a variety of the same species of torture. The offender was tied to four halberds, three in a triangle and a fourth across. The regiment or company then filed off, the cat-o'-nine-tails was placed in the hands of the first man, who gave the culprit a lash and passed on, handing the cat to the second, who also gave a lash, and so the game went merrily on until the offense had been expiated.—London Graphic.

There are two curious things about cats that are not generally known. Yellow hairs, however few in number, always indicate the female. No male ever had the slightest tint of yellow. That is one curiosity, and the other is that a blue eyed cat is always deaf. To be sure, blue eyed cats are scarce, and it is possible that some deaf cats may not be blue eyed; but wherever you find a blue eyed cat that feline is absolutely incapable of hearing thunder.

Ancient Builders.

In Lahore there is or was a massive building made only of bricks and mortar, but the builders, who erected it in about 320 B. C., understood their business so well that the fabric defied the engineering efforts of four successive governments to remove it. India, too, can show plastered buildings white and shiny like marble and as smooth and polished as glass.

Beat Us on Time.

"Oh, come now, I s'y!" exclaimed the Britisher. "You must admit we're ahead of you in a grite many w'ys."

"In one great particular I admit you are," said the Yankee.

"And that is?"

"Time. It's 8 o'clock in London, and it's only 3 here."—Philadelphia Record.

Gluttonous Bass.

"Talk about sharks," said an Orange county lake fisherman; "I don't believe they are in it for promiscuous diet with the black bass.

"I was fishing one day with a very large minnow on a big hook. I had a bite and hooked a bass. It was [illegible] one and gave me as pr[illegible] a big I ever saw till [illegible] pretty a fight as the point [illegible] broke the leader at line a[illegible] where it is attached to the [illegible] got away.

"[illegible] hed in other parts of the lake landing, [illegible] and finally started to the [illegible] tered with guide rowing while I skittering close by [illegible] minnow. We were passing the fish in th[illegible] place where I had lost bass dart for my [illegible]ning when I saw a to swallow and [illegible] bait. I gave it time got the fish into [illegible] struck. When I three foot leader [illegible] boat, I saw a [illegible] out of its mouth. It was the leader [illegible] had lost in the morning. When I cut the bass open, there was the same big cub it had taken from my line, and it came so nearly filling the fish's maw that the tail of the last minnow was sticking out of the mouth. There wasn't room for it in the interior of the bass."—New York Times.

Smoking Under Water.

Says an expert swimmer:

It looks very strange to see a man go under water with a lighted cigar in his mouth, smoke calmly at the bottom and come to the surface with the cigar burning as [illegible] as if he were smoking in his easy chair. Apparently he defies all natural laws, but of course he doesn't.

It is a simple trick, but it requires practice. Just as I throw myself backward to go down I flip the cigar end for end with my tongue and upper lip and get the lighted end in my mouth, closing my lips water tight around it. A little slippery elm juice gargled before going in prevents any accidental burning of the mouth. Going slowly down backward, I lie at full length on the bottom of the tank and blow smoke through the cut end of the cigar. Just as I reach the surface again another flip reverses the cigar, and there I am smoking calmly. The reversing is done so quickly that nobody notices it.

Romance of the Corinthian Column.

In the winter a young girl had died in Corinth. Some time afterward her maid gathered together various trinkets and playthings which the girl had loved and brought them to the girl's grave. There she placed them in a basket near the monument and put a large square tile upon the basket to prevent the wind from overturning it. It happened that under the basket was a root of an acanthus plant. When spring came, the acanthus sprouted, but its shoots were not able to pierce the basket, and accordingly they grew around it, having the basket in their midst. Such of the long leaves as grew up against the four protruding corners of the tile on the top of the basket curled round under these corners and formed pretty volutes.

Kallimachos, the sculptor, walking that way one day, saw this and immediately conceived the notion that the form of the basket with the plaque on top of it and surrounded by the leaves and stalks of acanthus would be a comely heading for columns in architecture. He from this idea formed the beautiful Corinthian style of capital. Such, at least, is the story as the architect Vitruvius told it 1,900 years ago.

Too Much Apathy.

Couldock's company was once barnstorming through Virginia. It was at Petersburg, and the play was "The Chimney Corner." All through the audience sat in distressing silence, neither laughing nor shedding a tear, although "The Chimney Corner" abounds with humor and pathos and the company then producing it was of great merit for those times. Couldock appeared to pay no attention to the apathy of his audience until just at the close of the performance. The concluding lines of the play are somewhat to this effect: "You, John, are happy, and so are you, Ellen; so am I, and so are we all. Let us hope that our friends the public share our happiness."

But, to the surprise of everybody, Couldock fell into a towering passion when he reached these lines, and in thundering tones he said, "You, John, are happy, and so are you, Ellen; so am I, and so are we all except the fools that have been sitting like stoughton bottles in front of the footlights tonight!"

A Golf Story.

A well known Scotch "meenister" took up golf and despite great practice could not succeed in passing the tyro stage. His simple exclamations of "Tut, tut!" "Oh, dear, now!" "Well, well!" and the like were plain evidences of a perturbed spirit.

One day, when the perspiration flowed freely from his lofty brow and his honest countenance shone with a luster and radiance which, alas, were not due to calmness of soul, but rather the heat of the sun and his laborious efforts to move the obstinate gutta percha from its station on the tee, he was tempted to indulge in strong language. "Dear, dear, but I'll have to gie it up! I'll have to gie it up!" he said at last, with a despairing look at the ball.

"Give up the game, Mr. D.!" exclaimed his friend, who had been a witness of his attempts.

"Na, na—the meenistry!" answered the other, with a sigh.

The Sacred Bone.

The bone luz, or the "resurrection bone," is at the lower extremity of the spinal column. The Jewish rabbis taught that it was incorruptible, and from it, as from a seed, the human body would spring at the resurrection. There is a Jewish tradition that the Emperor Hadrian questioned a rabbi as to the existence of this bone and was convinced by the production of one by the Jewish teacher. Various attempts were made to destroy it. It was cast into a furnace and came forth unconsumed; it was steeped in boiling water, but remained unsoftened; it was smitten with a hammer, and the hammer was broken. Some trace of the former reverence for the bone is found in the modern name.

Crabs and Lobsters.

There are many curious points about crabs and lobsters. Every one of either genus is provided with a big claw for crushing and a small claw adapted by its shape for cutting as scissors do. With these two claws they tear the food they capture into fragments and feed themselves literally from "hand to mouth." But there is every reason to suppose that the claws are intended quite as much for fighting as for eating purposes, inasmuch as such powerful hands are not needed for devouring the soft food they prefer.

Power of Expression.

Our language has a wonderful power of expression. On one occasion, we are told, a doctor of divinity rang the changes on "He that hath ears to hear let him hear." "He that is accessible to auricular vibration," said the doctor, "let him not close the gates of his tympana."

Then, again, we have that old fashioned saying "The more the merrier" delightfully translated in this way: "Multitud[illegible]nous assemblages are the most provocative of cachinnatory hilarity."

A Personal Impression.

"Did Noah only take two o' each kind o' animal in de ark wif 'im?" said Mr. Erastus Pinkley.

"Dat's what I un'stan's," said Miss Miami Brown.

"Well, course Noah was runnin' de boat, but I would er 'spected dat he'd o' laid in an extra supply o' pork an' chickens."—Washington Star.

The company manners of her husband and sons are one of the greatest trials in a woman's life, and that of her daughters her greatest comfort.

Another Matter.

City Magistrate—Of course I don't wish to stand in the way of my daughter's happiness, but I know so little of you, Mr. Hawkins. What is your vocation?

Mr. Hawkins (airily)—Oh, I write—er—poetry, novels—er—plays and that sort of thing.

City Magistrate—Indeed! Most interesting! And how do you live?—Punch.

And He Felt Injured.

Bill Borrower—I'm in a deuced hole, Tom. If you can, I wish you would help me out.

Tom Wuggins—I'll help you any way I can, but don't ask me again to put my name on the back of your note.

Bill Borrower (injured)—I wasn't going to ask you for your credit, Tom. I was only looking for a little cash.—New York Times.

Facetious Diner (to very tall and exceedingly procrastinating servitor)—For more than one reason you might be called a long waiter.

Waiter—Yes; I sometimes measure half a day from tip to tip, sir.—Smart Set.

WEAKLY CHILDREN

All Children Love Vinol,

And Nothing in the World is So Good for Them—or their Tired Mothers. It Makes Pale, Thin and Weak Children and Women Strong and Robust.

"It is with great pleasure that I add my testimonial to the merits of Vinol. My little girl Cora after a hard case of Scarlet Fever began taking Vinol with the very best results. I don't believe she would ever have got well if not for Vinol, she was so weak. She is in the very best of health now, and thanks that good medicine Vinol, Wine of Cod Liver Oil.—MR. ISAAC CHAMPAIGNE, Keene, N. H."

Inasmuch as we are always ready to refund the cost of Vinol to those who don't find it exactly what we claim it to be, it will be seen that we are prepared to substantially endorse our claims for the excellence of this marvelous preparation.

A REVELATION.

Take away sound refreshing sleep and you rob nature of its most necessary requirment. Feeding and building up time, that's why so many people find their standard of strength wanting when they cannot sleep well, one symptom after another creeps in and serious ailments follow that is what makes so many people look older than they are. The perfecting of Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Pills is a revelation to this kind.

Mrs. E. Anderson, of Tecumseh, Mich., says: "I was so nervous that I could not sleep at night and was quite dizzy. I got a box of Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Pills at Chas. A. Wright's drug store and now since using the pills I can say my nerves are steadied, I rest better and the dizziness is relieved. I think the pills a splendid nerve medicine." Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Pills are sold at 50c a box at dealers or Dr. A. W. Chase Medicine Co. Buffalo, N. Y. See that portrait and signature of A. W. Chase, M. D. are on every package.

A Saving Man.

"Bilkins got married rather suddenly, didn't he?"

"Yes; somebody gave him a railway pass to Bournemouth for two, and he didn't want to waste it."—London Tit-Bits.

Buenos Ayres is the largest city south of the equator. Rio de Janeiro comes next, and Sydney, New South Wales, is a good third.

Hindrances to Success.

Many a man with great brain power and fine physique who started in life with good prospects has failed to attain great success because of little idiosyncrasies, peculiarities of speech or manner, things not in themselves vicious or wrong, but which render him disagreeable or unacceptable to those who have dealings with him.

If it were possible for us to write of all the little things which have cut down the average of our success and to calculate just how much each has contributed to the whole, it would be most helpful.

For example, one young man's advancement has been cut down 25 per cent by bad temper, a surly, disagreeable disposition; another's by carelessness in dress, an unkempt or slovenly appearance, and yet another's by a sharp tongue or an unkind habit of criticising.

Many a brilliant and capable stenographer has failed to advance because she had disagreeable habits that annoyed her employer, who, while he recognized her ability, preferred a less able stenographer who had amiable and agreeable qualities. The lack of amiability has stood in the way of advancement of many an employee who wondered why he did not get along.—Success.

Old Mexican Beliefs.

Some old Mexican tribes believe that the spirit is carried to the moon by a coal black, monkey faced owl; that upon arriving there it is met by its thousands of ancestors, who come with a long train of white donkeys; that the spirit is then escorted to a large cavern in the center of the moon, where joy reigns supreme.

Brain-Food Nonsense.

Another ridiculous food fad has been branded by the most competent authorities. They have dispelled the silly notion that one kind of food is needed for brain another for muscles and still another for bones. A correct diet will not only nourish a particular part of the body, but it will sustain every other part. Yet, however good your food may be, its nutriment is destroyed by indigestion or dyspepsia. You must prepare for their appearance or to prevent their coming by taking regular doses of Green's August Flower, the favorite medicine of the healthy millions. A few doses aids digestion, stimulates the liver to healthly action, purifies the blood and makes you feel buoyant and vigorous. You can get Dr. G. G. Green's reliable remedies at J. J. Orr's. HEAD NOISES CEASE IMMEDIATELY.
F. A. WERMAN, OF BALTIMORE, SAYS:

BALTIMORE, Md., March 30, 1901.

Gentlemen: — Being entirely cured of deafness, thanks to your treatment, I will now give you a full history of my case, to be used at your discretion.

About five years ago my right ear began to sing, and this kept on getting worse, until I lost my hearing in this ear entirely.

I underwent a treatment for catarrh, for three months, without any success, consulted a number of physicians, among others, the most eminent ear specialist of this city, who told me that only an operation could help me, and even that only temporarily, that the head noises would then cease, but the hearing in the affected ear would be lost forever.

I then saw your advertisement accidentally in a New York paper, and ordered your treatment. After I had used it only a few days according to your directions, the noises ceased, and to-day, after five weeks, my hearing in the diseased ear has been entirely restored. I thank you heartily and beg to remain Very truly yours,

F. A. WERMAN, 730 S. Broadway, Baltimore, Md.

What the President Says on Important Subjects.

TRUSTS AND RECIPROCITY

How He Would Deal With These Problems.

He Declares Publicity Is at Present the Only Sure Remedy Against Evils of Combinations—While Opposing Any General Tariff Change, He Upholds the Principle of Reciprocity—Advocates Reduction of Duty on Cuban Imports Into This Country—Importance of Building the Isthmian Canal and the Pacific Cable Urged—The Philippines and Other Insular Questions.

Washington, Dec. 3.—The president in his annual message to congress says:

The congress assembles this year under the shadow of a great calamity. On the 6th of September President McKinley was shot by an anarchist while attending the Pan-American exposition at Buffalo and died in that city on the 14th of that month.

Of the last seven elected presidents he is the third who has been murdered, and the bare recital of this fact is sufficient to justify grave alarm among all loyal American citizens. Moreover, the circumstances of this, the third assassination of an American president, have a peculiarly sinister significance. Both President Lincoln and President Garfield were killed by assassins of types unfortunately not uncommon in history, President Lincoln falling a victim to the terrible passions aroused by four years of civil war and President Garfield to the revengeful vanity of a disappointed office seeker. President McKinley was killed by an utterly depraved criminal belonging to that body of criminals who object to all governments, good and bad alike, who are against any form of popular liberty if it is guaranteed by even the most just and liberal laws and who are as hostile to the upright exponent of a free people's sober will as to the tyrannical and irresponsible despot.

Anarchy and Anarchists.

The president continues with a eulogy of Mr. McKinley, then turns to the subject of anarchy, denouncing its doctrines and preachers. He says:

I earnestly recommend to the congress that in the exercise of its wise discretion it should take into consideration the coming to this country of anarchists or persons professing principles hostile to all government and justifying the murder of those placed in authority. Such individuals as those who not long ago gathered in open meeting to glorify the murder of King Humbert of Italy perpetrate a crime, and the law should insure their rigorous punishment. They and those like them should be kept out of this country, and if found here they should be promptly deported to the country whence they came, and farreaching provision should be made for the punishment of those who stay. No matter calls more urgently for the wisest thought of the congress.

A Subject For Federal Courts.

The federal courts should be given jurisdiction over any man who kills or attempts to kill the president or any man who by the constitution or by law is in line of succession for the presidency, while the punishment for an unsuccessful attempt should be proportioned to the enormity of the offense against our institutions.

Anarchy is a crime against the whole human race, and all mankind should band against the anarchist. His crime should be made an offense against the law of nations, like piracy and that form of man stealing known as the slave trade.

The president next considers business conditions, which he finds highly satisfactory. He continues:

The tremendous and highly complex industrial development which went on with ever accelerated rapidity during the latter half of the nineteenth century brings us face to face at the beginning of the twentieth with very serious social problems. The old laws and the old customs which had almost the binding force of law were once quite sufficient to regulate the accumulation and distribution of wealth. Since the industrial changes which have so enormously increased the productive power of mankind they are no longer sufficient.

Trade Combinations.

The growth of cities has gone on beyond comparison faster than the growth of the country, and the upbuilding of the great industrial centers has meant a startling increase not merely in the aggregate of wealth, but in the number of very large individual and especially of very large corporate fortunes. The creation of these great corporate fortunes has not been due [illegible] nor to any other

Moreover, it cannot too often be pointed out that to strike with ignorant violence at the interests of one set of men almost inevitably endangers the interests of all. The fundamental rule in our national life—the rule which underlies all others—is that, on the whole and in the long run, we shall go up or down together.

The mechanism of modern business is so delicate that extreme care must be taken not to interfere with it in a spirit of rashness or ignorance. In dealing with business interests, for the government to undertake by crude and ill considered legislation to do what may turn out to be bad, would be to incur the risk of such farreaching national disaster that it would be preferable to undertake nothing at all. The men who demand the impossible or the undesirable serve as the allies of the forces with which they are nominally at war, for they hamper those who would endeavor to find out in rational fashion what the wrongs really are and to what extent and in what manner it is practicable to apply remedies.

How to Correct the Evils.

All this is true, and yet it is also true that there are real and grave evils, one of the chief being overcapitalization because of its many baleful consequences, and a resolute and practical effort must be made to correct these evils.

It is no limitation upon property rights or freedom of contract to require that when men receive from government the privilege of doing business under corporate form, which frees them from individual responsibility and enables them to call into their enterprises the capital of the public, they shall do so upon absolutely truthful representations as to the value of the property in which the capital is to be invested. Corporations engaged in interstate commerce should be regulated if they are found to exercise a license working to the public injury. It should be as much the aim of those who seek for social betterment to rid the business world of crimes of cunning as to rid the entire body politic of crimes of violence. Great corporations exist only because they are created and safeguarded by our institutions, and it is therefore our right and our duty to see that they work in harmony with these institutions.

Publicity the First Essential.

The first essential in determining how to deal with the great industrial combinations is knowledge of the facts —publicity. In the interest of the public the government should have the right to inspect and examine the workings of the great corporations engaged in interstate business. Publicity is the only sure remedy which we can now invoke. What further remedies are needed in the way of governmental regulation or taxation can only be determined after publicity has been obtained by process of law and in the course of administration. The first requisite is knowledge, full and complete—knowledge which may be made public to the world.

Artificial bodies, such as corporations and joint stock or other associations, depending upon any statutory law for their existence or privileges should be subject to proper governmental supervision, and full and accurate information as to their operations should be made public regularly at reasonable intervals.

The large corporations, commonly called trusts, though organized in one state, always do business in many states, often doing very little business in the state where they are incorporated. There is utter lack of uniformity in the state laws about them, and, as no state has any exclusive interest in or power over their acts, it has in practice proved impossible to get adequate regulation through state action. Therefore, in the interest of the whole people, the nation should, without interfering with the power of the states in the matter itself, also assume power of supervision and regulation over all corporations doing an interstate business.

Amend Constitution if Necessary.

When the constitution was adopted, at the end of the eighteenth century, no human wisdom could foretell the sweeping changes, alike in industrial and political conditions, which were to take place by the beginning of the twentieth century. At that time it was accepted as a matter of course that the several states were the proper authorities to regulate, so far as was then necessary, the comparatively insignificant and strictly localized corporate bodies of the day. The conditions are now wholly different, and wholly different action is called for.

I believe that a law can be framed which will enable the national government to exercise control along the lines above indicated, profiting by the experience gained through the passage and administration of the interstate commerce act. If, however, the judgment of the congress is that it lacks the constitutional power to pass such an act, then a constitutional amendment should be submitted to confer the power.

There should be created a cabinet officer, to be known as secretary of commerce and industries, as provided in the bill introduced at the last session of the congress. It should be his are unsatisfactory and that a law should be enacted to keep out not only anarchists, but persons of a low moral tendency or of unsavory reputation and those who are below a certain standard of economic fitness to enter our industrial field as competitors with American labor.

The Tariff and Reciprocity.

The president declares that nothing could be more unwise than to disturb the business interests of the country by any general tariff change at this time. He adds:

Yet it is not only possible, but eminently desirable to combine with the stability of our economic system a supplementary system of reciprocal benefit and obligation with other nations. Such reciprocity is an incident and result of the firm establishment and preservation of our present economic policy. It was specially provided for in the present tariff law.

Reciprocity must be treated as the handmaiden of protection. Our first duty is to see that the protection granted by the tariff in every case where it is needed is maintained, and that reciprocity be sought for so far as it can safely be done without injury to our home industries. Just how far this is must be determined according to the individual case, remembering always that every application of our tariff policy to meet our shifting national needs must be conditioned upon the cardinal fact that the duties must never be reduced below the point that will cover the difference between the labor cost here and abroad. The well being of the wageworker is a prime consideration of our entire policy of economic legislation.

Need For Wider Markets.

Subject to this proviso of the proper protection necessary to our industrial well being at home, the principle of reciprocity must command our hearty support. The phenomenal growth of our export trade emphasizes the urgency of the need for wider markets and for a liberal policy in dealing with foreign nations. Whatever is merely petty and vexatious in the way of trade restrictions should be avoided. The customers to whom we dispose of our surplus products in the long run, directly or indirectly, purchase those surplus products by giving us something in return. Their ability to purchase our products sho[illegible] as far as possible be secured b[illegible] our tariff as to enable us to [illegible] them those products which we can use without harm to our own industries and labor or the use of which will be of marked benefit to us.

It is most important that we should maintain the high level of our present prosperity. We have now reached the point in the development of our interests where we are not only able to supply our own markets, but to produce a constantly growing surplus for which we must find markets abroad. To secure these markets we can utilize existing duties in any case where they are no longer needed for the purpose of protection, or in any case where the article is not produced here and the duty is no longer necessary for revenue, as giving us something to offer in exchange for what we ask. The cordial relations with other nations which are so desirable will naturally be promoted by the course thus required by our own interests.

The natural line of development for a policy of reciprocity will be in connection with those of our productions which no longer require all of the support once needed to establish them upon a sound basis and with those others where either because of natural or of economic causes we are beyond the reach of successful competition.

I ask the attention of the senate to the reciprocity treaties laid before it by my predecessor.

The Merchant Marine.

The condition of the American merchant marine is such as to call for immediate remedial action by the congress. It is discreditable to us as a nation that our merchant marine should be utterly insignificant in comparison to that of other nations which we overtop in other forms of business. We should not longer submit to conditions under which only a trifling portion of our great commerce is carried in our own ships. To remedy this state of things would not merely serve to build up our shipping interests, but it would also result in benefit to all who are interested in the permanent establishment of a wider market for American products and would provide an auxiliary force for the navy. Ships work for their own countries just as railroads work for their terminal points. Shipping lines, if established to the principal countries with which we have dealings, would be of political as well as commercial benefit. From every standpoint it is unwise for the United States to continue to rely upon the ships of competing nations for the distribution of our goods. It should be made advantageous to carry American goods in American built ships.

At present American shipping is under certain great disadvantages when put in competition with the shipping of foreign countries. Many of the fast foreign steamships, at a speed of fourteen knots or above, are subsidized and all our ships, sailing vessels and steamers alike, cargo carriers of slow speed and mail carriers of high speed highly. The president then turns to forest preservation and irrigation of arid lands, saying that both are highly necessary. He would put all the work in connection with the forest reserves in charge of the bureau of forestry.

Irrigation.

The president continues by tracing the connection between the forest reserves and the water supply. He says:

The forests are natural reservoirs. By restraining the streams in flood and replenishing them in drought they make possible the use of waters otherwise wasted. They prevent the soil from washing and so protect the storage reservoirs from filling up with silt. Forest conservation is, therefore, an essential condition of water conservation.

The forests alone cannot, however, fully regulate and conserve the waters of the arid region. Great storage works are necessary to equalize the flow of streams and to save the flood waters. Their construction has been conclusively shown to be an undertaking too vast for private effort. Nor can it be best accomplished by the individual states acting alone. The government should construct and maintain these reservoirs as it does other public works. Where their purpose is to regulate the flow of streams, the water should be turned freely into the channels in the dry season to take the same course under the same laws as the natural flow.

The reclamation of the unsettled arid public lands presents a different problem. Here it is not enough to regulate the flow of streams. The object of the government is to dispose of the land to settlers who will build homes upon it. To accomplish this object water must be brought within their reach.

The pioneer settlers on the arid public domain chose their homes along streams from which they could themselves divert the water to reclaim their holdings. Such opportunities are practically gone. There remain, however, vast areas of public land which can be made available for homestead settlement, but only by reservoirs and main line canals impracticable for private enterprise. These irrigation works should be built by the national government. The lands reclaimed by them should be reserved by the government for actual settlers, and the cost of construction should, so far as possible, be [illegible] the land reclaimed. The distribution of the water, the division of the streams among irrigators, should be left to the settlers themselves in conformity with state laws and without interference with those laws or with vested rights.

The declaration is made that in the arid states the only right to water which should be recognized is that of use. The president says that the doctrine of private ownership of water apart from land cannot prevail without causing wrong.

Insular Problems.

Insular questions are next treated. In Hawaii our aim must be to develop the territory on the traditional American lines. Porto Rico is declared to be thriving as never before. The attention of congress is called to the need of legislation concerning the island's public lands. In Cuba it is stated that much progress has been made toward putting the independent government of the island upon a firm footing, and it is declared that independence will be an accomplished fact. The president adds:

Elsewhere I have discussed the question of reciprocity. In the case of Cuba, however, there are weighty reasons of morality and of national interest why the policy should be held to have a peculiar application, and I most earnestly ask your attention to the wisdom, indeed to the vital need, of providing for a substantial reduction in the tariff duties on Cuban imports into the United States.

In dealing with the Philippine people we must show both patience and strength, forbearance and steadfast resolution. Our aim is high. We do not desire to do for the islanders merely what has elsewhere been done for tropic peoples by even the best foreign governments. We hope to do for them what has never before been done for any people of the tropics—to make them fit for self government after the fashion of the really free nations.

The only fear is lest in our overanxiety we give them a degree of independence for which they are unfit, thereby inviting reaction and disaster. As fast as there is any reasonable hope that in a given district the people can govern themselves self government has been given in that district. There is not a locality fitted for self government which has not received it. But it may well be that in certain cases it will have to be withdrawn because the inhabitants show themselves unfit to exercise it; such instances have already occurred. In other words, there is not the slightest chance of our failing to show a sufficiently humanitarian spirit. The danger comes in the opposite direction.

Troubles Ahead Yet.

There are still troubles ahead in the islands. The insurrection has become an affair of local banditti and marauders, who deserve no higher regard than the brigands of portions of the old world. Encouragement, direct or

WHY WILKINS' HIRED MAN RAN AWAY

By JOHN H. RAFTERY.

Sunday morning, while Mrs. Wilkins was at church with Tommy, Mr. Wilkins, in defiance of the social ethics of Lake Hill, put on his overalls, and, rake in hand, attacked the carpet of dead leaves that covered his lawn. He knew that his wife would make a scene if she caught him, and he knew that his Sabbath breaking would furnish another argument against suburban life, and he anticipated considerable guying from his male neighbors and yet, in spite of all these misgivings, he raked the leaves into rustling piles and watched with dogged satisfaction the columns of blue smoke that rose among the oaks from his unholy fires.

Wilkins had employed seven different "hired men" since spring. None had stayed more than a month and none had carried away either the esteem or good will of Mrs. Wilkins. Most of them were worthless, some dishonest, some lazy and some lacked that regard for the proprieties which the woman of the house insisted upon. So it came to pass that Wilkins had a hard time getting, to say nothing of keeping, a serviceable hired man, and when the leaves began to fall his lawns, gardens, vines and orchard were in sad case, his chicken house needed repairs, his coal cellar was empty, his winter kindling was unchopped and his loyalty to suburban life was tottering. Therefore he had defied all precedent and on Sunday morning attacked the work with his own hands.

While he was bending over a russet mound of leaves he heard a voice:

"Mister, I'll clean up that lawn for a meal."

It was a low, strong voice, musical of tone and so opportune that Wilkins let his rake fall and looked about. The stranger was a tall, lean young man, dusty from a long walk, but clean and trim as to clothes and person.

"I'll just go you," said Wilkins, opening the gate. The big fellow walked in, dropped his coat on the ground and fell to work without a word. After getting back into his Sunday garments the man of the house watched his rescuer. The latter had laid aside his round felt hat, disclosing a bullet head closely shaved. The worker's clothes, new, cheap and coarse, ill fit the wearer, and as Wilkins watched him swiftly and silently clearing away the dead grass, weeds and leaves his heart misgave him, and he murmured to himself:

"An ex-convict, I'll bet."

Mrs. Wilkins soon came home with Tommy and eyed the stranger askance. When she had noticed him eating heartily, but decorously, and had observed that he knew the purposes of knife, fork and spoon, she darkly hinted to her husband that there was "something mysterious" about the newcomer. When Wilkins felt sure that his wife hadn't guessed the probable truth, he resolved to offer the man a job, and as the latter passed out the walk toward the road the suburbanite stopped him with:

"My friend, I like the way you work and I like your looks, and if you'll stay I'll give you $4 a week and your board just to keep up the place, tend the chickens and the furnace."

"Thank you, sir. I'll try it," was the answer. "You don't keep a horse, and I won't have to go to town?"

"No. Just stay here on the place and do whatever you see necessary," explained Wilkins, fully understanding the man's dislike to going into town.

"All right, sir. My name is James Green."

Wilkins showed the tall, gaunt fellow over the place and pointed out the room over the carriage house where he was to sleep. Tommy, who was ten years old, trotted after them, deeply interested in the stranger.

Of course Mrs. Wilkins didn't approve of her husband's choice. She felt sure that there was something wrong about Green, and as the days went by and he proved a splendid gardener and a most useful person in divers unexpected ways she was grievously disappointed. What enraged her most was Green's taciturnity. Every effort of the cook and the house girl, prompted and encouraged by Mrs. Wilkins, failed to elicit a hint about himself. At meals he was as silent as the tomb. During the day he kept busy at the back of the two acre lot; at night he sat in the barn doorway telling stories to Tommy and smoking his pipe.

Between him and the boy there sprang up an extraordinary companionship. The man, silent with all others, began to tell his little comrade the rarest and most extraordinary stories of shipwreck, of battle, of wild beasts, birds and adventures of all kinds.

signs of prosperity and [illegible]. Then he came to Wilkins one evening and said that he'd like to spend one day in Chicago. He wanted to buy some clothes, he said, and would like to have his pay. There was $12 due him, and Wilkins had only a twenty dollar bill.

"All right, Green," said the big hearted suburbanite. "Here's a twenty. You can bring me back the change. And, let's see, here's my commutation ticket. It'll save you paying railroad fares."

Mrs. Wilkins overheard this talk and when Green was out of hearing proclaimed her husband a fool—a wasteful, gullible, stupid fool.

"That man Green will never come back," she snapped. "See him!" pointing across the lawn. "He's not even going toward the depot. He's a tramp, maybe a murderer, and he's gone off with your money and your ticket. Wilkins, you're a simpleton!"

Wilkins was a little doubtful when he noticed the course taken by his "model hired man." The next evening added to his misgiving, for at sundown Green had not returned. Mrs. Wilkins began to gloat when the 8 o'clock train had passed and there was no sign of the missing gardener. Then the doorbell rang, and the girl announced "a lady to see Mr. Wilkins." He found a youngish woman, with much jewelry and very pink cheeks, smirking at him as he entered the parlor.

"Mr. Wilkins," she began, "a lady fren' o' mine what lives out here tells me theys a man workin' for youse, an' if I ain't much mistaken he's my husband. He's a tall, slim, sandy feller, don't talk much, and—he's done time at Joliet, and"—

Mrs. Wilkins entered here.

"What do you want with him?" asked the lady of the house.

The visitor was beginning to explain when Wilkins heard footsteps falling faintly on the walk outside. He slipped quietly out of the room and into the yard. Green was coming up the back steps into the kitchen when Wilkins stopped him with, "Well, I see you're back all right."

"Yes, sir," said the gardener, pulling out the railway ticket and $8. "There's your change and the ticket."

Wilkins noticed that the latter wasn't punched.

"I walked," explained the man. "I don't like trains."

Wilkins led him across the lawn and told him that there was a woman in the parlor claiming to be his wife.

"A blond, vulgar looking woman?" said Green.

"Yes. She's in there now talking to my wife."

"Well, sir, if you'll just let on that you didn't see me this evening, I'll be grateful. I'm tired now, and I don't want to see that woman, at least not tonight. Please say that I'm not here and won't be back till tomorrow."

So Green slunk off to bed, and the blond woman was sent away, promising to call again. In the morning Mr. Wilkins found Green's bed unrumpled. On the coverlet was a new leather whip, with a card inscribed: "For Tommy. Goodby." The Wilkinses never saw or heard of him again, and Mrs. Wilkins never knew that he had come home that night with the change and the ticket.

"I always knew he was a scamp," she said proudly. "I knew he'd run away, and he did."

"Well, I don't blame him," mused Wilkins, lighting his pipe and smiling at the memory of the blond woman with the brummagem jewelry. "I'd run away myself under the same circumstances."—Chicago Record-Herald.

A Daring Horseman.

The famous John Mytton once galloped full speed over a rabbit warren "to try whether or not his horse would fall." The horse did fall and rolled over Mytton, who, with good luck, got up unhurt.

Shortly after he attained his majority Mytton gave a dealer an order for some carriage horses and went to see what the man had got for him. He put one of the lot in as tandem leader to "try" it and, with the dealer at his side, drove out on the highroad. As they drove Mytton inquired if the horse were a good timber jumper, and, the dealer giving a doubtful answer to a query he did not expect in respect of a harness horse, Mytton instantly said he must "try" him. Forthwith he drove at the turnpike gate which barred the way before him. The horse cleverly cleared it, leaving the wheeler, the gig and its occupants on the takeoff side. Wonderful to relate, neither the horse nor the man was hurt. The gig, however, stood in urgent need of repairs.—London Stock Journal.

Works Both Ways.

To honor one's ancestors is an excellent and praiseworthy thing, but pride of ancestry is a very poor basis upon which to build one's whole life. A man who had never done anything for himself was boasting one day in the presence of a self made man of the distinction of his ancestors.

"There is nothing," he said, "like having respect for one's ancestors to keep one out of degenerate ways."

"It is a very good motive," said the self made man, "and you do well to be proud of your ancestors, but I think that my respect for my descendants is about as good a motive."

"Respect for your descendants! What do you mean?"

"Why, you see, I want them to be proud of their ancestor!"

Feeble natures live in their sorrows instead of converting them into apothegms of experience. They are saturated with them, and they consume themselves by singing back each day into the misfortunes of the past. To forget is the great secret of strong and creative existence, to forget after the manner of nature, which kn

Getting the Musical Pitch.

Musical pitch has a curious tendency to creep up. It is said that Bach's music sounds much differently now from what it did when Bach wrote it, because the instruments are now pitched higher. In 1882 it was found that the pitch of high A at the Vienna Court Opera had crept from the prescribed 435 double vibrations a second to 443, and in 1885 this number had further increased to 450.

Accordingly, a musical conference was held, and a resolution was taken to re-establish the old pitch of 435 vibrations per second. Upon this announcement the Reichsanstalt, the imperial physical and technical institute of Germany, set up standard instruments and has since tested and corrected many hundreds of tuning forks, shortening them if they are too low in pitch and thinning the arms if they are too high.

All the military orchestras of Germany are pitched alike, and the Reichsanstalt keeps the tuning forks correct. This solicitous care of the government in preserving standards is one reason why the world now goes to Germany in musical matters.—Pearson's.

Truth and Repose.

A self denial no less austere than the saint's is demanded of the scholar. He must worship truth and forego all things for that and choose defeat and pain so that his treasure in thought is thereby augmented. God offers to every mind its choice between truth and repose. Take which you please—you can never have both.

Between these as a pendulum man oscillates. He in whom the love of repose predominates will accept the first creed, the first philosophy, he meets, most likely his father's. He gets rest, commodity and reputation, but he shuts the door of truth. He in whom the love of truth predominates will keep himself aloof from all moorings and afloat.

He will abstain from dogmatism and recognize all the opposite negations between which as walls his being is swung. He submits to the inconvenience of suspense and imperfect opinions, but he is a candidate for truth as the other is not and respects the highest law of his being.—Emerson's "Essay on Intellect."

Didn't Care if He Did.

Over in West Virginia on one of the railroads is a little town called Sawyer. Close to the town the train passes through a tunnel. One day a nice looking young couple were on the train, and they never seemed to know that there was anybody else on the train. Oblivious to their surroundings they were like two souls with but a single thought. While the train was passing through the tunnel those near the young couple heard a succession of suspicious smacks something like a kiss with a dozen echoes. After the train had passed through the tunnel the brakeman came through the car and called out, "Sawyer," and the timid looking young man looked up and said: "I don't give a durn if you did. We are married."—Bristol Courier.

Running No Risk.

He took a plate in his right hand, passed it around, and a large sum was collected, every one meanwhile wondering what he held in his left hand.

"Why, it's very simple," said the leader when questioned. "We are all subject to temptation, and to be sure of the fidelity of our collector he has to hold five flies in his left hand, and we count these first when he returns to make sure of the money."

Willing to Accompany Him.

A poor old Irishman, with an old and battered cornet, was making night hideous one evening in a quiet Edinburgh square. A smart young "guardian of the peace" stepped up to him and in a very peremptory tone said:

"Come, come, my man, you must stop that or accompany me."

"Wid all the pleasure in loife, sor," replied Pat. "What are ye goin' to sing?"—London Telegraph.

His Conscience Clear.

"Can you truthfully say that you went into office with an absolutely clear conscience?" inquired the very familiar but unworldly friend.

"Of course I can," answered Senator Sorghum in a tone of slight irritation; "I never yet failed to pay every cent I promised for a vote."—Washington Star.

Sized Up.

"A man is known by his works," declared the irrepressible talker, who was addressing a large and enthusiastic audience.

"Yours must be a gas works," shouted a rude, uncultured person who occupied a back seat.—Baltimore American.

HOW IT SPREADS.

People all over Michigan Talking About It.

How it spreads.

Can't keep a "good thing" down.

Ever notice how good things are imitated?

Better the article, more imitators.

Fortunately the public has a safeguard.

Praise can't be imitated.

And true praise takes root and spreads

Claim is one thing, proof another.

Claim is what the manufacturer says.

Proof is what the people say.

Everywhere in Michigan people say

Doan's Kidney Pills cure sick kidney.

Cure all kidney ills.

W. S. Kilmer, passenger engineer on the M. C. Ry. residing at No. 214 Orange St., Jackson, Mich., says:

"In 1895 I had considerable trouble with my kidneys from the result of a severe cold which settled there and though I tried every means at hand and treated with doctors the pains through the small of my back became more persistent and severe. To add to my troubles the kidney secretions were unnatural and irregular. At last I was obliged to lay off work. When at home getting no better under the treatment I was then taking, some one advised me to use Doan's Kidney Pills and I procured a box more out of curiosity than from any expectation that they might help me. Now I want this thoroughly understood, when I had finished the box I went back to work without a pain or an ache. But to make matters doubly certain I took a second box. Since that time and that is three years ago, I have neither had an ache nor a pain. Is it any wonder this date, 1898, I recommended Doan's Kidney Pills."

Spiders' Webs.

The webs of those spiders which spin snares out of doors, as the geometrical garden spider, are formed of two sorts of silk, one of which is used for the main cables and the radiating threads, the other for the concentric threads. The latter are thickly studded with minute globules of a viscous substance, which retains the fly, gnat or moth that may blunder against them, while the former are quite dry and harmless. A third kind of silk is produced by the busy little spinner when some such large insect as a wasp has become entangled in the web and threatens to break the delicate structure in its struggles. This takes the form of an enveloping mass, which is suddenly produced and which effectually prevents any further gyrations on the part of the captured insect.—Cornhill Magazine.

Women And Jewels.

Jewels, candy, flowers, man—that is the order of woman's preferences. Jewels form a magnet of mighty power to the average woman. Even that greatest of all jewels, health, is often ruined in the strenuous efforts to make or save the money to purchase them. If a woman will risk her health to get a coveted gem then let her fortify herself against the insiduous consequences of coughs, colds and bronchial affections by the regular use of Dr. Boschee's German Syrup. It will promptly arrest consumption in its early stages and heal the affected lungs and bronchial tubes and drive the dread disease from the system. It is not a cure all, but it is a certain cure for coughs, colds and all bronchial troubles. You can get Dr. G. G. Green's reliable remedies at J. J. Orr's. Get Green's Special Almanac.

The lack of success of which some people complain in the care of fern balls is due probably to one of the following causes: Either a cheap and worthless ball was purchased or it has not been kept properly damp, says Home Notes.

It is no good to give the fern an occasional soaking and then let it get bone dry. It must be kept steadily damp. A good plan is to put up a hook over the sink in the butler's pantry and to hang it there to drain after its daily tub. The daily tub of lukewarm water is necessary for the well being of a fern ball kept in the dry air of a living room, and care should be taken to secure it a place where it will have plenty of light, but little or no sunshine. Even in the hottest weather it should not be kept out of doors, and drafts, be it remembered, will ruin it.

His Idea of a Sermon.

Robert Morris, a man celebrated for the part he took in the American Revolution, was once asked by Dr. Rush: "Well, Mr. Morris, how did you like the sermon? I have heard it highly extolled." "Why, doctor," said he, "I did not like it at all. It is too smooth and tame for me." "Mr. Morris," replied the doctor, "what sort of a sermon do you like?" "I like, sir," replied Mr. Morris, "that preaching which drives a man up into a corner of his pew and makes him think the devil is after him."

The Joke on Ben.

Two men, Tom and Ben, worked side by side for thirty years in a grocery store, where there were a great many unreasonable people to satisfy. Both had grown old, and finally one night Tom became violently ill. A doctor was called, who, after his arrival, told Tom that he could not recover.

Tom thought about it for awhile and then said: "Won't it be a great joke on Ben! I won't have to go to work tomorrow, but Ben will have to turn out, as usual, and hear the same old unreasonable complaints."—Atchison Globe.

Getting Around It.

Local—I am writing a short notice about the appointment of our townsman Lakwit to the position of town auditor. I really can't say that he has any fitness for the place, and yet on personal grounds I prefer to associate his name with the appointment in some complimentary way.

Editor In Chief—Why can't you speak of him as a man of rare good judgment? I am sure there is no one of our acquaintance in whom good judgment is so rare.—Richmond Dispatch.

It Got There Just the Same.

Mabel—Such a joke on Mr. Gayboy! We were out on the balcony between the dances, and he got the sleeve of his dress coat all over red paint from one of the posts that were just painted.

Maud—And did you go near the post?

Mabel—No. Why?

Maud—Because you have red paint all over the back of your waist.—Harlem Life.

Grandma—Now, Willie, what are they going to do with you when you grow up? What is your ambition?

A REVELATION.

Take away sound refreshing sleep and you rob nature of its most necessary requirment. Feeding and building up time, that's why so many people find their standard of strength wanting when they cannot sleep well, one symptom after another creeps in and serious ailments follow that is what makes so many people look older than they are. The perfecting of Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Pills is a revelation to this kind. Mrs. E. Anderson, of Tecumseh, Mich., says: "I was so nervous that I could not sleep at night and was quite dizzy. I got a box of Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Pills at Chas. A. Wright's drug store and now since using the pills I can say my nerves are steadied, I rest better and the dizziness is relieved. I think the pills a splendid nerve medicine." Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Pills are sold at 50c a box at dealers or Dr. A. W. Chase Medicine Co. Buffalo, N. Y. See that portrait and signature of A. W. Mother's Friend

Those who do know about it wonder how they ever got along without it. It has robbed childbirth of its terrors for many a young wife. It has preserved her girlish figure and saved her much suffering. It is an external liniment and carries with it therefore, absolutely no danger of upsetting the system as drugs taken internally are apt to do. It is to be rubbed into the abdomen to soften and strengthen the muscles which are to bear the strain. This means much less pain. It also prevents morning sickness and all of the other discomforts of pregnancy.

HENRY WILSON HERE.

Well Known Celery Buyer Will Operate in Local Field for Pittsburg Firm

Henry Wilson, of the firm of Wilson Bros., the famous Michigan celery men, arrived here last evening and this morning went out to the peatlands. Mr. Wilson may be remembered as having been here last season in the interest of Eastern celery buyers for whom he shipped a large quantity of the vegetable.

This season Mr. Wilson represents Somers Bros., of Pittsburg, and he is here for the purpose of buying celery for his firm. Mr. Wilson says the present unsatisfactory condition of the celery market is due to the fact that an unprecedented crop has this season been raised in Western Michigan and in New York state, and that the quality is better than the California article and will therefore be sought for in the market in preference to any other so long as it lasts.

Mr. Wilson further says, however, that there will be a demand for a lot of celery from California, and from the general tone of his remarks it is inferred that there exists no real reason for the sudden slump in the demand for the local product.

Mr. Wilson is, perhaps, one of the best posted men in the country in this particular business, and withal has the reputation of being willing to accept a fair profit in a legitimate business, and his appearance in the local field will do much towards restoring confidence among the growers and making them feel that they are not to be slaughtered in the matter of disposing of the crop.—Santa Ann, Cal., Saturday Evening Blade.

A Christmas Love Story.

The prettiest Christmas tale of all is that of the blessed Herman Joseph, the little clock-maker of Germany. He was a very poor lad, who loved to go to church better than anything else in the world. One Christmas Eve he entered the Cathedral with a little gift for the Christ-Child. It was all he had,—a rosy apple which someone had given him. He went up to the image of Mary and the Child, and held out the apple to the little one, placing it at last in the chubby hand. Instantly the little marble fingers closed upon the apple, and the Child smiled with pleasure upon the poor boy's gift. Which goes to show that the tribute of the Wise Men is not the only acceptable offering to Christmas Love.—Abbie Farwell Brown in December Lippincott's.

Why the Snow is Not Black or Red.

Why is the snow white is a question frequently asked. Because black snow would be dangerous so would red or yellow. "These are warming-up colors" and they would change the sun's rays to heat. Such snow would soon melt and prove a very poor protection. But white snow throws back the sunlight in just the form in which it receives it, and thus the snow can be long on the ground Throw dirt on the snow, and its dark color quickly makes it eat its way in whenever the sun shines on it. After a snowstorm, once let the horse's feet mingle the dirt of the road with the snow and sleighing will soon be over.—Professor S. C. Schmucker, in the December Ladies' Home Journal.

commercial but for political and military considerations. Either the congress should immediately provide for the construction of a government cable or else an arrangement should be made by which like advantages to those accruing from a government cable may be secured to the government by contract with a private cable company.

No single great material work which remains to be undertaken on this continent is of such consequence to the American people as the building of a canal across the isthmus connecting North and South any aggression by one new world power at the expense of any other. It is simply a step, and a long step, toward assuring the universal peace of the world by [illegible] the possibility of permanence [illegible] this hemisphere.

During the past century other influences have established the permanence and independence of the smaller states of Europe. Through the Monroe doctrine we hope to be able to safeguard like independence and secure like permanence for the lesser among the new world nations.

This doctrine has nothing to do with the commercial relations of any American power save that it in truth allows each of them to form such as it desires. In other words, it is really a guarantee of the commercial independence of the Americas. We do not ask under this doctrine for any exclusive commercial dealings with any other American state. We do not guarantee any state against punishment if it misconducts itself, provided that punishment does not take the form of the acquisition of territory by any non-American power. Our attitude in Cuba is a sufficient guarantee of our own good faith. We have not the slightest desire to secure any territory at the expense of any of our neighbors.

The Navy.

The president devotes considerable space to the navy, the upbuilding of which, he says, should be steadily continued. The navy offers us, it is declared, the only means of insisting on the Monroe doctrine, and a strong navy is the best guarantee against war. He recommends that provision be made not only for more ships, but for more men. Four thousand additional seamen and 1,000 additional marines should be provided, as well as an increase in officers. After indorsing the naval militia forces the president says:

But in addition we should at once provide for a national naval reserve, organized and trained under the direction of the navy department and subject to the call of the chief executive whenever war becomes imminent. It should be a real auxiliary to the naval seagoing peace establishment and offer material to be drawn on at once for manning our ships in time of war.

The Army.

It is not necessary to increase our army beyond its present size at this time, but it is necessary to keep it a the highest point of efficiency. The individual units who as officers and enlisted men compose this army are, we have good reason to believe, at least a efficient as those of any other army in the entire world. It is our duty to see that their training is of a kind to insure the highest possible expression of power to these units when acting in combination.

A general staff should be created. Promotions should be made solely with regard to the good of the service. Congress ought to provide, the president adds, for field exercises. He continues:

Action should be taken in reference to the militia and to the raising of volunteer forces. Our militia law is obsolete and worthless. The organization and armament of the national guard of the several states, which are treated as militia in the appropriations by the congress, should be made identical with those provided for the regular forces. The obligations and duties of the guard in time of war should be carefully defined and a system established by law under which the method of procedure of raising volunteer forces should be prescribed in advance.

The Merit System.

The president indorses the merit system of making appointments and says:

I recommend the passage of a law which will extend the classified service to the District of Columbia or will at least enable the president thus to extend it. In my judgment all laws providing for the temporary employment of clerks should hereafter contain a provision that they be selected under the civil service law.

It is important to have this system obtain at home, but it is even more important to have it applied rigidly in our insular possessions. The importance of improving the consular service by the passage of new laws is emphasized.

The president then turns to the Indian question. He says:

We should now break up the tribal funds, doing for them what allotment does for the tribal lands—that is, they should be divided into individual holdings. There will be a transition period during which the funds will in many cases have to be held in trust. This is the case also with the lands. A stop should be put upon the indiscriminate permission to Indians to lease their allotments. The effort should be steadily to make the Indian work like any other man on his own ground. The marriage laws of the Indians should be made the same as those of the whites. In the schools the education should be elementary and largely industrial.

Cordial support from congress and people is asked for the St. Louis exposition. The Charleston exposition is commended to the good will of the people. The work of the Pan-American exposition is praised.

It is recommended that the census office as now constituted should be made a permanent government bureau.

The Postal Service.

A WOMAN'S BACK.

The Aches and Pains will Disappear if the Advice of this Tecumseh Citizen is Followed.

A woman's back has many aches and pains.

Most time it is the kidneys' fault.

Backache is really kidney ache.

That's why Doan's Kidney Pills cure it.

Many Tecumseh w[illegible]en know this.

Read what one has to say about it:

Mrs. E. D. Fryer, who lives in the north-western section of Tecumseh, says: "I suffered from my kidneys off and on for about two years. During an attack the pain was worse along in the afternoon and I often felt like giving up, but I kept on working in misery, for stooping or straightening made my back feel as if it were breaking in two. If I took a slight cold it always settled in my back and, in spite of all the remedies I used, I could not get relief. Procuring Doan's Kidney Pills at C. A. Wright's drug store, I took a course of the treatment. It did more good than all the other medicines I ever used. The pain in my back was quickly relieved. I take pleasure in recommending Doan's Kidney Pills at every opportunity."

For sale by all dealers: Price 50 cents per box, Foster-Milburn company, Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States. Remember the name Doan's and take no substitute.

The opportunity is always ready for the man who is ready for the opportunity.

QUITE SATISFACTORY.

Is the Volume of Seasonable Business, Says Bradstreet.

New York, Dec. 27.—Bradstreet's weekly review of trade says:

Satisfaction with the old and confidence in the new year are the dominating features as 1902 draws to a close. The enormous holiday trade exceeding in most respects all records proved to be a fitting crown to a year of almost unprecedented business and industrial activity. Except in some sections of the south and southwest where crop and weather conditions had led to a modification of otherwise sanguine expectations, the volume of seasonable business is in most respects satisfactory. In the east, the west, the northwest and on the Pacific coast there is but one note and that of satisfaction with the results achieved during the past few weeks.

Additional reports received of trade distribution for the year confirm those hitherto given of an enormous volume of business, modified, it is true, in some respects by higher cost of materials and wages limiting profits. With the larger turnover, however, and the active demand in most lines, the profit side has not been entirely lost sight of, and it is safe to say that equally satisfactory returns in years to come would prove acceptable. Reports of results in banking circles this year are that good profits have been gained as a result of the comparatively high and at the same time steady rates for money.

Wheat, including flour, exports for the week ending Dec. 24 aggregate 3,560,486 bushels, against 3,256,037 last week, 4,291,543 in this week last year and 3,858,165 in 1900. Wheat exports since July 1 aggregate 127,324,019 bushels, against 144,927,756 last season and 95,999,518 in 1900. Corn exports aggregate 1,502,551 bushels, against 1,526,141 last week, 424,330 last year and 4,011,105 in 1900. For the fiscal year exports are 8,188,878 bushels, against 20,550,245 last season and 94,383,079 in 1900.

Business failures for the week ending Thursday, Dec. 25, number 161, as against 225 last week, 219 in this week last year, 213 in 1900, 213 in 1899 and 220 in 1898.

Two Persons Killed.

Steubenville, O., Dec. 27.—An Austrian woman was burned to death and a man killed by a powder explosion in a houseboat on the Ohio river near here yesterday. The woman had tried to start a fire with gasoline. An explosion followed and she was burned to death. Her husband and boarders escaped from the boat, but were unable to secure her body. One of the boarders, an Austrian, went back after money he had hidden and was killed by an explosion of powder that he had stored in the boat.

Mary H. Catherwood Is Dead.

Chicago, Dec. 27.—Mrs. Mary Hartwell Catherwood, the well-known authoress, died at her residence, 4852 Washington avenue, last night of cancer. Mrs. Catherwood was taken ill in October and steadily declined until last night she succumbed to the disease. The funeral service will be held Sunday, and interment will be at Hoopeston, Ill., her old home. Mrs. Catherwood is survived by her husband, John Steel Catherwood, and a daughter.

To Investigate Plague Reports.

Washington, Dec. 27.—The United States marine hospital service authorities have decided to dispatch an expert to the coast of the Gulf of California, in Mexico, to investigate the reports of the appearance of plague among the immigrant Chinese there, but no one has yet been designated for the service. The bureau already has received unauthentic reports of the appearance of a suspicious disease among those people.

BACON AN OPPOSER

Does Not Like Hay-Pauncefote Canal Treaty.

THE U. S. LACKS CONTROL

Though He Opposes the Treaty He Will Not Obstruct Its Ratification—Senator Cullom Talks on Other Side of the Question.

Washington, Dec. 12.—When the senate met yesterday prayer was offered by Rev. Herrick Johnston of Chicago, Chaplain Milburn being absent. The house concurrent resolution providing for a holiday adjournment from Dec. 19 until Jan. 6, 1902, was referred to the committee on appropriations. The senate then at 12:23 p. m., on motion of Mr. Lodge, went into executive session to further consider the Hay-Pauncefote treaty, and at 2:50 p. m. adjourned until today.

Two speeches on the Hay-Pauncefote treaty were made in the executive session of the senate, one by Senator Bacon in opposition to the treaty, and the other by Senator Cullon, the prospective chairman of the committee on foreign relations, in support of it.

Mr. Bacon replied to the speech made Tuesday by Senator Lodge. He summed up his objections in the statement that he could not freely accept any treaty which does not place the isthmian canal entirely under American auspices and American control. He said the war restrictions of the treaty were entirely inconsistent with the claims of Senator Lodge, that this country should say who should use the canal and who should not in case of hostilities. He contended that the only power given to the United States which was not given to Great Britain was found in the last sentence of regulation 2, providing that "the United States shall be at liberty to maintain such military police along the canal as may be necessary to protect it against lawlessness and disorder."

This, he said, was not sufficient to make the canal an American institution. He considered the pending treaty every whit as objectionable as the treaty of last session. In conclusion, Mr. Bacon announced that, while he had no intention of voting for the treaty, he would do nothing to obstruct its ratification.

Senator Cullom congratulated the senate and the country upon the fact that there are two things in connection with the new treaty upon which, he said, practically all are agreed. One of these was the desirability of the supercession of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty, and the other that of the necessity for the construction of an isthmian canal. He added, in a war with Great Britain or which any other power, the treaty would be suspended under the law which governs nations, until the war should be concluded, when it would be revived and again enforced. All nations would be treated on terms of fairness and equality by allowing all to use the canal in time of peace and shutting out all in time of war, in case it should be found desirable to do so. In short, Senator Cullom urged, there is no provision in the pending convention which would interfere with our rights as a nation to close up the waterway to any belligerent power.

National Park in Georgia.

Atlanta, Ga., Dec. 12.—The Georgia legislature has passed a bill giving the sanction of the state to certain grants of land lying in northeast Georgia to the United States for the purpose of providing a park, to be known as the Appalachian National park. This bill was presented in accordance with a bill now pending in congress. It gives jurisdiction of the tract of land in Georgia to the United States, with a concurrent jurisdiction by the state of Georgia, to allow county officers to make arrests in civil cases and criminal cases, as the needs of justice may demand.

Indians Feast and Worship.

Mexico City, Dec. 12.—Large numbers of pilgrims are arriving to attend the feast today of Guadaloupe Hidalgo, where is shrined in the magnificent church the reputed miraculous picture of the virgin. There will be special services and many thousands of people, mainly Indians, will be present. The Indians regard the Virgin Guadaloupe as their special protectress and always have held her in patriotic as well as religious veneration.

Taft and Funston Coming.

Manila, Dec. 12.—General Funston will sail for the United States on Dec. 16 on the transport Warren. The doctors have ordered a change of climate, and the general is going home on sick leave. He has improved in health since he left the hospital. Governor Taft will sail for home on the Grant on Dec. 20. He says that the rumors to the effect that he will not return here are incorrect.

Honors for Peace Negotiator.

Pekin, Dec. 12.—An edict has appeared which bestows honors upon the late Hi Lung Chang and upon Prince Ching and other officials for their participation in the peace negotiations. A most remarkable clause awards Yung-Lu (who commanded the best disciplined troops who opposed the allies) the two-eyed peacock feather for having protected foreigners against the boxers.

London, Dec. 12.—A correspondent of the Standard, telegraphing from Brussels, says that he hears that confidential negotiations are imminent between Great Britain and Holland which are not unlikely to result in an arrangement for bringing Boer women and children to Holland.

"It made my heart ache," writes L. C. Overstreet, of Elgin, Tenn., "to hear my wife congh until it seemed her weak and sore lungs would collapse. MULTITUDES OF SUBJECTS.

Farmers at Lansing Discuss Many Good Topics.

Lansing, Mich., Dec. 12.—The concourse of farmers assembled here in convention as delegates to the State Association of Farmers' Clubs and the State Grange, representing 150,000 voters of the commonwealth, yesterday asserted themselves upon state and national questions.

The Farmers' Clubs.

Lansing, Mich., Dec. 12.—The assembled farmers made hay under the order of resolutions and took a fall out of nearly all the problems infesting the body politic from Maine to Manila. The convention concurred, as it did unanimously, with the following:

"Resolved, That we do not favor the calling of a special session."

The committee on national affairs had adopted the following:

"Resolved, That we demand the election of United States senators by direct vote of the people.

"Resolved, That we favor the government's constructing and owning a Pacific cable.

"Resolved, That we are opposed to granting subsidies to steamship companies.

"Resolved, That we earnestly request congress to let present tariffs on sugar remain as they are.

"Resolved, That we are opposed to the expenditure of large sums of money for irrigation of western land to be given to settlers; and that we demand that just compensation be exacted from settlers of public land."

In the election of officers, A. B. Cook of Owosso was made president; vice-president, Miss Helen Landon, Springport; secretary, Miss Julia Ball, Hamburg; treasurer, Miss Mary Marshall, South Lyon; directors, L. C. Baker, Wolf Creek, and Capt. W. W. Horton, Fowlerville. C. E. Hadsell, Troy; J. Sessions, Fowler; J. S. Daniels, St. Johns, and L. C. Flumerfelt, Rochester, retain their positions in the directorate.

The State Grange.

The hum of activity broke all day from the representatives' chamber, where the State Grange continued its sessions. The presentation and adoption of the report of the executive committee occupied the morning.

An array of varied papers was offered by the grange workers in the afternoon, treating of the local influences of the grange, the fraternal features, economic and moral, those entering into the discussion being: M. T. Cole, N. I. Moore, Thomas Mars, Mrs. E. H. Hume, Mrs. Emma A. Campbell, G. B. Horton, Mrs. L. C. Saunders, Mrs. Kingston Moore, A. E. Palmer, F. W. Redfern, Mrs. J. J. Woodman and Mrs. Mary A. Mayo.

Elaborate and impressive services were held at night, when the fifth and sixth degrees were conferred upon stalwart workers and a repetition of the previous night's gay scene transpired behind closed doors.

Worthy Master G. B. Horton was made high priest of the order of Demeter by the National Grange and was the recipient of warm compliments.

Under Serious Charge.

Saginaw, Mich., Dec. 12.—William Wheeler of St. Charles is at the county jail under $1,000 bail on a charge of attempted criminal assault on his 10-year-old daughter Gertrude.

Oriental Disturbances Looked For.

Yokahama, Dec. 12.—In replying to the speech from the throne, delivered by the emperor yesterday at the opening of the imperial diet in Tokio, the lower house of the diet declared that there were indications of a disturbance in the Orient in the near future. It pledged itself to discharge its duties carefully and with circumspection.

Joe Blackburn Married.

Washington, Dec. 12.—United States Ssenator J. C. S. Blackburn of Kentucky and Mrs. Mary E. Blackburn were married here yesterday, at the rectory of St. Paul's church, by Rev. Fr. Mackin. Only a few relatives were present.

Kruger is in Utrecht.

Utrecht, Dec. 12.—Mr. Kruger, former president of the South African republic, has arrived here and has taken possession of his new residence.

Big Coal Famine.

Philadelphia, Dec. 12.—A coal famine such as has not prevailed for years now exists at this port, by reason of which both coastwise and West India commerce is almost completely crippled. This condition is in a great measure due to a scarcity of cars to carry the coal from the mines.

On account of ill-health, Capt. Richard P. Leary, U. S. N., first governor of Guam who is now on sick leave at the marine hospital in Chelsea, Mass., has asked to be retired. Having served more than 40 years, he can be retired with the rank and pay of rear admiral.

News is given in advices from Japan of the destruction by fire of the Oriental hotel at Yokahama. The hotel was accounted the handsomest in Japan. A number of guests escaped with nothing but their pajamas and night clothes. One Japanese nurse was burned to death.

A Choice of Calves.

The difficulties the early Virginian colonists had with their live stock is curiously illustrated by the fact that in the colony of Massachusetts Bay a red calf was cheaper than a black one, experience having shown that the former was more likely to be attacked by wolves, owing, it was thought, to the wolves mistaking it for a deer.

Will Have Largest Ship Building Plant on Lakes.

LOCATED AT CANADIAN SOO

Sir Christopher Furness of England Is at the Head of the Movement—Yards Will Have a Capacity of Four Vessels.

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., Dec. 12.—From undisputed authority it has been learned that the plans for the big shipbuilding plant to be located at the Canadian Soo by English capital, headed by Sir Christopher Furness, are now prepared and the site chosen.

The plans call for the largest plant on the great lakes, of a size sufficient to allow the building of four lake carriers of the largest type at the same time. Furness, during his visit here in October, was enthusiastic over the Soo as a site for a shipbuilding plant and secured complete statistics of lake commerce and all available facts relating to the shipping industry. He is a member of parliament and the owner of five shipbuilding yards in England, as well as extensive steel and iron works and numerous collieries.

The Canadian plant is to be located west of and in close proximity to the Clergue steel works, the first portion of which is now nearing completion.

Of the 16 tube works mills, for which $25,000,000 has been raised and in which Furness and Clergue are both interested, 14 are to be built at the Michigan Soo and two in the Canadian Soo.

In connection with the tube works at the American Soo, big batteries of coke ovens will be built.

GIRLS BURNED TO DEATH.

Two Daughters of Algonquin Man Cremated.

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., Dec. 12.—Two daughters of John Hazelton, living at Algonquin, a suburb of this city, were cremated yesterday morning. The father of the family lighted a fire in the stove, which caught the woodwork of the house. Before the blaze was discovered the fire had made such headway that the girls were burned in their beds.

Normal's New Science Building.

Ypsilanti, Mich., Dec. 12.—The state board of education has decided to place the new normal science building on the campus, between the boiler house and the Student Christian association building. The proposition for the city to donate a site has therefore gone a-glimmering. The structure will face Cross street, but as it will be in part hemmed in by other buildings, it will not be of showy design.

Scalded at a Social.

Belleville, Mich., Dec. 12.—At the O. E. S. social here last night Mr. and Mrs. Hiram Spear were seriously scalded about the face and arms by the explosion of a covered pail which was full of boiling water. Mr. and Mrs. Spear were helping in the kitchen and the steam and hot water inflicted painful burns on both of them. It is feared that Mrs. Spear will be disfigured for life.

Flint Grocer Charged With Perjury.

Flint, Mich., Dec. 12.—Frank O. Gordon, a prominent grocer, was arrested yesterday for perjury in accordance with an order issued by Judge Wisner. Gordon is charged with giving false testimony in a suit instituted against him by Crusoe Bros. of Detroit. Hearing was set for Dec. 27, and Gordon released on $1,000 bail.

The farm residence of Mrs. Constance Jewett, four miles north of Allegan, burned to the ground Tuesday, and most of the contents were lost.

A brick and stone hotel will be built on the site of the old West Branch hotel owned by S. C. Dewey at West Branch. The plans are being made for a structure which will cost $12,000.

KILLS TWO OFFICERS.

Horrible Shooting Affair in Houston, Texas.

Houston, Tex., Dec. 12.—When Officers J. C. James and Herman Youngst attempted to arrest an alleged buncosteerer, Sid Preacher, yesterday afternoon, the latter opened fire with a shotgun. At the first fire he mortally wounded James, who fell. He then fired at Youngst, knocking him down, and was on top of him, beating the officer, when James raised himself from the gutter and fired three times, killing Preacher. James and Youngst died within the same moment. There is great excitement over the matter.

Preacher was well known to the police and had been arrested frequently. The police have been watching him closely during carnival week. With a shotgun, he went to the police and complained that they were interfering in his business. The police attempted to arrest him, when he opened fire on them. Several hundred people saw the duel. A warrant was sworn out last night for J. B. Brockman, Preacher's attorney, charging him with murder, and he has been landed in jail. It is charged by the police that the attorney advised Preacher to use a shotgun in case any attempt should be made to arrest him.

BECK MADE AN IMMIGRANT.

The Man Who Shipped Himself in a Box.

New York, Dec. 12.—Johann Beck, the painter who arrived here boxed up in the hold of the Hamburg-American liner Palatia, nearly dead, was allowed yesterday to enter the country as an immigrant. This privilege was granted by the special board of inquiry. Beck was turned over to two men who said that they would see that he did not become a public charge.

Kitchener Verifies His Statement.

London, Dec. 12.—Lord Kitchener's promised statement, specifying 37 separate instances in which natives have been shot by the Boers, which involve the loss of 84 lives, was issued by the war office last night. In some of the cases mentioned the blacks were shot after an informal court-martial or upon being accused of spying, but on numerous instances, Lord Litchener indicates, the natives were shot in cold blood in order to hide traces of the movements of Boer commandoes.

Women Trying Their Influence.

Manila, Dec. 12.—The Women's Peace league, organized under the leadership of Senorita Pobleta, a Filipino, has transmitted letters, with the permission of General Chaffee, urging peace upon the insurgent general, Malvar, and other Filipino chiefs. These letters remind the Filipino leaders in the field that the war has destroyed innumerable homes and devastated large territories, all of which, while it abundantly proves the tenacity of the insurgents and their faith in their cause, does not remove the fact that the operations of American soldiers throughout the islands daily demonstrate the resolution of the people of the United States to make their sovereignty respected throughout the archipelago. The league urges the leaders to make peace to avoid greater evils. The women's league has received a cablegram to the effect that the Filipino general, Lukban, who is in Samar, is pleading for a discontinuance of hostilities.

TOUGH BILL OF FARE

MESSES THAT ARE SERVED ON BOARD A "MEAN SHIP."

Queer Names the Sailors Give to the Unpalatable Food—Dog Chowder, By the Wind Soup, Topgallant Tea and Cow Jipper.

Some ships are known as "mean ships" by sailors on account of the food that is served to the forecastle. They are chiefly deep water sailing ships and tramp steamers. Of course what a sailor shall have to eat is provided for by law, but the law sometimes gets badly mixed up on blue water. The strange dishes served to sailors on "mean ships" are no stranger than the names the sailors give them. One of the commonest of "mean ship" dishes is "by the wind soup." This delicacy is composed of well polished mutton bones, stale meat trimmings, a handful of potato parings and scraps from the captain's table. The mixture is boiled vigorously for two hours, at the end of which time the result is hot water of a light brown color with floating islands of grease on its surface. A little hardtack is added, and there you have your "by the wind soup."

When a "mean ship" gets well out to sea, one of the first dishes to appear is "dog chowder." It is a sort of resurrection pudding, made of scraps that the cook does not dare to serve up as they are, but which he shreds finely or pounds in a mortar until all semblance of their original state is lost. The mass is well mixed with grease and served hot.

Grease plays an important part in all the "mean ship" dishes. Another standard item on the bill of fare of these ships is "topgallant tea." It is served to the men in the dog watches, and the recipe for making it is this: Three times a week weak tea, made from fresh tea leaves, is served. The leaves are saved and mixed with the tea leaves from the captain's table. Brown sugar or molasses is added, and from the mixture is made a decoction which is served four days in the week and which the sailors coll "topgallant tea."

"Cow jipper" is a common dish on all "mean ships." It is made by boiling beef bones for six or seven hours with all the scraps left over from former meals. The broth so obtained is well seasoned with salt and served out. Another dish is "jumping jenny," sometimes called "double belt pie," from the fact that the sailor has to take in a couple of holes in his belt after eating it in order to stay him until the next meal. It is the result of a week's leavings from the cabin table mixed with six or eight ship's biscuits and half an onion. It is not at all a nice dish, and a sailor with epicurean tastes always makes a row when the cook serves it.

On some of the "western ocean" tramps a dish is served known to the sailors as "hide stew," and the toughest old salt that ever was drunk on shore or mutinous at sea is subdued by it to a state of lamblike docility, for it is sure to double him up with indigestion and make him think of the hereafter. It is made from a collection of the skins of everything—pigs, potatoes, fowl (from the captain's table), bacon rind and well picked chicken legs. This is boiled for six hours and plenty of thick grease added.

The captain of a "mean ship" always says, of course, that his men are well fed and that they only growl and grumble because they are a bad, ungrateful lot of abandoned wretches. In proof of it he will tell you that he gives them plum duff twice a week. The duff he gives them is known to the sailors as "bowline duff." It is made from the scrapings of pudding cloths that once held the puddings consumed in port—when the captain gave his men real duff, so that they might not know that they had shipped on a "mean ship" and make a "pierhead jump" for liberty. These scrapings are made bulky with biscuit paste and flavored with cloves. "Bowline duff" is the least unpopular of all the dishes on the bill of fare of the "mean ship," and its actual cost is 2 cents for every three men.—Exchange.

The Spoiled Child.

Once upon a time a young kingfisher went to the father bird and asked for his fishing rod, that he might catch some choice trout he had seen in a nearby stream.

"No!" answered the stern parent.

The young bird went his way and in an hour returned dripping wet, saying that he had tried to catch the fish without a pole and had fallen into the water.

"There!" said the mother bird to the father. "I knew you would spoil the child if you spared the rod."

THE COURIER OF THE CZAR

By Jules Verne

When he was fourteen, Michael Strogoff had killed his first bear quite alone. That was nothing. But after stripping it he dragged the gigantic animal's skin to his father's house, many versts distant, thus exhibiting remarkable strength in a boy so young.

Gifted with marvelous acuteness, when every object was hidden in mist or even in higher latitudes, where the polar night is prolonged for many days, he could find his way when others would have had no idea whither to direct their steps. He had learned to read almost imperceptible signs, the forms of icicles, the appearance of the small branches of trees, mists rising far away on the horizon, vague sounds in the air, distant reports, the flight of birds through the foggy atmosphere—a thousand circumstances which are so many words to those who can decipher them. Moreover, tempered by snow like a Damascus blade in the waters of Syria, he had a frame of iron, as General Kissoff had said, and, what was no less true, a heart of gold.

The only sentiment of love felt by Michael Strogoff was that which he entertained for his mother, the aged Marfa, who could never be induced to leave the house of the Strogoffs at Omsk, on the banks of the Istish, where the old huntsman and she had lived so long together. When her son left her, he went away with a full heart, but promising to come and see her whenever he could possibly do so, and this promise he had always religiously kept.

When Michael was twenty, it was decided that he should enter the personal service of the emperor of Russia, in the corps of the couriers of the czar. The hardy, intelligent, zealous, well conducted young Siberian first distinguished himself especially in a journey to the Caucasus, through the midst of a difficult country, ravaged by some restless successors of Schamyl; then, later, in an important mission to Petrepolowski, in Kamchatka, the extreme limit of Asiatic Russia. During these long journeys he displayed such marvelous coolness, prudence and courage as to gain him the approbation and protection of his chief, who rapidly advanced him in his profession.

The furloughs which were his due after these distant missions, although he might be separated from her by thousands of versts and winter had rendered the roads almost impassable, he had never failed to devote to his old mother. Having been much employed in the south of the empire, he had not seen old Marfa for three years—three ages—the first time in his life he had been so long absent from her. Now, however, in a few days he would obtain his furlough, and he had accordingly already made preparations for departure for Omsk when the events which have been related occurred. Michael Strogoff was therefore introduced into the czar's presence in complete ignorance of what the emperor expected from him.

The czar, apparently satisfied with his scrutiny, went to his bureau and, motioning to the chief of police to seat himself, dictated in a low voice a letter of not more than a few lines. The letter penned, the czar reread it attentively and then signed it, preceding his name with these words, "Byt po semon," which, signifying "so be it," constitutes the decisive formula of the Russian emperors.

The letter was placed in an envelope, which was sealed with the imperial arms.

The czar, rising, told Michael Strogoff to draw near.

Michael advanced a few steps and then stood motionless, ready to answer.

The czar again looked him full in the face, and their eyes met. Then in an abrupt tone:

"Thy name?" he asked.

"Michael Strogoff, sire."

"Thy rank?"

"Captain in the corps of couriers of the czar."

"Thou dost know Siberia?"

"I am a Siberian."

"A native of"—

"Omsk, sire."

"Hast thou relations there?"

"Yes, sire."

"What relations?"

"My old mother."

The czar suspended his questions for a moment, then, pointing to the letter which he held in his hand, he said:

"Here is a letter which I charge thee, Michael Strogoff, to deliver into the hands of the grand duke and to no other but him."

"I will deliver it, sire."

"The grand duke is at Irkutsk."

"I will go to Irkutsk."

"Thou wilt have to traverse a rebellious country, invaded by Tartars, whose interest it will be to intercept this letter."

"I will traverse it."

"Above all, beware of the traitor Ivan Ogareff, who will perhaps meet thee on the way."

"I will beware of him."

"Wilt thou pass through Omsk?"

"Sire, that is my route."

"If thou dost see thy mother, there will be the risk of being recognized. Thou must not see her!"

Michael Strogoff hesitated a moment.

"I will not see her," said he.

"Swear to me that nothing will make thee acknowledge who thou art nor whither thou art going."

"I swear it."

"Michael Strogoff," continued the czar, giving the letter to the young courier, "take this letter. On it depends the safety of all Siberia and perhaps the life of my brother, the grand duke."

"This letter shall be delivered to his highness the grand duke."

"Thou wilt pass whatever happens?"

"I shall pass, or they shall kill me."

"I want thee to live."

"I shall live, and I shall pass," answered Michael Strogoff.

The czar appeared satisfied with Strogoff's calm and simple answer.

"Go, then, Michael Strogoff," said he, "go for God, for Russia, for my brother and for myself."

The courier, having saluted his sovereign, immediately left the imperial cabinet and in a few minutes the New palace.

"You made a good choice there, general," said the czar.

"I think so, sire," replied General Kissoff, "and your majesty may be sure that Michael Strogoff will do all that a man can do."

"He is indeed a man," said the czar.

CHAPTER III.

THE distance between Moscow and Irkutsk, about to be traversed by Michael Strogoff, was 5,200 versts. Before the telegraph wire extended from the Ural mountains to the eastern frontier of Siberia the dispatch service was performed by couriers, those who traveled the most rapidly taking eighteen days to get from Moscow to Irkutsk.

In the first place, however, he must not travel as a courier of the czar usually would. No one must even suspect what he really was. Spies swarm in a rebellious country. Let him be recognized, and his mission would be in danger. Also, while supplying him with a large sum of money, which was sufficient for his journey and would facilitate it in some measure, General Kissoff had not given him any document specifying that he was in the emperor's service, which is the sesame par excellence. He contented himself with furnishing him with a podorojna.

The podorojna was made out in the name of Nicholas Korpanoff, merchant, living at Irkutsk. It authorized Nicholas Korpanoff to be accompanied, if requisite, by one or more persons, and, moreover, it was by special notification made available in the event of the Muscovite government forbidding natives of any other countries to leave Russia.

The podorojna is simply a permission to take post horses, but Michael Strogoff was not to use it unless he was sure that by so doing he would not excite suspicion as to his mission—that is to say, while he was on European territory. The consequence was that in Siberia, while traversing the insurgent provinces, he would have no power over the relays either in the choice of horses in preference to others or in demanding conveyances for his personal use. Neither was Michael Strogoff to forget that he was no longer a courier, but a plain merchant, Nicholas Korpanoff, traveling from Moscow to Irkutsk, and as such exposed to all the impediments of an ordinary journey.

To pass unknown more or less rapidly, but to pass somehow or other—such were the directions he had received.

Thirty years previously the escort of a traveler of rank consisted of not less than 200 mounted Cossacks, 200 foot soldiers, 25 Baskir horsemen, 300 camels, 400 horses, 25 wagons, 2 portable boats and 2 pieces of cannon. All this was requisite for a journey in Siberia.

Michael Strogoff, however, had neither cannon nor horsemen nor foot soldiers nor beasts of burden. He would travel in a carriage or on horseback when he could, on foot when he could not.

There would be no difficulty in getting over the first 1,500 versts, the distance between Moscow and the Russian frontier. Railroads, post carriages, steamboats, relays of horses, were at every one's disposal and consequently at the disposal of the courier of the czar.

Accordingly on the morning of the 16th of July, having doffed his uniform, with a knapsack on his back, dressed in the simple Russian costume, tightly fitting tunic, the traditional belt of the moujik, wide trousers, gartered at the knees, and high boots, Michael Strogoff arrived at the station in time for the first train. He carried no arms, openly at least, but under his belt was hidden a revolver and in his pocket one of those large knives with which a Siberian hunter can so neatly disembowel a bear without injuring its precious fur.

A crowd of travelers had collected at the Moscow station. The stations on the Russian railroads are much used as places for meeting not only by those who are about to proceed by the train, but by friends who come to see them off. It indeed resembles from the variety of characters assembled a small news exchange.

The train in which Michael took his place was to set him down at Nijni Novgorod. There terminated at that time the iron road which, uniting Moscow and St. Petersburg, will eventually continue to the Russian frontier. It was a journey of about 400 versts, and the train would accomplish it in ten hours. Once arrived at Nijni Novgorod, Strogoff would, according to circumstances, either take the land route or the steamer on the Volga, so as to reach the Ural mountains as soon as possible.

Michael Strogoff ensconsed himself in his corner like a worthy citizen whose affairs go well with him and who endeavors to kill time by sleep.

Nevertheless, as he was not alone in his compartment, he slept with one eye open and listened with both his ears.

In fact, the rumor of the rising of the Kirghiz hordes and of the Tartar invasion had transpired in some degree. The occupants of the carriage, whom chance had made his traveling companions, discussed the subject, though with that caution which has become habitual among Russians, who know that spies are ever on the watch for any treasonable expressions which may be uttered.

A vacant place was found opposite the courier of the czar. The young girl took it after placing by her side a modest traveling bag of red leather which seemed to constitute her luggage. Then, seating herself with downcast eyes, she prepared for a journey which was still to last several hours.

Michael Strogoff could not help looking attentively at his newly arrived fellow traveler. As she was so placed as to travel with her back to the engine, he even offered her his seat, which she might prefer to her own, but she thanked him with a slight bend of her graceful neck.

The young girl appeared to be about sixteen or seventeen years of age. Her head, truly charming, was of the purest Slavonic type—slightly severe, and which would when a few summers had passed over her unfold into beauty rather than mere prettiness. From beneath a sort of kerchief which she wore on her head escaped in profusion light golden hair. Her eyes were brown, soft and expressive of much sweetness of temper. The nose was straight and attached to her pale and somewhat thin cheeks by delicate mobile nostrils. The lips were finely cut, but it seemed as if they had long since forgotten how to

The young traveler was tall and upright, as well as could be judged of her figure from the very simple and ample pelisse that covered her. Although she was still a very young girl in the literal sense of the term, the development of her high forehead and clearly cut features gave the idea that she was the possesser of a great moral energy, a point which did not escape Michael Strogoff. Evidently this young girl had already suffered in the past, and the future doubtless did not present itself to her in glowing colors. But it was none the less certain that she had known how to struggle and that she had resolved to struggle still with the trials of life. Her energy was evidently prompt and persistent and her calmness unalterable even under circumstances in which a man would be likely to give way or lose his self command.

Such was the impression which she produced at first sight. Michael Strogoff, being himself of an energetic temperament, was naturally struck by the character of her physiognomy, and, while taking care not to cause her annoyance by a too persistent gaze, he observed his neighbor with no small interest. The costume of the young traveler was both extremely simple and appropriate. She was not rich—that could easily be seen—but not the slightest mark of negligence was to be discerned in her dress. All her luggage was contained in a leather bag under lock and key, and which, for want of room, she held on her lap.

She wore a long, dark pelisse, which was gracefully adjusted at the neck by a blue tie. Under this pelisse a short skirt, also dark, fell over a robe which reached to her ankles and of which the lower edge was ornamented with some simple embroidery. Half boots of worked leather and thickly soled, as if chosen in the anticipation of a long journey, covered her small feet.

Michael Strogoff fancied that he recognized by certain details the fashion of the costume of Livonia, and he thought that his neighbor must be a native of the Baltic provinces.

But whither was this young girl going alone at an age when the fostering care of a father or the protection of a brother is considered a matter of necessity? Had she now come after an already long journey from the provinces of western Russia? Was she merely going to Nijni Novgorod, or was the end of her travels beyond the eastern frontier of the empire? Would some relation, some friend, await her arrival by the train, or was it not more probable, on the contrary, that she would find herself as much isolated in the town as she was in this compartment, where no one, she must think, appeared to care for her? It was probable.

Michael Strogoff observed her with interest, but, himself reserved, he sought no opportunity of accosting her, although several hours must elapse before the arrival of the train at Nijni Novgorod.

Before any one could get out of the carriages the inspectors of police presented themselves at the doors and examined the passengers.

Michael Strogoff showed his podorojna made out in the name of Nicholas Korpanoff. He had consequently no difficulty.

As to the other travelers in the compartment, all bound for Nijni Novgorod, their appearance, happily for them, was in nowise suspicious.

The young girl in her turn exhibited not a passport, since passports are no longer required in Russia, but a permit indorsed with a private seal and which seemed to be of a special character. The inspector read the permit with attention. Then, having attentively examined the person whose description it contained, he said:

"You are from Riga?"

"Yes," replied the young girl.

"You are going to Irkutsk?"

"Yes."

"By what route?"

"By Perm."

"Good!" replied the inspector. "Take care to have your permit vised at the police station of Nijni Novgorod." The young girl bent her head in token of assent.

Hearing the questions and replies, Michael Strogoff experienced a mingled sentiment both of surprise and pity. What, this young girl alone journeying to that faroff Siberia and at a time when to its ordinary dangers were added all the perils of an invaded country and one in a state of insurrection? How would she reach it? What would become of her?

The inspection ended, the doors of the carriages were opened, but before Michael Strogoff could move toward her the young Livonian, who had been the first to descend, had disappeared in the crowd which thronged the platforms of the railway station.

Nijni Novgorod, Lower Novgorod, situated at the junction of the Volga and the Oka, is the chief town in the district of the same name. It was here that Michael Strogoff was obliged to leave the railway, which at the time did not go beyond this town. Thus as he advanced his traveling would become first less speedy and then less safe.

Nijni Novgorod, the fixed population of which is only from 30,000 to 35,000 inhabitants, contained at that time more than 300,000—that is to say, the population was increased tenfold. This addition was in consequence of the celebrated fair which was held within the walls for three weeks. Formerly Makariew had the benefit of this concourse of traders, but since 1817 the fair had been removed to Nijni Novgorod.

The town, dreary enough at most times, then presented a truly animated scene. Six different races of merchants, European and Asiatic, were fraternizing under the congenial influence of trade.

Michael Strogoff strolled through the town quietly, looking out for some inn. He was looking for supper rather than a bed, but he found both at the sign of the City of Constantinople.

His supper finished, Michael Strogoff instead of going up to his bedroom again strolled out into the town.

Why did not Michael Strogoff go quietly to bed, as would have seemed more seasonable after a long railway journey? Was he thinking of the young Livonian girl who had for so many hours been his traveling companion? Having nothing better to do, he was thinking of her.

"Alone," he said to himself; "alone in the midst of these wandering tribes! And yet the present dangers are nothing to those she must undergo. Siberia! Irkutsk! I am about to dare all risks for Russia, for the czar, while she is about to do so for whom? For what? She is authorized to cross the frontier! And the country beyond is in revolt! The steppes beyond are full of Tartar bands!"

To-day is Friday the 13th day of the month and on account of its being Friday the 13th many people think it is an unlucky day. LOTS OF FARMERS

Lansing Filled With Tillers of the Soil.

TWO ORGANIZATIONS MEET

Association of Farmers' Clubs and State Grange Meet at the Capital City—Worthy Master Horton and President L. H. Ives Preside.

Lansing, Mich., Dec. 11.—A parliament of farmers opened yesterday at the state capitol, and the gilded chambers of house and senate are echoing significantly to the tread of robust agriculturists. In the senate chamber 300 delegates to the Michigan State Association of Farmers' clubs have pre-empted the soft political seats; across the rotunda 250 delegates to the State Grange met in secret conclave.

President L. H. Ives jollied the senate of farmers into good humor and ordered the music turned on. Rev. W. H. Pound of Plymouth Congregational church, Lansing, invoked a prayer upon the assembly, and the situation was up to Mayor James Hammell.

"I compliment the farmer on being foremost among the producers of wealth," said Mayor Hammell. The mayor pictured the advance from scythe and flail to modern appliances and told of his own farming experiences. He extended a cordial welcome to the delegates and declared everything open to them but the city jail.

In her annual report the association secretary, Miss Julia Ball, Hamburg, Mich., outlined the rapid growth and excellent results of the organization. "Nearly every other business in life is organized," she said, "even tramps organize. Only one-third of the local clubs have joined the state association. When a club is organized it is invariably permanent."

The principal address of the afternoon was then made by the old secretary, A. B. Cook, Owosso, who though a young farmer, has won his spurs in past conventions.

The State Grange.

Simultaneously with the farmers' clubs, the State Grange went into session. The executive committee will have to decide where in Michigan the next annual national convention will be held.

Worthy Master George B. Horton in his annual address congratulated the organization on its progress, which, he said, has been superior to that made by any other state organization. The granges organized and reorganized during the year will nearly if not quite equal those of all other states combined. Four new counties, according to Mr. Horton, are represented at the meeting, and the membership has grown from 8,000 to 30,000.

Grange insurance companies, organized under the law recently enacted in Michigan, were warmly commended. Master Horton dwelt at length upon the undesirability of the township unit system of school government. He also censured roundly the practice of centralizing the upper grades of schools in cities, reducing the district system to the lower grades only, and urged action against the tendency before it should become too late.

Reforms Advocated.

The following national legislation was advocated: Extension of free rural mail delivery; postal savings banks; election of United States senators by direct vote; constitutional amendment granting congress power to regulate and control all corporations and combinations; enlargement of the powers of the interstate commerce commission; national pure food law; an anti-trust law clearly defining what acts of corporations are detrimental to public welfare; speedy construction of the Nicaragua canal by the United States; construction of a ship canal connecting the Mississippi to the great lakes and the Atlantic; revision of fees and salaries of federal officials; anti-trust law with provision for state railway commissioners with power to fix maximum freight and passenger rates.

Evening Session.

Before the evening sessions, in evident rivalry, the grangers and club delegates held a jubilee. The corridor dividing the two camps was crowded with people rushing from one gay scene to another. The grangers threw business to the winds and bid the heavens rejoice. Fruits and flowers filled the air and the professors and pupils of the Agricultural college gave an entertainment, President Synder of the college presiding. The veteran past master, also of the National Grange, was made the lion of the reception.

A crowded auditorium and gallery listened to the addresses of President Ives of the farmers' clubs, Atty.-Gen. Oren, and Miss Maude Gilchrist, dean of the woman's department of the M. A. C.; President Ives was greeted with marked applause and many of his references were cheered. His talk embraced the many subjects in which the farmer is interested.

Committees Named.

President Ives named the following committees:

State—J. T. Daniells, Clinton; J. B. Tagiman, Livingston.

National—A. B. Cook, Shiawassee; L. D. Lovewell, Oakland; P. W. Rogers, Lenawee.

Credentials—M. H. Crafts, Jackson; J. E. Lewis, Tuscola; H. A. Curtis, Hillsdale.

Constitution—Capt. W. M. Horton, L. D. Watkins, Jackson; Julia Ball, Livingston.

Today both great organizations will be in full sway and important resolutions will be adopted.

The Girls of Limerick.

If asked, "Where are the prettiest girls in the world?" I will immediately reply, "In Limerick, Ireland." There are a freshness of face, lustrousness of eyes, healthfulness of color and complexion about the Limerick girls en masse that carry off the sweepstakes trophy. The girls of Cork and of the lakes—in fact, of the country all the way down from Dublin—are somewhat of the Limerick order. In form they constitute a happy medium between the rotund English maids across one channel and the sylphlike Parisian demoiselles beyond the other.

But the Limerick face is the perfection of female beauty, a human ceramic without a blemish. The Limerick girl is also the highest example of exquisite wit and ingenuousness, an extraordinary assimilation, to be sure. In other words, while she is not insensible of her sparkle of words, she seems like one who has never looked frequently into a mirror. She has regular and sometimes very pretty teeth, and, if her nose is often inclined to retrousse and there is an "Irish expression of mouth," these but add piquancy to her other beautiful features.—Argonaut.

A BRUTAL ASSAULT.

Someone Attacks Washington Woman While in Bed.

Washington, Dec. 11.—Mrs. Ada Gilbert Dennis, a fashionable dressmaker, was found in an almost dying condition in her room, yesterday morning under circumstances that promise to rival the Bonine murder case. Her skull was fractured, jawbone broken and left ear almost severed from the head. Her left arm bore bruises indicative of a struggle, and her clothing and bedding were saturated with blood. She was removed to the Garfield hospital and a large force of detectives put on the case. The name of her assailant is unknown.

Robbery apparently was not the motive for the crime, as on the table at the foot of the bed, in plain view, was a small box containing a pocketbook well filled with greenbacks and other money. There was a bloody imprint of a hand on the piano lid in the parlor and a window in that room was open. It is supposed the assailant escaped through this window.

HOT METAL CAUSES EXPLOSION.

Felt for Miles Around—Nine Men Injured.

Sharon, Pa., Dec.—An explosion that shook the earth for miles around, shattered windows in hundreds of houses at South Sharon, moved adjacent buildings from their foundations and caused the injury of nine men, two perhaps fatally, occurred at the Sharon Steel Co.'s plant yestesday. Out of the nine men injured, four were taken to the hospital. They are: Michael Howard, burned about head, one arm broken at elbow, serious; Michael Barquerich, burned about head, painful; Edward Altman, head, face and body burned, will probably die; Cassius Truxall, compound fracture left arm, serious.

The other five men were taken to their homes in South Sharon. The explosion occurred in the casting department of "Pig Mill." The metal was being poured from the ladle into the casting machine, when it came in contact with some water, which caused a blast that was felt a great distance.

CHILD'S REMARKABLE COOLNESS.

Little Chicago Girl Plays Piano Under Trying Conditions.

Chicago, Dec. 11.—While clouds of smoke filled the hallways from a fierce fire which raged in the basement of the Lincoln school yesterday, Ethel Barker, 13 years old, sat at a piano in the main corridor upstairs and played a lively two-step for the 300 children to keep time by while marching out of the burning building. Miss Barber did not cease playing until the last child had left the building, and when she tried to escape she was twice driven back by clouds of dense smoke, which by that time rolled through the corridors. She finally reached a door and went to the first floor by groping along the walls and stair banisters.

As a result of her coolness all the children were taken out safely, although a panic was narrowly averted when they reached the lower floor and found that the building was on fire.

KILLS HIMSELF AND FAMILY.

Despondency Prompts a Minister to Do Awful Deeds.

Calumet, Mich., Dec. 11.—Rev. John Kinnunen, minister of the Finnish Evangelical Lutheran church at Copper Falls, Keweenaw county, killed his wife and two children and committed suicide last night. Kinnunen was 40 years old and was universally respected. One son, a deaf mute, was recently sent to the state school for the deaf at Flint, Mich., and was killed on his arrival there by a passing train. Kinnunen brooded over his son's death and became violently insane. He first cut his wife's throat with a butcher knife and then killed his two young sons with the same weapon. The oldest boy, aged 13, escaped and alarmed the neighbors. When they reached the house, all four were found with their throats cut and dead. After killing his wife and two sons, Kinnunen had fired the house and cut his own throat. The flames were extinguished.

One Out of Thirteen.

Owosso, Mich., Dec. 11.—Mayor S. D. Emery of Owosso and Detective Fred M. Moore of Detroit are happy, as they have at last succeeded in getting one conviction out of the 13 cases which Moore worked up. The victim is William Diebenstadt, convicted by a jury of selling liquor on Sunday, July 14. Diebenstadt is awaiting sentence on another count, having been found guilty last week of violating the law on another Sunday, the case being worked up by Marshal Ross.

Race War in Hancock.

Hancock, Mich., Dec. 11.—A race war, which promises to become serious, has started between the English-speaking people and the Finns of this place. Whenever a person of either faction happens to be out alone he is pounced upon and badly beaten by half a dozen men. The police are doing their best to break up the feud but in spite of their vigilance rows are of nightly occurrence.

May Be Dissected.

Jackson, Mich., Dec. 11.—The remains of Norman L. Beebe, a former prominent business man of Pinckney, who dropped dead here last week, are still at the morgue in this city. The man's wife and step-son, who reside near Pinckney, refuse to have anything to do with the remains. Beebe was also a member of the Pinckney lodge of Masons. The remains may be sent to the U. of M. school of medicine for dissection.

A Woman's Awful Peril.

"There is only one chance to save your life and that is through an operation" were the startling words heard by Mrs. I. B. Hunt, of Lime Ridge, Wis., from her doctor after he had vainly tried to cure her of a frightful case of stomach trouble and yellow jaundice. Gall stones had formed and she constantly grew worse. Then she began to use Electric Bitters which wholly cured her. It's a wonderful Stomach, Liver and Kidney remedy. Cures Dyspepsia, Loss of Appetite. Try it. Only 50 cts. Guaranteed. For sale by C. A. AFTER 20 YEARS

A Lady of Grand Rapids Strikes the Right Thing.

Many extraordinary cases of the wo k of the little conqueror are coming to light in Michigan. Hundreds of them have been investigated by our representative and each but gives added strength to those which have gone before. Such well deserved words of praise are daily showered on this modern wonder-worker from all parts of the Union, Speaking of her experience a lady of Grand Rapids, Mrs. Jas Gardner, who resides at No. 309 Second street, says: "For over twenty years I was bothered with kidney trouble and despite treatment by physicians and using almost every remedy that came to my notice I received no permanent relief until I tried Doan's Kidney Pills. No one except those who have been through the mill of kidney complaint can tell the torture that one endures. The constant pains across my back extending up the right side; totally unable to lie on my right side; the stiffness and numbness of my limbs; the excruciating pain, is something much more easy to think about than to express. Many a time my husband has had to rub my back to get up the circulation before I was able to get on my feet. My family prevailed on me to try Doan's Kidney Pills but as I had used dozens of other remedies I had very little hope of finding relief. They persisted in their advice and in the fall of 1897 I used three boxes, I felt like a different person. I was in better health than I had been in years. The pain in my back left, I slept well at night, I could do my housework as well as ever I could, and I give the entire credit to Doan's Kidney Pills. I make this statement so that other women who suffer as I suffered may be in a position to know what to use if they wish to get rid of that prevalent disease, kidney complaint."

Women And Jewels.

Jewels, candy, flowers, man—that is the order of woman's preferences. Jewels form a magnet of mighty power to the average woman. Even that greatest of all jewels, health, is often ruined in the strenuous efforts to make or save the money to purchase them. If a woman will risk her health to get a coveted gem then let her fortify herself against the insiduous consequences of coughs, colds and bronchial affections, by the regular use of Dr. Boschee's German Syrup. It will promptly arrest consumption in its early stages and heal the affected lungs and bronchial tubes and drive the dread disease from the system. It is not a cure all, but it is a certain cure for coughs, colds and all bronchial troubles. You can get Dr. G. G. Greon's reliable remedies at J. J. Orr's. Get Green's Special Almanac.

Chas. Replogle, of Atwater, O., was in very bad shape. He says: "I suffered a great deal with my kidneys and was requested to try Foley's Kidney Cure, I did so and in four days I was able to go to work again, now I am entirely well."

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address,

KICK A DOG

Kick a dog and he bites you. He bites you and you kick him. The more you kick the more he bites and the more he bites the more you kick. Each makes the other worse.

A thin body makes thin blood. Thin blood makes a thin body. Each makes the other worse. If there is going to be a change the help must come from outside.

Scott's Emulsion is the right help. It breaks up such a combination. First it sets the stomach right. Then it enriches the blood. That strengthens the body and it begins to grow new flesh.

A strong body makes rich blood and rich blood makes a strong body. Each makes the other better. This is the way Scott's Emulsion puts the thin body on its feet. Now it can get along by itself. No need of medicine.

This picture represents the Trade Mark of Scott's Emulsion and is on the wrapper of every bottle.

WHAT'S IN A NAME?

(Benson's Plaster is Pain's Master.)

In the days of 'wild cat' money in the West, the Ames shovels were used as currency. They were as stable as gold; their price did not vary a cent in twenty years. The very name of Oliver Ames & Son, was a synonym for honesty. It was current all over the world.

On the same principle Benson's Porous Plaster is the universal standard external remedy. To say it is a "good" plaster does not describe it; it is the best possible plaster. For every disease in which an external remedy is available, Benson's Plaster is used almost as a matter of course.

Benson's Plaster quickly relieves and cures where other modes of treatment are either exasperatingly slow or have no good effect whatever. Coughs, colds, lumbago, kidney trouble, rheumatism, lame back, etc., are at once benefited and soon cured.

Capsicum, Strengthening and Belladonna plasters have none of the curative virtues of Benson's. More than 5,000 physicians and druggists have commended Benson's Plaster as a remedy in which the public may have implicit confidence; while, in a comparative test with other plasters, Benson's has received fifty-five highest awards. Beware of substitutes and cheap imitations.

For sale by all druggists or we will prepay postage on any number ordered in the United States on receipt of 25c. each.

How far does sunlight penetrate beneath the surface of the seas? has been asked many times, and now the camera has answered the question. By exposing the most sensitive photographic plates at various depths it has been ascertained with definiteness how much sunlight there is in the water each descending foot.

There is a point at which no action of light is found, and that point is 600 feet under the surface. Below that is absolute darkness, and the only way in which the most delicate plate can be effected in that black abyss is to send down an electric light with it.

Pretty Children

"We have three children. Before the birth of the last one my wife used four bottles of MOTHER'S FRIEND. If you had the pictures of our children, you could see at a glance that the last one is healthiest, prettiest and finest-looking of them all. My wife thinks Mother's Friend is the greatest and grandest remedy in the world for expectant mothers."—Written by a Kentucky Attorney-at-Law.

The coming mother's disposition and temper remain unruffled throughout the ordeal, because this relaxing, penetrating liniment relieves the usual distress. A good-natured mother is pretty sure to have a good-natured child. The patient is kept in a strong, healthy condition, which the child also inherits. How She Helped a Young Man.

A druggist in Memphis was holding forth recently on the difficulties which beset a young man in his first struggle with the world. "I had a hard time when I first started in business for myself," he said, apropos of a remark made by one of his hearers. "The public has good intentions toward you, but it sometimes has strange ways of expressing them. An old lady used to come in to buy postage stamps. I observed to her one day that she was evidently a great letter writer. 'Oh,' she said sweetly, 'I don't really need all the stamps I buy here. It's only because I wish to help a young man like yourself, just beginning to build up a business, that I purchase them.'"—Kansas City Star.

A Pleasure of Memory.

Drolichon bought a phonograph and insisted upon his mother-in-law having her voice registered by the instrument.

As the good woman refused he added maliciously:

"Oh, come, now; just a few words. You can't think how much pleasure it will give me to hear your voice—when you are gone!"—Paris Figaro.

ALL CASES OF
DEAFNESS OR HARD HEARING ARE NOW CURABLE
by our new invention. Only those born deaf are incurable.

HEAD NOISES CEASE IMMEDIATELY.

F. A. WERMAN, OF BALTIMORE, SAYS:

BALTIMORE, Md., March 30, 1901.

Gentlemen:—Being entirely cured of deafness, thanks to your treatment, I will now give you a full history of my case, to be used at your discretion.

About five years ago my right ear began to sing, and this kept on getting worse, until I lost my hearing in this ear entirely.

I underwent a treatment for catarrh, for three months, without any success, consulted a number of physicians, among others, the most eminent ear specialist of this city, who told me that only an operation could help me, and even that only temporarily, that the head noises would then cease, but the hearing in the affected ear would be lost forever.

I then saw your advertisement accidentally in a New York paper, and ordered your treatment. After I had used it only a few days according to your directions, the noises ceased, and to-day, after five weeks, my hearing in the diseased ear has been entirely restored. I thank you heartily and beg to remain Very truly yours,

F. A. WERMAN, 730 S. Broadway, Baltimore, Md.

Our treatment does not interfere with your usual occupation.

Examination and advice free. YOU CAN CURE YOURSELF AT HOME at a nominal cost.

SCHLEY HIT HARD

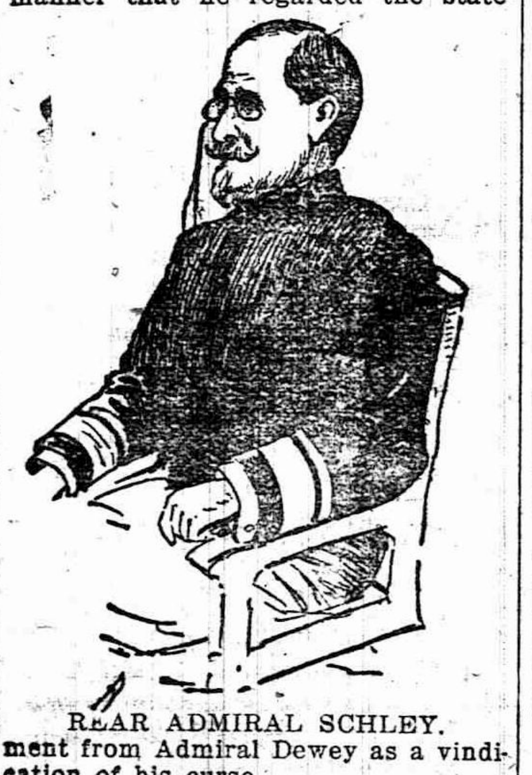
Majority of Inquiry Court Condemn Admiral.

DEWEY UPHOLDS SCHLEY

And Issues a Minority Report to That Effect—In All Probability No Further Proceedings Will Be Taken—Official Opinions Not Forthcoming.

Washington, Dec. 14.—The most prolonged, interesting and important naval tribunal ever held in this country came to a close yesterday, having in open and secret session lasted three months, short of one week, when Secretary Long was handed the findings of the court of inquiry which inquired into the conduct of Rear Admiral Schley during the Santiago campaign. For seven weeks the court heard testimony and for fully a month it deliberated upon that mass of evidence, finally reaching the conclusions announced yesterday. The result was a complete surprise, and it is probable that no prophesy has approached the truth. Instead of one report, there are two. Both are signed by George Dewey, president, and by Sam C. Lemly, as judge advocate. This is a form said to be recognized in all courts of inquiry, the signatures of the other members not being necessary.

When told the report, Admiral Schley evinced no signs of nervousness over the outcome. When the conclusions of Admiral Dewey were read to him Admiral Schley showed his pleasure, and it was evident from his manner that he regarded the statement from Admiral Dewey as a vindication of his curse.



REAR ADMIRAL SCHLEY.

The Majority Opinion.

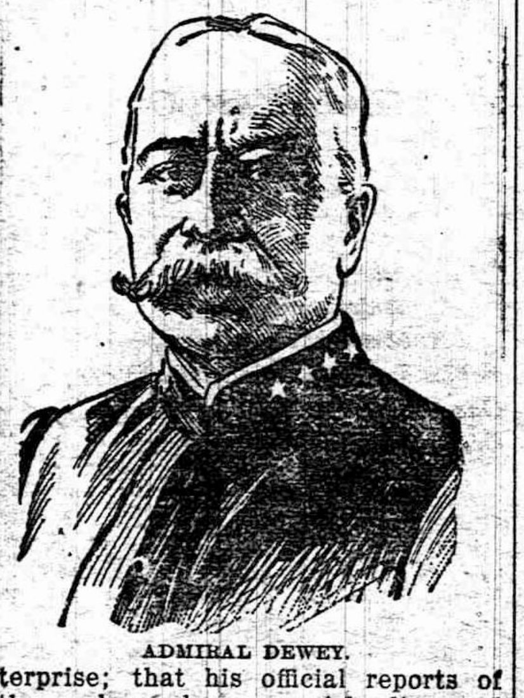
The majority report condemns Admiral Schley on 11 points, while Admiral Dewey sustains him in most particulars. The majority opinion finds, in brief, that Admiral Schley should have proceeded with the utmost dispatch to Cienfuegos and maintained a close blockade; that he should have endeavored to have obtained information of the Spanish squadron there, that he should not have made the retrograde movement; that he should have obeyed the department's orders; that he should have endeavored to capture the Spanish vessels in Santiago; that he did not do his utmost to destroy the Colon; that he caused the squadron to lose distance in the loop of the Brooklyn; that he thereby caused the Texas to back; that he did injustice to Hodgson; that his conduct in the campaign was characterized by vacillation, dilatoriness and lack of enterprise; that his official reports of the coal supply were misleading and inaccurate; that his conduct during the battle was self-possessed and that he encouraged in his own person his subordinate officers and men.



ADMIRAL DEWEY.

(Signed)
GEORGE DEWEY,,
Admiral U. S. N., President.
SAMUEL C. LEMLY,
Judge Advocate.

Admiral Dewey's Opinion.

Admiral Dewey in his report says that the passage to Cienfuegos was made with all dispatch; that in view of his coal supply the blockade of Cienfuegos was effective; that he allowed the Adula to enter Cienfuegos to get information; that his passage to Santiago was with as much dispatch as possible, keeping the squadron together; that the blockade of Santiago was effective, and finally, that he was the senior officer off Santiago, in absolute command and entitled to the credit due for the glorious victory which resulted in the total destruction of the Spanish ships.

GEORGE DEWEY,
Admiral U. S. N., President.
SAMUEL C. LEMLY,
Judge Advocate.

Recommendation.

In view of the length of time which has elapsed since the occurrence of the events of the Santiago campaign, the court recommends no further proceedings be had in the premises.

GEORGE DEWEY,
SAMUEL C. LEMLY.

ARGENTINE PREPARING FOR WAR

Situation With Chile Improved But Not Settled.

Buenos Ayres, Dec. 16.—Although the situation between the Argentine Republic and Chile has improved, it has not yet been clearly defined. The council of Argentine ministers has spent much time in studying the two paragraphs of the Chilean note which form the basis of that country's prosperity, an agreement upon which would mean the solution of the pending difficulties. The council has decided to accept the first paragraph concerning the construction of roads. The compilation of the second paragraph; referring to the pretended occupation by Argentine of Chilean territory at Ultima Esperanza is not acceptable to the ministers. The hope prevails here that everything will be arranged on a friendly basis within a few days. Public opinion throughout the entire country is expressing its patriotic approval of the government's conduct. The government has decided to divide the republic into six military zones with 20,000 men in each. The arms and equipment for these men are already on hand in the respective zones. Over and above the reserves called out last week. 15,000 volunteers have presented themselves for service. In case of necessity the government has resources which would enable it to mobilize an army of 200,000 men.

SCHLEY WAITS ON RAYNER.

He Also Threatens Suit Against Appleton & Co.

Baltimore, Dec. 16.—Rear Admiral W. S. Schley has notified Atty.-Gen. Isidor Rayner that he is ready to take any action with reference to his case that Mr. Rayner may advise. Mr. Rayner expects to meet the admiral in Washington today or Tuesday.

When asked whether he favored a congressional investigation, Mr. Rayner said: "I doubt whether a proceeding of this sort is the proper one. It generally assumes a political aspect. At this time I am of the opinion that the matter should be prosecuted in the courts."

Rep. Bearre of Maryland, who represents the Maryland district from which Admiral Schley came, stated that he would introduce a resolution for a congressional investigation of the entire Sampson-Schley affair unless his colleague from Maryland, Mr. Scherm, who had contemplated introducing such a resolution, carried out this intention.

It is intimated Rear Admiral Schley will shortly institute a legal suit against the publishing firm of Appleton & Co., of New York, for giving currency and circulation to Maclay's naval history containing the charges of cowardice made by Maclay against the rear admiral.

FROM BED INTO THE SNOW.

Chicago Tenants Ousted at an Early Hour by Fire.

Chicago, Dec. 16.—A fire in the Olinger apartment building, Indiana avenue and Thirty-fifth street, at an early hour Sunday morning was the cause of many narrow escapes and daring rescues, although it is believed that every one of the 60 occupants of the building was saved. The fire was caused by an overheated furnace in the basement where the flame was first discovered. Almost before the alarm had been given all escape by the main stairway was cut off by the flames. Many persons were overcome by the smoke and were carried by the firemen down their ladders to the street. The intense cold, many degrees below zero, added to their sufferings, but all were cared for in neighboring stores or residences.

Two Killed by Explosion.

Hargrave, Man., Dec. 16.—Two lives were lost here Sunday in a fire that was caused by the explosion of a gasoline engine. The fire totally destroyed the engine house of the elevator owned by E. A. Holmes. Five men were in the engine room when the explosion occurred. They were unable to get out through the door. P. A. Knight burst open a window and three of the men escaped in this way. The other two were burned to death, the victims being Stewart Wright of Kola district and R. D. Sykes, a farmer living near here.

Village Nearly Consumed.

Parkersburg, W. Va., Dec. 16.—A fire which started Saturday night at Salem, 70 miles east of here on the Baltimore & Ohio railroad, destroyed practically the entire business part of that city. Fifty-six houses, stores and other buildings were destroyed. The loss is estimated at more than $200,000, with little insurance. The city has a water supply, but the water was secured with difficulty, owing to the extremely cold weather.

Escaping Gas Explodes.

Toledo, O., Dec. 16.—Escaping gas from a well at the water works plant at Wauseon, O., Saturday afternoon ignited from fire in the engine room and the resulting explosion wrecked the building. Frank Dickey, the engineer, was crushed by falling walls and died as a result.

Senator Sewell Dying.

Camden, N. J., Dec. 16.—United States Senator Wm. J. Sewell, who is ill at his home here, suffered a relapse Saturday afternoon, and his condition is considered precarious. At 2:15 a. m. he was sinking rapidly and his physicians said the end was near.

Toledo Men Killed.

Toledo, Dec. 16.—Charles A. Wilson and August Basch were killed yesterday in the Lake Shore yards at Air Line Junction by being run down by a freight car.

Earthquake in Manila.

Manila, Dec. 16.—The worst earthquake shock since 1868 was felt here Sunday morning. One house was wrecked and many houses were damaged.

Our First Horses.

The first horses imported into America, says a London journal, were taken over by Columbus on his second voyage in 1493. Thirty years later forty-two horses were landed in Florida, but they all died soon after their arrival. De Soto, who made an expedition to the new world in 1540-41, left a number of fine Spanish horses behind him when obliged to quit the country after his conquest of Louisiana, and this stock is thought to have formed the foundation of the wild horse of the southwestern states. In 1604 a French immigrant brought to Acadia a number of animals from which the modern Canadian pony is thought to be descended. Horses from Flanders were imported into New York in 1625.

IS NOT GUILTY

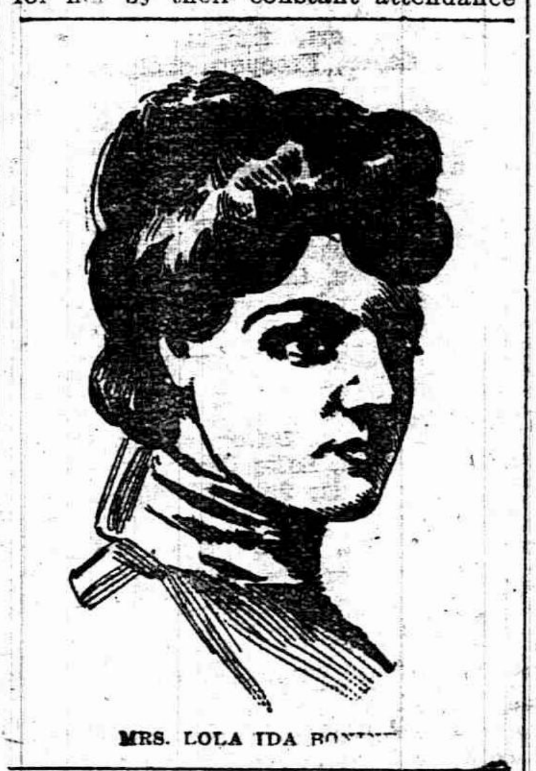
Jury in Famous Bonine Trial Render Decision.

MRS. BONINE GOES FREE

Decided Ayres Was Accidentally Killed in Struggle for Possession of a Pistol—Jury Was Out Only Four Hours.

Washington, Dec. 14.—The jury in the trial of Mrs. Bonine, accused of the murder of James Seymour Ayres, Jr., the young census office clerk killed in the Kenmore hotel last spring, returned a verdict last night of not guilty, after being out about four hours.

The defendant was set at liberty. Such a conclusion of the trial was generally expected, the popular impression here being that from the evidence submitted the prosecution had failed to prove its case against Mrs. Bonine. The jury was out less than five hours. Mrs. Bonine was in court at the time they returned and with her were her husband and her two boys and several of her relatives, all of whom have shown their sympathy for her by their constant attendance during the long [illegible] discharged and Mrs. Bonine and her friends left the courthouse by a back door.



MRS. LOLA IDA BONINE.

The trial of Mrs. Bonine had been in progress for almost four weeks and attracted more attention than any trial before the local courts in years. Extraordinary interest was caused at the time young Ayres was killed, because of the mystery surrounding the case, until the statement made by Mrs. Bonine of her part in the tragedy while the coroner's inquest was in session. She said she was the only person in the room when young Ayres was shot and that he was killed in a struggle with her over the possession of a revolver with which he was trying to frighten her into compliance with his demands. Mr. Bonine had been in jail since the tragedy. She did not go on the witness stand during the trial.

High Winds Cause Trouble.

St. John, N. F., Dec. 14.—High winds yesterday prevented William Marconi, the inventor of wireless telegraphy, who is experimenting here, from raising a second balloon to sustain the horizontal wire used in wireless signalling in place of the balloon that was blown out to sea Wednesday night. If the weather does not improve Mr. Marconi will erect a mast next week for this purpose and abandon the use of balloons for the time being. The inventor has perfected every detail for his experiments with this exception. When this difficulty is overcome he anticipates no trouble in signalling passing trans-Atlantic liners. Mr. Marconi hopes to open a permanent station for wireless telegraphy at Cape Race within a month.

Roosevelt Inherits a Fortune.

New York, Dec. 14.—The Times today says: According to a decision handed down by Justice Lawrence, in a suit brought for the purpose of obtaining a construction of the will of Cornelius Van Schacik Roosevelt, who died in New York in 1887, President Theodore Roosevelt, who is a nephew of the testator, will inherit a fortune of between $100,000 and $150,000.

Mrs. Dennis Is Worse.

Washington, Dec. 14.—The condition of Mrs. Dennis, who was assaulted last Tuesday, was a trifle worse yesterday. Dr. Richelderfer of Garfield hospital expressed the opinion that she has a very slight chance of recovery. She talks only irrationally. The police are still without a clue.

German Labor Situation Alarming.

Berlin, Dec. 14.—The most recent investigations into German labor conditions show the labor situation to be growing worse. The Arbeits Markt, a newspaper, says there were 224 applicants for 100 vacancies in November, as against 200 applicants for the same number of vacancies in October.

New Government Building Proposed.

Washington, Dec. 14.—Rep. Mercer of Nebraska yesterday introduced a bill for a building in Washington for the United States supreme court, the department of justice and international tribunals to cost not exceeding $7,000,000 for site and building.

Want Hay to Eulogize McKinley.

Washington, Dec. 14.—The joint committee of congress appointed to make arrangements for a memorial service in honor of McKinley, held a meeting yesterday and decided to invite Secretary of State Hay to be the orator whenever the services shall be held. The time will be fixed later.

Like Master, Like Man.

In 1814 Baron Stieglitz, in St. Petersburg, went to great expense to have the news of the treaty of peace conveyed to him by a private courier a few hours before it came to the knowledge of the government. He therefore gained a few hundred thousand rubles. But his porter, to whom he communicated the news, tried his hand at a little speculation of his own. In an hour or two he bought up all the lamps he could find in St. Petersburg, so that in the evening, when the whole city was making ready for the illumination, not a single lamp was to be found in any of the shops. The crafty porter now sold out his stock at a price which left him a nice little profit of 25,000 rubles.

MARRIED IN A HURRY.

Young Couple Do the Thing in Unique Style.

St. Joseph, Mich., Dec. 16.—One of the most unique weddings in the history of St. Joseph was celebrated here Saturday. Edward B. Chope was married to Miss Victoria Cady at the Pere Marquette depot between the arrival of the northbound train and the departure of the southbound evening train on the Pere Marquette railroad. County Clerk A. L. Church was informed by wire by the groom to have the necessary license blank in his possession and to meet the train at the depot. As the train came to a stop the young couple were seen to alight from the Pullman and were ushered into the private office of the railway agent, the license was made out and in five minutes they were pronounced man and wife. In order to save time, Rev. A. J. Morris accompanied the bridal couple from New Buffalo to this city and performed the ceremony.

LITTLE GIRL MISSING.

Foul Play Suspected—Child Possessed Money.

Owosso, Mich., Dec. 16.—Where is little Hazel Phillips? The little daughter of Mrs. Belle Phillips, who died 10 days ago and now sleeps in the potter's field at Oak Hill, was taken from Mrs. William Hoffmeyer last Monday by a Fenton woman under the pretense that she would take the child to her aunt in Ann Arbor.

Saturday Mrs. Hoffmeyer received a letter from the child's aunt, Mrs. Clement, of Ann Arbor, who had heard of the affair through the newspapers. She states that she had lost all track of the Phillips woman and daughter for five years, and inquired what had become of Hazel. It appears the little girl has several hundred dollars in a bank which she nor her mother knew anything about. It looks as though the girl has been hidden somewhere.

Says Police Misused Anarchists.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Dec. 16.—Ex-Gov. John P. Altgeld addressed the Good Government club of the University of Michigan Saturday night on "American Ideals." In speaking of anarchy, he referred to the assassination of President McKinley. Said the speaker: "Many people were arrested in different parts of the country and the police acted in a most brutal and outrageous manner in many cases by clubbing and otherwise ill-treating inoffensive people against whom there was no evidence of any kind. Anarchy," he declared, "is not the child of free speech, or of a free press or of free association. Anarchy grows not of conditions. Wherever you find social, industrial and economic conditions and institutions under which a few can devour the fruits of the other men's toil, there you will find the poisonous germs of anarchy getting a lodgment. The real authors of anarchy in this world are the men who despoil their fellow men, and it does not matter how this is done."

GLORY FOR MARCONI.

Succeeded in Telegraphing Across Ocean Without Wires.

St. Johns, N. F., Dec. 16.—Signor Marconi announced the most wonderful scientific discoveryof modern times, Saturday night, in stating that he had received electric signals across the Atlantic ocean from his station in Cornwall, England. He explains that before leaving England he made plans for accomplishing this result, for, while his primary object was to communicate with ocean liners in mid ocean, he hoped also to succeed in attaining the wonderful scientific achievement of wireless telegraphy across the Atlantic.

Congratulations from Newfoundland and abroad are pouring in on Mr. Marconi. The inventor dined Sunday night with Sir Cavendish Boyle, the governor of Newfoundland in order more fully to explain all the details of his experiments to the latter, who will send a lengthy dispatch on this subject to the British cabinet today.

"Without doubt," thought he, "she must have determined on undertaking her journey before the invasion. Perhaps she is even now ignorant of what is happening. But, no; that cannot be, for the merchants discussed before her the disturbances in Siberia, and she did not seem even surprised. She did not even ask for an explanation. She must have known it then, and, though knowing it, she is still resolute. Poor girl! Her motive for the journey must be urgent indeed! But, though she may be brave—and she certainly is so—her strength must fail her, and, to say nothing of dangers and obstacles, she will be unable to endure the fatigue of such a journey. Never can she pass Irkutsk!"

Indulging in such reflections, Michael Strogoff wandered on as chance led him; but, being well acquainted with the town, he knew that he could without difficulty retrace his steps.

Having strolled on for about an hour, he seated himself on a bench against the wall of a large wooden cottage which stood, with others, on a vast open space.

He had scarcely been there five minutes when a hand was laid heavily on his shoulder.

"What are you doing here?" roughly demanded a large and powerful man who had approached unperceived.

"I am resting," replied Michael Strogoff.

"Do you mean to stay all night on the bench?" asked the man.

"Yes, if I feel inclined to do so," answered Michael Strogoff in a tone somewhat too sharp for the simple merchant he wished to personate.

"Come forward, then, that I may see you," said the man.

"It is not necessary," he replied, and he calmly stepped back ten paces or so.

The man seemed, as Michael observed him well, to have the look of a Bohemian, such as are met at fairs and with whom contact, either physical or moral, is unpleasant. Then, as he looked more attentively through the dusk which was coming on, he perceived near the cottage a large caravan, the usual traveling dwelling of the gypsies who swarm in Russia wherever a few copecks can be obtained.

As the gypsy took two or three steps forward and was about to interrogate Michael Strogoff more closely the door of the cottage was opened. He could just see a woman, who advanced quickly and in a language which Michael Strogoff knew to be a mixture of the Mongol and Siberian she said: "Another spy! Let him alone and come to supper. It is waiting for you."

Michael Strogoff could not help smiling at the epithet bestowed on him, regarding spies as he did above all things.

But in the same dialect, although his accent was very different, the Bohemian replied in words which signify:

"You are right, Sangarre. Besides, we start tomorrow."

"Tomorrow!" repeated the woman in surprise.

"Yes, Sangarre," replied the Bohemian, "tomorrow, and the Father himself sends us—where we are going."

Thereupon the man and woman entered the cottage and carefully closed the door.

"Good!" said Michael Strogoff to himself. "If these gypsies do not wish to be understood when they speak before me, they had better use some other language."

From his Siberian origin and because he had passed his childhood in the steppes Michael Strogoff, it has been said, understood almost all the languages in usage from Tartary to the Sea of Ice. As to the exact signification of the words exchanged between the gypsy and his companion he did not trouble his head. For why should it interest him?

An hour after Michael Strogoff was sleeping soundly on one of those Russian beds which always seem so hard to strangers, and on the morrow, the 17th of July, he awoke at break of day.

He had still five hours to pass at Nijni Novgorod. It seemed to him an age. How was he to spend the morning unless in wandering, as he had done the evening before, through the streets? By the time he had finished his breakfast, strapped up his bag, had his podorojna inspected at the police office, he would have nothing to do but start. But he was not a man to lie in bed after the sun had risen, so he rose, dressed himself and placed the letter with the imperial arms on it carefully at the bottom of its usual pocket within the lining of his coat, over which he fastened his belt. He then closed his bag and threw it over his shoulder.

This done, he had no wish to return to the City of Constantinople, and, intending to breakfast on the bank of the Volga near the wharf, he settled his bill and left the inn. By the way of precaution Michael Strogoff went first to the office of the steam packet company and there made sure that the Caucasus would start at the appointed hour. As he did so the thought for the first time struck him that since the young Livonian girl was going to Perm it was very possible that her intention was also to embark in the Caucasus, in which case he should accompany her.

Michael Strogoff found himself in the central square when the report spread that the head of police had been summoned by a courier to the palace of the governor general. An important dispatch from Moscow, it was, said, was the cause of it.

"The fair is to be closed," said one.

"The regiment of Nijni Novgorod has received the route," declared another.

"They say that the Tartars menace Tomsk!"

"Here is the head of police!" was shouted on every side. A loud clapping of hands was suddenly raised, which subsided by degrees and finally was succeeded by absolute silence. The head of police arrived in the middle of the central square, and it was seen by all that he held in his hand a dispatch.

Then in a loud voice he read the following announcements:

"By order of the governor of Nijni Novgorod:

"All Russian subjects are forbidden to quit the province upon any pretext whatsoever.

"All strangers of Asiatic origin are commanded to leave the province within twenty-four hours."

THE COURIER OF THE CZAR

By Jules Verne

CHAPTER IV.

JUST as the reading of the proclamation by the head of the police came to an end an idea darted instinctively into the mind of Michael Strogoff.

"What a singular coincidence," thought he, "between this proclamation expelling all foreigners of Asiatic origin and the words exchanged last evening between those two gypsies of the Zingari race! 'The Father himself sends us where we wish to go,' that old man said. But 'the Father' is the emperor. He is never called anything else among the people. How could those gypsies have foreseen the measure taken against them? How could they have known it beforehand, and where do they wish to go? Those are suspicious people, and it seems to me that to them the government proclamation must be more useful than injurious."

But these reflections, though certainly correct, were completely dispelled by another, which drove every other thought out of Michael's mind. He forgot the Zingaris, their suspicious words, the strange coincidence which resulted from the proclamation. The remembrance of the young Livonian girl suddenly rushed into his mind.

"Poor child!" he thought to himself. "She cannot now cross the frontier."

In truth the young girl was from Riga. She was Livonian, consequently Russian, and now could not leave Russian territory. The permit which had been given her before the new measures had been promulgated was evidently no longer available. All routes to Siberia had just been pitilessly closed to her, and whatever was the motive which was taking her to Irkutsk, she was now forbidden to go there.

This thought greatly occupied Michael Strogoff. He said to himself, vaguely at first, that without neglecting anything of what was due to his important mission it would perhaps be possible for him to be of some use to this brave girl, and this idea pleased him. Knowing how serious were the dangers which he, an energetic and vigorous man, would have personally to encounter through a country of which, however, the roads were familiar, he could not conceal from himself how infinitely greater they would prove to a young, unprotected girl. As she was going to Irkutsk, she would be obliged to follow the same road as himself; she would have to pass through the bands of invaders, as he was about to attempt doing himself. If, moreover, and according to all probability, she had at her disposal only the resources necessary for a journey taken under ordinary circumstances, how could she manage to accomplish it under conditions which late events would render not only perilous, but expensive?

"Well," said he, "if she takes the route to Perm it is nearly impossible but that I shall fall in with her. Then I will watch over her without her suspecting it, and as she appears to be as anxious as myself to reach Irkutsk she will cause me no delay."

But one thought leads to another. Michael Strogoff had till now reasoned on the supposition of doing a kind action, of rendering a service, but now another idea flashed into his brain, and the question presented itself under quite a new aspect.

"The fact is," said he to himself, "that I have much more need of her than she can have of me. Her presence will be useful in drawing off suspicion from me. A man traveling alone across the steppes may be easily guessed to be a courier to the czar. If, on the contrary, this young girl accompanies me, I shall appear in the eyes of all the Nicholas Korpanoff of my podorojna. Therefore she must accompany me. Therefore I must find her again at any cost. It is not probable that since yesterday evening she has been able to get a carriage and leave Nijni Novgorod. I must look for her. And may God guide me!"

Michael left the great square of Nijni Novgorod, where the tumult produced by the carrying out of the prescribed measures had now reached its height. Recriminations from the banished strangers, shouts from the agents and Cossacks who were using them so brutally, all together made an indescribable uproar. The girl for whom he searched could not be there. It was now 9 o'clock in the morning. The steamboat did not start till 12. Michael Strogoff had therefore nearly three hours to employ in searching for her whom he wished to make his traveling companion.

He crossed the Volga again and hunted through the quarters on the other side, where the crowd was much less considerable. He visited every road, both in the high and low towns. He entered the churches, the natural refuge for all who weep, for all who suffer. Nowhere did he meet with the young Livonian.

"And yet," he repeated, "she could not have left Nijni Novgorod yet. We'll have another look."

Michael wandered about thus for two hours. He went on without stopping, feeling no fatigue, but obeying the potent instinct which allowed him no room for thought. All was in vain.

It then occurred to him that perhaps the girl had not heard of the order, though this was improbable enough, for such a thunderclap could not have burst without being heard by all. Evidently interested in knowing the smallest news from Siberia, how could she be ignorant of the measures taken by the governor—measures which concerned her so directly? But if she was ignorant of it she would come in an hour to the quay, and there some merciless agent would brutally refuse her a passage. At any cost he must see her beforehand and do what he could to enable her to avoid such a repulse.

But all his endeavors were in vain, and he at length almost despaired of finding her again.

It was now 11 o'clock, and Michael, though under any other circumstances it would have been useless, thought of presenting his podorojna at the office of the head of police. The proclamation evidently did not concern him, since the emergency had been foreseen for him, but he wished to make sure that nothing would hinder his departure from the town.

Michael then returned to the other side of the Volga, to the quarter in which was the office of the head of police.

Every one was in a hurry, for the means of transport would be much sought after among this crowd of banished people, and those who did not set about it soon ran a great risk of not being able to leave the town in the prescribed time, which would expose them to some brutal treatment from the governor's agents.

Owing to the strength of his elbows, Michael Strogoff was able to cross the court. But to get into the office and up to the clerk's little window was a much more difficult business. However, a word into an inspector's ear and a few judiciously given rubles were powerful enough to gain him a passage. The man, after taking him into the waiting room, went to call the proper clerk.

Michael Strogoff would not be long in making everything right with the police and being free in his movements.

While waiting he looked about him, and what did he see? There, fallen rather than seated on a bench, was a girl, a prey to silent despair, although her face could scarcely be seen, the profile alone being visible against the wall.

Michael Strogoff could not be mistaken. He instantly recognized the young Livonian.

Not knowing the governor's orders, she had come to the police office to get her pass signed. They had refused to sign it. No doubt she was authorized to go to Irkutsk, but the order was peremptory; it annulled all previous authorizations, and the routes to Siberia were closed to her. Michael, delighted at having found her again, approached the girl.

She looked up for a moment, and her face brightened on recognizing her traveling companion. She instinctively rose, and, like a drowning man who clutches at a spar, she was about to ask his help. At that moment the agent touched Michael on the shoulder.

"The head of police will see you," he said.

"Good!" returned Michael, and without saying a word to her for whom he had been searching all day, without reassuring her by even a gesture which might compromise either her or himself, he followed the man through the crowd.

The young Livonian, seeing the only being to whom she could look for help disappear, fell back again on her bench.

Three minutes had not passed before Michael Strogoff reappeared, accompanied by the agent. In his hand he held his podorojna, which threw open the roads to Siberia for him. He again approached the young Livonian, and, holding out his hand, "Sister," said he.

She understood. She rose as if some sudden inspiration prevented her from hesitating a moment.

"Sister," repeated Michael Strogoff, "we are authorized to continue our journey to Irkutsk. Will you come?"

"I will follow you, brother," replied the girl, putting her hand into that of Michael Strogoff, and together they left the police station.

Michael Strogoff and the young Livonian had taken passage on board the Caucasus. Their embarkation was made without any difficulty. As is known, the podorojna, drawn up in the name of Nicholas Korpanoff, authorized this merchant to be accompanied on his journey to Siberia. They appeared therefore, to be a brother and sister traveling under the protection of the imperial police. Both, seated together at the stern, gazed at the receding town so disturbed by the governor's order. Michael had as yet said nothing to the girl. He had not even questioned her. He waited until she should speak to him whenever that was necessary. She had been anxious to leave that town, in which but for the providential intervention of this unexpected protector she would have remained imprisoned. She said nothing, but her looks spoke her thanks.

The Caucasus had been steaming on for about two hours when the young Livonian, addressing herself to Michael Strogoff, said:

"Are you going to Irkutsk, brother?"

"Yes, sister," answered the young man. "We are both going the same way. Consequently wherever I go you shall go."

"Tomorrow, brother, you shall know why I left the shores of the Baltic to go beyond the Ural mountains."

"I ask you nothing, sister."

"You shall know all," replied the girl, with a faint smile. "A sister should hide nothing from her brother. But I cannot today. Fatigue and sorrow have broken me down."

"Will you go and rest in your cabin?" asked Michael.

"Yes—yes, and tomorrow"—

"Come, then"—

He hesitated to finish his sentence as if he had wished to end it by the name of his companion, of which he was still ignorant.

"Nadia," said she, holding out her hand.

"Come, Nadia," answered Michael, "and make what use you like of your brother Nicholas Korpanoff." And he led the girl to the cabin engaged for her off the saloon.

Michael Strogoff returned on deck, and, eager for any news which might bear on his journey, he mingled in the groups of passengers, though without taking any part in the conversation. Should he by any chance be questioned and obliged to reply he would announce himself as the merchant Nicholas Korpanoff, going back to the frontier in the Caucasus, for he did not wish it to be suspected that a special permission authorized him to travel to Siberia.

The young Livonian did not come to dinner. She was asleep in her cabin, and Michael did not like to awaken her.

Between 11 and 2, the moon being new, it was almost dark. Nearly all the passengers were then asleep on the deck, and the silence was disturbed only by the noise of the paddles striking the water at regular intervals. Anxiety kept Michael Strogoff awake. He walked up and down, but always in the stern of the steamer. Once, however, he happened to pass the engine room. He then found himself in the part reserved for second and third class passengers.

He stopped. Voices appeared to come from a group of passengers enveloped in cloaks and wraps, so that it was impossible to recognize them in the dark. But it sometimes happened that when the steamer's chimney sent forth a

DEATH TO MANY

Two Fatal Railroad Catastrophes Brings Big Harvest.

ONE AN AWFUL COLLISION

Two Trains on Illinois Central Collide, Then Catch Fire and Burn—Loss of Life at Least Eight—Pennsylvania Train Falls Into River.

Rockfold, Ill., Dec. 16.—Eight or more lives were lost in the wreck of an eastbound Omaha-Chicago express train on the Illinois Central railroad near Perryville, Ill., at 1 o'clock Sunday morning. The express train collided head-on with a freight train, both running at full speed. An oil tank car in the freight train exploded throwing burning oil over the wreck, and in an instant the entire mass of wreckage was in flames. Every coach of the passenger train and all of the freight cars, except one tank car and a freight car, were burned. The bodies of the dead were burned in the wreck. The survivors made desperate efforts to rescue the injured who were pinioned in the wreck, but the flames drove them back at every point.

The temperature was nearly 20 degrees below zero and the suffering of those who escaped injury was intense. The scantily-clad passengers from the sleepers suffered even more than the other passengers. Not more than half a dozen persons escaped from the wreck uninjured.

Failure on the part of a conductor to obey orders is supposed to have been the cause of the collision. Eight people are dead or missing and 11 injured.

Missing and supposed to be dead: Newsboy on passenger train, name unknown; section foreman from Irene, name unknown.

The injured, so far as the names have been ascertained, are as follows: H. G. Wellman, Chicago; D. R. Ahrendt, Chicago; J. H. Quinlan, passenger conductor; W. B. Keefe, Sioux City, Ia.; Frank Stadleman, Thomas Hendricks, New Athens, Ill.

Slightly hurt: G. E. Shurtleff, Kankakee, Ill.; G. M. Burch, Kankankee; M. E. Franklin, Lake City, Ia.; A. L. Boggs, St. Louis; John Hussey, Independence, Ia.

Williamsport, Pa., Dec. 16.—A freight train on the Philadelphia & Erie district of the Pennsylvania railroad went through the bridge spanning Lycoming creek, between this city and Newberry, at 6 o'clock Sunday morning. Three lives were lost.

The dead: John Martz, engineer; Frederick Glass, fireman; George Harley, brakeman. All resided at Sunbury.

The train was known as fast freight No. 83 and was running three hours late owing to the disarrangement of schedule in consequence of the storm. The bridge spanning the creek was a two-span iron structure, the first span of which gave way beneath the train. The engine and nine cars were engulfed in the icy waters. The creek was greatly swollen as a result of the heavy rains, and it is presumed the middle pier had been weakened. No efforts could be made to reach the bodies on account of the height of the waters.

All the streams in this section were greatly swollen, the Susquehanna river here reaching a height of 21 feet, which did no damage in this city beyond flooding a few cellars on the lowlands. A few stray logs in the river were carried away. Lycoming and Loyal Sock creek were both very high, and the Northern Central tracks along the first-named stream were badly washed out in places and several bridges were damaged. At Ralston a passenger train had to be abandoned and the passengers sought high ground to escape the flood.

The Philadelphia & Reading bridge at Montoursville was so weakened that traffic had to be suspended.

Carnegie's Offer Passed Up.

Washington, Dec. 16.—It is said to be definitely decided that President Roosevelt will not accept the offer of Andrew Carnegie of $10,000,000 of bonds of the United States Steel corporation for the purpose of founding an institution for higher education in this city. The views of prominent senators and representatives as they have been given to the president are practically unanimous against the acceptance of the offer in its present shape. The provision attached to the offer that the government shall hold the bonds for a term of years is considered especially objectionable. The president, however, is very hopeful that an adjustment can be made by which Mr. Carnegie will convert the bonds which he tendered into cash or United States bonds and that the gift can then be accepted.

Convict Kills Florida Sheriff.

River Junction, Fla., Dec. 16.—While attempting to arrest Samuel Armstrong, colored, on board a train from this place to Climax, Ga., S. F. Edwards, sheriff of Gadsden county, was shot and killed by Armstrong. The negro was shot to death by Edwards before he died.

Michigan Village Undermined.

Sebewaing, Mich., Dec. 16.—The Sebewaing Coal Co. sank the first coal mine in the Saginaw valley at this place in 1890. A few years later the mine was abandoned, and it was supposed the mine was properly timbered and propped before the pumps were removed. The mine was located near the business part of the village and of late years ground in different parts of the town has been settling. Saturday a large section near some of the brick business buildings suddenly caved in, and as there are no means of knowing how far the village has been undermined, grave apprehensions are felt.

Two Frozen to Death.

Bay City, Mich., Dec. 16.—Edward Delaney, a farmer, was found dead on the road near Fisherville, Williams township, Saturday afternoon. His body was frozen stiff. He was 70 years old and a bachelor.

Corner Ewell returned at 10 Saturday night from Portsmouth, where he went to investigate the death of Charles Neuman. Deceased was a farmer living alone. He was last seen alive Thursday. Neighbors found him dead and frozen stiff back of the barn, where he had gone to get a scuttle of coal. Neuman was 72 years old and had no relatives in this country. Letters in his house indicate he has a brother living in Germany.

Off for California Friday.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Dec. 16.—Last night Capt. White of the Michigan football team stated that the team would probably leave on Friday for Pasadena.

Waiting for Christmas

Tis not the little ones alone who are waiting for Christmas to come, Older folks as well enjoy the festival.

The older ones enjoy not only receiving presents from others, but are happy to be able to bestow presents upon their loved ones.

Just what to give each one is a question that is not dicided in a moment, it takes sometime to determine just what would be the best and most appropriate for father, mother, brother. sister and friend.

Then, too we all like to give that which will make the best possible appearance, that which will look the best for the amount of money we think we ought to spend.

And while it is a pleasant task, it is nevertheless a difficult one, a task that requires patience. You will find every man in our store appreciates this fact and will give you every attention possible,

Any day from now until Christmas we will be ready and willing to help you by showing to you many articles suitable for Christmas Presents.

Respectfully
Alva Spayde.

"Doc" Smith is not going to relinquish the Adrian postoffice until the last moment, and his committee, consisting of Messrs. Bird and Palmer, are doing the best they can for him Meanwhile Representative H. C. Smith sits back and smiles, having faith that the powers will not interfere with his recommendations in the matter. This morning he took the committee up to see the president and called on Senator McMillan with them. They urged the retension of Smith, but the senator made it plain that he would not interfere, as the matter rested with the congressman of the district. Later they went to see the postmaster-general in the hope that they can get the matter tied up and investigated. The claim is made that Smith has the backing of the business men of Adrian and that Priddy is not wanted, but "Hank" promised the place to the latter and intends to see that he gets it. The Adrian postoffice is a presidential appointment, but it is doubtful is the president would override a congressman unless there were grave reasons for doing so.—Detroit Free Press.

At the annual meeting of directors of the Page Woven Wire Fence Co. this week at Chicago, the company was reorganized under the laws of New Jersey and capitalized at $6,000,000. This immense capitalization is due to efforts of eastern capitalists, and is necessary, the directors aver, to conduct the business successfully under its rapid growth. Mr. Page says it is in no sense a step toward a trust but that the business has reached such enormous growth that capital to a large amount becomes an absolute necessity. It is not known how the plant or officials here will be affected, but it is understood the present efficient management will be continued.—Detroit Free Press.

G. A. R. SOCIAL.

The G. A. R's. at their social meeting last evening, gave a fine program, under the direction of J. D. Shull. The Tecumseh orchestra rendered some good music. Miss Edith Elliott was on the program for a violin solo and substituted the orchestra preformance which greatly added to the enjoyment of the evening. Examples of Heroism was given by Wm. DeMott, who related a humorous selection on the subject of Fitz Green Halleck's "Marco Bozzaris."

Mr. Dickinson and Dr. Maddox sang a duet which was received with great favor. J. D. Shull read the story of the battle of Bal-ak-la-va in which the "Six Hundred" made their famous charge. Mrs. Shull read Tennyson's poem "The Charge of the Light Brigade" and Miss Edith Shull manipulated a phonograph which played a piece with the same title.

Bicycles are not the only things to be pedaled, but news items can also be pedaled with telling effect, and through the HERALD is the proper way to pedal them.

Although there are no stars upon the ceiling in Miss Welchli's room, one young lady seems very intent upon trying to discover some. We have no doubt but that if nature had been more kind to her, she would have made a good astronomer.

It gratifies us indeed to see how the advice given in Friday's notes, has been followed. Grace Erskine, Albert Marsh and Ralph Orr, from Miss Hartbeck's room and several from the other respective rooms, have found this week very profitable for sickness

Among the "fair weather pupils" last Friday were the following; Vena Elliott, Hazel Roberts, Helen Norcross, Sadie Lowry and Nina McConnell. It is desired that the above phrase, "fair weather pupils" be known not as our own but a borrowed one therefore we offer an apology

MUSK RATS

One of these Chaps took a little FRIDAY VACATION

And Broke Into the Novelty Store.

Saturday morning when at an early hour Jas. Montague appeared at the Novelty store, he found matters in complete turmoil. Six young lady clerks were in different places on the shelves and counters and a full grown, live muskrat had full possession of the floor.

Finally the young lady clerks mustered up courage, called Joe Hanford from next door, who murdered the stray rat and now C. E. Williamson owns his pelt. Where he came from no one knows but that the rat appeared and frightened the lives out of the girls remains as a matter of history.

A SAD DROWNING

About 4:30 Yesterday Afternoon

WILLIE TAG

The 12 year old Son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Tag, of Clinton, was Drowned in the River.

This boy accompanied by Chris. Schmidt's son and some other boys were skating on the river when Willie Tag went on some thin ice and got in. The boys gave the alarm but in spite of all could be done the body was not found until about 7:30.

A Baby Party.

Miss Margaret Ellen Osborn, of Chicago, entertained a number of her young friends, accompanied by their mamma's, last Wednesday afternoon, at the home of her grandmother, Mrs. Henry Wlison. Callers were received from three to five, and a large number availed themselves of the opportunity to see the little ones.

An interesting feature of the afternoon was weighing the entertainer and her guests. Margaret Ellen Osborn, 5½ months, 16½ pounds; Mildred Bell Warner, 5½ months, 16½ pounds; Norma Louise Simmons, 5½ months, 17 pounds; Harley VanFleet, 8 months, 20¾ pounds; Jocylyn Bowen, 4 months, 18½ pounds; Robert Heck Moore, 6 months, 21½ pounds; Baby Maus, 3 weeks, 10½ pounds.

After this exciting event, refreshments were served in the dining room, presided over by Mrs Campbell. Covers were laid for twelve, other guests were Mesdames L. G. North, J. J. Freeman, Andrew Wilson, and Donsmore, of Clinton, Ontario.

In the center of the table was a large bouquet of American beauty roses sent to Miss Margaret from her father in Chicago. After the refreshments the guests departed, all uniting in calling Miss Margaret a charming entertainer.

The Christmas Party.

All preparations are being made that the Christmas party for 1901 shall be the best one ever given in Tecumseh. The opera house will be beautifully decorated and the young men in charge think that Finney's orchestra of Detroit will give the best one ever heard here. Reserve seats for spectators in the gallery are on sale at Gaston & Son's and all who desire the best seats should secure them at once.

A most shocking accident happened to the 12-year old son of Chas. Finkbeiner, who lives in the Benton district west of Saline, Saturday afternoon. The boys were backing a wagon down a slight income to a pile of wood, when in some way the wagon got the best of them and the boys head was crushed between the wagon and a tree. Feed Adulteration Frauds are Rampant.

At such a time as this when feed of all kinds is somewhat scarce, and high in price, the mixer or adulterator, or cheat, regards it an opportune time to get in his nefarious work. A very common fraud is the sale of so-called corn and oats feed, which consist mostly of corn screenings or low grade corn, cracked to some extent and mixed freely with oat hulls. These hulls have very much the appearance of oats, but they contain not a particle of grain substance. They have no more feeding value than chaff. Everybody understands well enough where they originate.

Selling such stuff under the name of corn and oats feed is a fraud, and farmers and consumers cannot be too wary. There is a new law on our statute books making such mixing, or offering for sale, a misdemeanor, punishable by fines of $25 to $100, or imprisonment 30 to 90 days, or both such fine and imprisonment. Anyone may make complaint, and a case may be tried before any justice of the peace.

The wise things for the feeder to do is to buy bran and middlings, which have the very highest feeding value, or ground corn and oats, the real thing at the mills.

A Woman's Awful Peril.

"There is only one chance to save your life and that is through an operation" were the startling words heard by Mrs. I. B. Adrian Times: "An attorney of Chicago was in the city Saturday and made arrangments with Attorney John E. Bird to assist him in suits, which he is to institute against the Wabash railroad to recover damages for the death of several Italians, who lost their lives in the wreck at Seneca on the evening of Nov. 27. They will apply to the probate court this week to have administrators appointed, and they in turn will bring suit against the road."

On Tuesday morning about 8 o'clock, Carl Weber committed suicide by hanging himself in the hotel barn, just across the street from his house. He rented the barn and kept his horse there. He left the house and went to the barn; then to his blacksmith shop, got a small rope and came back to the barn; went up-stairs in the barn and removed his overcoat. coat, vest, hat and boots, laying them together on the hay. The rope was over a rafter and he was hanging partially through the hole by the stairway. He was found by his daughter who was looking for him, as he had not been to breakfast. He leaves a wife and four children, three daughters and a son. He lived here about fourteen years and was a successful blacksmith. —Hudson Post.

AN AGED VETERAN

When the Annual Reunion of the G. A. R. is held, Michigan is always well represented. Around the camp fires of the encampment our boys will tell of the hardships they have gone through and the listener who knows nothing of war will wonder how they lived to tell the tale. Few men who followed old glory and escaped the shot and shell returned home without some legacy as a constant reminder of their war days. Our representative found veteran O. P. Newcomb of Detroit at his place of residence, No. 237 Second street. Mr. Newcomb told him how the little conqueror had rendered him invaluable service. We give his account here and some words of advice tersely told. He said: "A lake covering about two acres in extent, containing the dead bodies of 20 mules is not tempting water to drink, but I was one of many who drank it, and all of us would have done so if we had known there was death in every swallow. This illustrates but one of the many hardships and privations passed throug during the Civil war, and it is no wonder that G. A. R. men suffer from aches and pains, the most prevalent of these being due to kidney disorders. I am pleased to note that a great many others who passed through as trying ordeals as I, have now learned how these troubles can be mitigated. When I say Doan's Kidney Pills will cure them I not only speak from experience but from observation. To all old soldiers or anyone suffering from kidney complaint my advice is to try that remedy."

Question Answered.

Yes, August Flower still has the largest sale of any medicine in the civilized world. Your mothers' and grandmothers' never thought of using anything else for Indigestion or Biliousness. Doctors were scarce, and they seldom heard of Appendicitis, Nervous Prostration or Heart failure, etc. They used August Flower to clean out the system and stop fermentation of undigested food, regulate the action of the liver, stimulate the nervous and organic action of the system, and that is all they took when feeling dull and bad with headaches and other aches. You only need a few doses of Green's August Flower, in liquid form, to make you satisfied there is nothing serious the matter with you. Get Green's Prize Almanac at J. J. Orr's.

An Unfortunate Answer.

Of an official who died as the head of one of the Great Northern systems and who was one of the fathers of modern railroading the following story is told:

Once, when master mechanic, he was staying in the country. An afternoon walk brought him to the edge of a cutting through which ran his line. On a side track lay a waiting engine. The fireman and engineer were smoking placidly, while the safety valve was giving open evidence of the size of the fire within. As the engine was doing nothing in particular, this waste of coal roused the ire of the man on the bank. "Who is your master mechanic?" he inquired of the loafing fireman.

"Oh, some gray bearded, baldheaded old blankety blank blank fool down in Boston," was the cheerful answer.

"Well," returned the other as not a muscle of his face changed, "I'm that gray bearded, baldheaded old blankety blank blank fool from Boston, and you want to bank those fires, and bank them P. D. Q!"

The fireman, it is needless to say, did as he was bid.—New York Tribune.

For a great many years pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. An Embarrassing Query.

In a city where children above the age of five years have to pay full fare on the tramcars while those who are younger go free the passengers in a car saw one day a rather large boy looking seven years old at least, held in his mother's lap as though he were a baby. The big child seemed restless about something.

Presently he cried: "Mamma! Mamma!"

The mother, as if with a premonition of something wrong, tried to hush him, but he still kept saying: "Mamma! Mamma!"

"Well, what is it?" she asked at last.

"Mamma, when do I have to say I'm only five?"

Then the passengers—some of them—laughed and the mother turned very red.—London Answers.

A Unique Book.

A publishing firm which makes a specialty of expensive editions of standard authors has recently published an edition of the works of Dickens. The set is in thirty volumes and liberally illustrated and illumined. An eccentric buyer decided he would like to have a set composed of the proof sheets of the edition. These were, of course, much marked, corrected, noted and otherwise marred, but they were collected and bound in an exquisite binding and sent to the collector of original books. He paid $1,400 for the privilege of owning probably the most unique reprint of a set of Dickens' works in existence.—New York Times.

Chas. Replogle, of Atwater, O., was in very bad shape. He says: "I suffered a great deal with my kidneys and was requested to try Foley's Kidney Cure, I did so and in four days I was able to go to work again, now I am entirely well." J. J. Orr.

A TIRED MUSICIAN.

How Strauss Once Snubbed a Russian Court Dignitary.

When Johann Strauss took his orchestra to Russia, he had some unusual experiences not generally vouchsafed to those who live outside an autocratic government.

One day he received the czarina's commands to play before her at her summer resort and was told, on arriving there, that he would have to rehearse his programme three times before the performance. He begged to know the reason for that, but no explanation was given him. These were her majesty's orders, and he could only comply. Still, his astonishment grew when he saw during the three rehearsals an empty court carriage drawn by a pair of horses slowly going back and forth in front of his orchestra.

Throughout the final performance the mysterious act was explained. The empress, having a sharp attack of gout, was obliged to recline in the carriage, her foot on a cushion, while the concert took place, and the object of rehearsal had been to accustom the horses to a full string band lest they should take fright and bolt with her.

At the end of the performance an exalted dignitary of the court bade Strauss follow him to a splendid grand piano, saying:

"Now be good enough to play me all the newest Vienna music."

Although he was pretty fatigued by his three rehearsals and state performance, Strauss thought it expedient to comply, but after he had played continuously for over an hour he stopped, saying, "I presume that will be sufficient?"

"I am not at all tired," coolly rejoined his excellency.

"But I am!" said Strauss and rose from the instrument.—Youth's Companion.

The Legend of Clebach's Fountain.

Clebach's fountain was a holy well in the southern slope of Cruachan, near Roscommon, Ireland. The legend is that St. Patrick met here the two daughters of King Leoghaire, Fedelm and Ethna, as they came from the royal palace of Roth Cruachan to bathe in the fountain. The maidens wondered at the sight of the venerable stranger surrounded by his monks, and they questioned him eagerly as to who he was and whence he came and what king he served.

When Patrick had told them of the lofty message he bore, the grace of God touched the hearts of the maidens so that they believed and were baptized in the waters of the fountain, which St. Patrick had blessed for the purpose. Immediately on coming out of the water they prayed that they might be united with God, Patrick's king, and be with him forever. Almost instantly the blush of health left their cheeks, and they calmly sank to sleep in death. Their bodies were laid side by side in Clebach's fountain, which became one of the holy wells of Ireland, famous for the miracles it wrought among the people.

TO TALK OR NOT TO TALK?

Is Silence Golden or Is It Foolish and Unsocial?

Is the old figure of a "golden silence" being washed away in the flood of twentieth century volubility? And is it right that it should be so washed away? We do not know the answers to these questions. Perhaps you, gentle reader, know and will tell. We do know that there is a good deal more talk in the world than would have been considered strictly necessary by our forbears. If you don't believe this, go to the nearest library and ask to see the bound volumes of The Congressional Record. You might also take along a certificate of sanity in case the librarian became alarmed at the request.

The old timers used to tell the youth of the land to consider if what they were about to say were not only "true and tried," but also "necessary." The idea held for quite a time that it was as reprehensible to waste words as to dissipate wealth.

Our old friend Montaigne, however, had a tender place in his heart for the talker. He declared, "The most natural and fruitful exercise of the mind is conversation, and I find the use of it more sweet than any other action in life."

In some quarters members of the feminine sex are credited with an indorsement of Mr. Montaigne's sentiment.

Is it wise to talk much? Or is it foolish? Is silence golden? Or is it unsocial and therefore against civilization? What do you think?—New York Telegram.

Seeing the Editor.

An interesting story is related by Colonel Dennison in the volume "Soldiering In Canada" concerning the late Sir Henry Havelock-Allan, who was a famous fighter. The colonel says: "My wife and I were in Hyde park one day when Sir Henry came over and asked how she liked his horse. She said very much, and I gave my opinion that it was about the finest horse I had seen on the row that day. He then told us an anecdote about the horse. He said he had ridden into Darlington, which was close to his country seat, and he sent a boy up to the editor of the newspaper asking him to come down to the street to speak to him for a few minutes, as he could not leave his horse. The editor was too busy to come down, and Sir Henry went to him. He rode up two flights of stairs into the editor's room, spoke to him from the horse's back, rode round his table and back again and then made his way out into the street. He said the horse tumbled things about a good bit, and the editor danced out of his way. 'But,' added Sir Henry, 'now the editor comes down to me if I go to see him mounted.'"

Climbing Animals.

Dogs often have to be trained to climb stairs, instinctively distrusting the upper stories. It has been conjectured that this is because the dog's forelegs break easily below the shoulder, and the beast seems to realize this. The fox has no such fear and has been known to climb a tree with plenty of small limbs to the height of seventeen feet. Swimming comes easier than climbing to most animals as well as to many races of men. Rats and guinea pigs can swim well and do not climb at all.

Bears can climb well if little, but the grizzly and other large species stay mainly on the ground. A bear always climbs down a tree backward, as does the domestic cat until she has nearly reached the ground, when she turns and jumps, but most wild cats run down a trunk head first, even the heavy leopard being a more skillful climber than the light house cat. The tiger and lion, however, do not climb, for no discoverable reason unless it be that they fear falling on account of their weight.

A Cumulative Persian Story.

A hunter finds some honey in the fissure of a rock, fills a jar with it and takes it to a grocer. While it is being weighed a drop falls to the ground and is swallowed up by the grocer's weasel. Thereupon the huntsman's dog rushes upon the weasel and kills it. The grocer throws a stone at the dog and kills him. The huntsman draws his sword and cuts off the grocer's arm, after which he is cut down by the infuriated mob of the bazar.

The governor of the town, informed of the fact, sent messengers to arrest the murderer. When the crowd resisted, troops were dispatched to the scene of the conflict, whereupon the townspeople mixed themselves up in the riot, which lasted three days and three nights, with the result that 70,000 men were slain. All this through a drop of honey.—Notes and Queries.

THE SON of ABULFEDA

How He Provided His Palace With Statues.

In the last years of the eighth century there reigned in Bagdad the Caliph Abulfeda. Into the coffers of his predecessors the wealth of the east had been poured with a most unsparing hand. The magnificent "City of the Enchantress" was not only the "Abode of Peace," but a splendid jewel in the empire of the faithful.

Of all the caliphs of this wonderful city since Almansor, its founder, no two had blessed or cursed the world with the same idea of what it was necessary that man should do to enjoy life in this world and at death to be worthy of a place among the dark eyed damsels and beautiful youths of the gardens of paradise.

The magnificent Almamoun scattered his inestimable wealth in the greatest contrast with the abstemiousness and frugality of the mighty Omar, and the Haroun-al-Raschid of Bagdad is vastly different from the Akbah, whose fanatic advance only the heaving waves of the Atlantic were able to hinder.

The Caliph Abulfeda had succeeded his father, whose desire to gather the gold of the then known world into Bagdad without expending it for any purpose had put the youthful prince to many disadvantages and fostered in him the desire to do otherwise when he would succeed to the mantle of the prophet. Therefore when his own sons were choosing their ends or pleasures the Caliph Abulfeda was always ready to forward or indulge them.

Among the youngest of his many children was Ali. For years he had brooded over and planned on the idea of a wonderful edifice that he hoped in time to construct. Of all the magnificent structures it had been his privilege as a son of the commander of the faithful to see none was in all things the perfection of which the young prince dreamed; therefore on the death of his father the prince began the building of the long deferred happiness.

In time there arose on the banks of the river the most wonderful architectural dream that even that magic age and that wonderful city had produced. Yet to the prince it was unfinished; something was yet lacking to make it the abode of perfect pleasure.

One evening the prince was sauntering along one of the most magnificent of the curiously carved arcades of the palace when a voice called his name:

"Prince Ali, son of Abulfeda! Prince Ali, son of Abulfeda!"

The young prince glanced quickly around on all sides, but beheld no one except the silent sentinels on guard around the palace and the picturesque horsemen that at a little distance rode slowly back and forth as safeguards against approaching danger.

Again came the voice:

"Prince Ali, son of Abulfeda! Prince Ali, son of Abulfeda!"

Quick as a flash the prince drew the splendidly ornamented and equally splendidly tempered blade at his side and stood ready to face any opponent.

But it was unnecessary. Before him stood an old man, bowed and whitened by the sorrows and trials of many years. His dress and manner also distinguished him as belonging to some other period.

"Prince Ali, son of Abulfeda!" he began.

"I am," assented Prince Ali, scarcely knowing whether to tower up to his full height and answer with the pride he felt in his noble name or acknowledge his inferiority before a higher power.

"I know you, I know you," answered the aged man. "I knew your honored father and your father's father, and"—a supernatural expression spreading over his visage—"and I stood side by side with the prophet himself in many a dearly won fight with the enemies of the only true belief. But I wronged him. I did him an injustice, and therefore is my slumber in the tomb disturbed. When the commander of the faithful or one of his children has an earnest longing or desire, I or some other who has wronged the prophet is called from his tomb in answer to their prayers.

"Prince Ali, son of Abulfeda, what is thy desire?"

The prince thereupon began at the birth of his hope for the possession of an architectural wonder and related all until its completion.

"I understand! I understand!" cried the old man, slowly beckoning the prince to silence. "You have exhausted your wordly knowledge in attempting to succeed to happiness, in gratifying your desire, and have failed. Is it not as I say?"

"It is," answered the prince, "and I now yearn for something beyond the power of man to accomplish or understand."

"Be it then as you desire," answered the aged father. "Behold this staff. Ask not from whence it came nor discover the mystery to any living man until I return for its possession."

The prince took the staff and looked it curiously over, but nothing extraordinary occurred. Seeing his expectancy, the aged man continued:

"The followers of the good man Jesus, whom the Christians believe and the worshipers of the stars and moon and the elements and other works and doings of the one and only God—for there is but one God, and Mohammed is his prophet—have images beautiful to behold, yet far from the handiwork of the Creator. To us is forbidden such images. Would you fill the structure you have built with more wonderful images, beyond the construction or understanding of man kind?"

"I would, I would!" exclaimed the prince, delighted with the expectation.

"The power is in your hand," answered the strange visitor and vanished.

For several minutes the prince stood as if awakened from a dream, but not long, for just at that moment a young girl, a favorite with the prince, came on tiptoe behind him. Noiselessly as the soft breeze that scarce moved the dark hair that fell uncontrolled over her white shoulders she crept up and was about to clasp her small hands over his eyes when the prince, seeing the shadow and excited by the strange visitor who had just left him, wheeled suddenly around and in doing so touched the laughing girl with his staff.

As a statue of the whitest marble she stood before him.

As the prince stood wondering at the magic power of the apparently commonplace staff a courier approached in all haste with a message from a distant province governed by a very dear friend of Prince Ali.

The breathless messenger fell on his face before the prince, and after salaaming after the manner of the day and recovering breath enough to speak he begged the pardon of the prince for first exacting a promise of secrecy in regard to the matter upon which he had been sent, it being his master's special order.

In his anxiety the prince raised the hand that held the staff and placed it on the shoulder of the exhausted messenger, and he, too, was marble.

As the days went by the palace filled with strange images, and the possessor of the wonderful staff began to long for the supernatural donor. The possession of his gift began to be a weight, and each image added to the palace was a weight added to the burden of its ruler. Still the longed for visitor came not.

At last, when the prince was almost driven to madness, his strange visitor again appeared. Before he could ask a question of the descendant of the great Mahmoud the staff was thrust into his hands, and he was prayed by the memory of the great leader to restore to life the silent images that, instead of adorning, cast a gloom over the palace.

"Is that not beautiful?" asked the strange visitor, pointing to the figure of the mischievous girl favorite. "Look at the grace, the smile almost bursting into laughter."

"It is beautiful, most beautiful," answered the prince, "but her laugh would be to me more beautiful than all."

"And that!" exclaimed the aged man. "Look how natural that courier is about to relate his message!"

"Most natural, most natural," sighed the prince, "but the unspoken message is locked in that marble breast."

To several others the strange visitor drew the shrinking prince and commented on the peculiar beauty of each. But the prince could not be diverted from the melancholy that possessed him.

"Take them away! Take them away!" exclaimed the prince. "Leave my palace as it was, and I will be happy, perfectly happy!"

"Be it as you say," answered the aged man, "and profit by the lesson."

There was a slight rustle in the courts of the palace, and when it passed all was as it had been. Even the strange visitor himself was gone.

The palace of Prince Ali of Bagdad stood for ages as it was erected, except this inscription over the main entrance:

ALI, SON OF ABULFEDA, TO THE PRINCES OF THE WORLD.

There is no pleasure where the happiness of a fellow creature is endangered, nor is there loveliness in anything where there is either adding to or taking from the handiwork of the Most High God.

A Wide Open Library.

Dr. Parker was asked how he managed to draw thousands to his City temple in London. He said, "You would understand if you read my library."

"Is it such a good one?" asked a listener.

"Oh, it's good, bad, indifferent, grand and squalid," answered the mighty talker. "It's everything. It's in underground trains and on buses, in aerated teashops, smart restaurants, at churches, stations, parties, receptions, meetings, jubilees and sickbeds; you find it in prisons and boudoirs. The fact is you can never get away from it. We call it 'human nature' for want of a better name. I study it. That's why I call it my library. Most men don't, you see. But that's why I'm listened to."

COLDS

We Have Many Friends Here in Town Who Are Subject to Such Trouble.

Colds if neglected lead to serious and often fatal consequences.

Do not go on living with the continual dread of catching cold. There is no need of it. People who take cold easily do so because their system is in just the condition to contract them.

We know of something that will quickly drive colds out of the system by invigorating the entire body. It is VINOL, the great tonic reconstructor, that contains all the active curative principles found in cod liver oil.

Here is one letter that we have had presented to us that we would like our friends to read:

"I have been suffering from a severe cold for a number of weeks, and having heard so much about VINOL as being a cure for such troubles, I decided to try it. Two bottles entirely cured me and I now feel in better health than ever before in my life. J. M. BROWN, 319 W. Mahanoy St., Mahanoy City, Penn."

Remember that if you do not find that VINOL is all that we claim for it we are always glad to refund to our customers the money that they pay us for it, which emphatically endorses Vinol.

DRUGGIST.

W. H. TINSON OBJECTS TO MORPHINE.

He Objected When the Doctors Wanted to Stupefy Him.

ROXBURY, Mass.—Mr. Tinson had a remarkably severe case of sciatic rheumatism, which laid him up entirely. He had five doctors, was in bed swathed in cotton batten and red medicinal flannel, and instead of getting better, he got worse. The doctors wanted to use morphine, which he would not have. A good friend came along, suggested Ath-lo-pho-ros, and in eight days he was able to go out, and in another five days, to go to his business. Two bottles of Ath-lo-phoros did it, and he has never had an attack since.

Advice as to Roasting a Turkey.

"Ninety-nine women out of every hundred, ninety-nine cooks out of every hundred, will bake a turkey with the back to the pan," said a New Orleans man who keeps in touch with the kitchen, "and this is a mistake. A famous French cook I know never thinks of baking a turkey with the breast up. The breast is turned to the bottom of the pan and instead of being dry and tasteless when it is served is richly flavored and as sweet and juicy as one would care to have it. You see, all the fine flavoring of the turkey, the juices of the dressing and all the dainties touches flow down toward the breast of the fowl, and when the white meat is served you get the full benefit of every flavor added during the processes of preparing and baking the turkey, in addition to the distinctive taste of the fowl itself.

"Inconvenient and awkward! Not at all. It is just as easy to cook a turkey in this way as in any other way, and the result is infinitely more satisfactory. It is no trouble to arrange the fowl in the pan. If you desire to place the fowl on the table before carving it, you will find that it will look quite as well as it would if baked in the usual way, and certainly it will taste much better than it would if you baked the breast until it was dry and flavorless."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

A Display of Avarice.

On the occasion of giving a concert Mme. Sala engaged Paganini at a fee of 50 guineas, says the Golden Penny. The next day she repaired to the violinist's house and handed him the sum in gold, the sight of which filled the great player with such violent emotion that he plunged his fingers among the bright pieces, which he poured over his arms and hands as though they were water. Despite this display of avarice, however, he returned the fee to Mme. Sala.

ARE YOU DEAF? ANY HEAD NOISES?

ALL CASES OF

by our new invention. Only those born deaf are incurable.

HEAD NOISES CEASE IMMEDIATELY.

F. A. WERMAN, OF BALTIMORE, SAYS:

BALTIMORE, Md., March 30, 1901.

Gentlemen:—Being entirely cured of deafness, thanks to your treatment, I will now give you a full history of my case, to be used at your discretion.

About five years ago my right ear began to sing, and this kept on getting worse, until I lost my hearing in this ear entirely.

I underwent a treatment for catarrh, for three months, without any success, consulted a number of physicians, among others, the most eminent ear specialist of this city, who told me that only an operation could help me, and even that only temporarily, that the head noises would then cease, but the hearing in the affected ear would be lost forever.

I then saw your advertisement accidentally in a New York paper, and ordered your treatment. After I had used it only a few days according to your directions, the noises ceased, and to-day, after five weeks, my hearing in the diseased ear has been entirely restored. I thank you heartily and beg to remain

Very truly yours,

F. A. WERMAN, 730 S. Broadway, Baltimore, Md.

OVER 30 EXCEPTIONS

Filed by Schley Against Majority of Court's Findings.

ALSO ASKS FOR HEARING

The Exceptions Cover Many Points—"Findings Are in Conflict With the Overwhelming Weight of Evidence."

Washington, Dec. 19.—Late yesterday afternoon Admiral Schley, through his counsel, filed with the secretary of the navy his bill of exceptions to the majority findings of the court of inquiry and also a letter asking to be allowed to be heard in connection with the objections to be filed by attorneys for Admiral Sampson to the individual opinion of Admiral Dewey. This action was taken after Mr. Rayner, Mr. Teague and Capt. Parker of counsel, had held a consultation throughout the day with their client.

Secretary Long almost immediately after the receipt of the communications, called Judge Advocate Lemly and the solicitor for the department, Mr. Hanna, into conference. At its conclusion, the secretary said he had no statement to make regarding any action that he might take in the premises. He, however, indicated to Mr. Teague, through the judge advocate, that he would not hear an oral argument by Mr. Rayner regarding Admiral Sampson's protest, but that he would receive a written statement.

It was expected that counsel for Admiral Sampson would file their objections to the findings of Admiral Dewey in the case yesterday, but it is now stated that such objections may not be offered before Friday.

The text of the bill of exceptions is as follows:

To the Honorable, the Secretary of the Navy: Winfield Scott Schley, rear admiral, U. S. N., (retired), the applicant before a court of inquiry of which Admiral George Dewey, U. S. N., is president, and Rear Admirals Andrew E. K. Benham and Francis M. Ramsay, U. S. N., members, and Captain Samuel C. Lemly, U. S. N., judge advocate general, judge advocate, objects to the approval of the findings of the court upon the ground that the opinion rendered and the report of court facts made by the majority of the court are in conflict with the overwhelming weight of evidence; and that the majority of the court, in their said opinion, have ignored the testimony of the applicant and of the whole of the applicant's witnesses and all that portion of the evidence given by witnesses for the government which was favorable to the applicant, and have thus deprived him of rights guaranteed to him by the laws of the land and the constitution of the United States, and the applicant now assigns grounds in support of his said objection.

The exceptions are classified in articles and number 31. Each article starts out with the phrase, "The majority of the court," etc. They cover in all nearly every point taken up by the court.

Can't Scare Venezuela.

Willemstad, Island of Curacoa, Dec. 19.—La Republica, the Venezuelan official organ at Caracas, published an editorial yesterday ending as follows: "If the German government is informed that the presence of a few war ships will suffice to effect an arrangement of her outstanding claims, it has been deceived. Venezuela is conscious that she is an independent nation, the equal of the other powers, and she is determined to defend that independence and equality. She is desirous of peace; but if necessary, she can cause hurt to her enemies, and exercise terrible reprisals. Gen. Gastro is determined on this. He will in no case suffer Venezuela to be humiliated or allow her rights to be despised."

Carnegie's Gift Yet Possible.

Washington, Dec. 19.—Mr. Andrew Carnegie was in the city yesterday and with Secretary Root lunched with the president at the White house. It is understood that the proposed gift of $10,000,000 by Mr. Carnegie to the government for the establishment of a university of higher learning in this city was discussed, but the statement is made that the matter is still undeveloped and that there is nothing to be said on the subject for publication. Mr. Carnegie left the city late in the afternoon. He was quoted as saying as he was leaving the White house that there would be no trouble about the gift—that the matter would come out all right.

Fled From Creditors.

Phoenix, Ariz., Dec. 19.—It has been announced here that Lee D. Mills, local manager of the Southern Mutual Investment Co., has fled to Canada, taking a large sum of money and leaving behind local creditors to the amount of several thousand dollars. His offices here are closed and patrons and creditors of the company have been notified from the head offices at Lexington, Ky., that their interests will be cared for. It is alleged that Mills's shortage for the past six months approximates $10,000. He is believed to be in New Brunswick.

Family of Murderers.

Chillicothe, O., Dec. 19.—Effie Ragland, her sons, Charles and George, aged 21 and 12, and daughter Cora, aged 20, all colored, were arrested here yesterday charged with the murder of Mrs. Charles Ragland. The woman died Monday night. Postmortem examination shows that the woman had been poisoned.

Oleomargarine Up Jan. 8.

Washington, Dec. 19.—The house committee on agriculture fixed Jan. 8 for taking up the oleomargarine question, at which time the various interests will be assigned dates for hearings.

Saw Death Near.

"It made my heart ache," writes L. C. Overstreet, of Elgin, Tenn., "to hear my wife cough until it seemed her weak and sore lungs would collapse. Good doctors said she was so far gone with Consumption that no medicine or earthly help could save her, but a friend recommended Dr. King's New Discovery and persistent use of this excellent medicine saved her life" It's absolutely guaranteed for Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis. Asthma and all Throat and Lung diseases 50c and $1.00 at C. A Wright's Trial bottles free.

UNIFORMS FOR PUPILS.

Novel Plan Suggested by a Detroit School Inspector.

Detroit, Mich., Dec. 18.—At the meeting of the board of education Thursday evening School Inspector Love will ask for the appointment of a special committee to take up the question of providing uniforms for all the pupils of Detroit's three high schools.

The suggestion for uniforms is based on the democratic idea that everything possible should be done to place the pupils on a social level in the school room and to obliterate as nearly as can be the disparagement in dress between the children of the rich and of the poor.

"I have often wondered," said Mr. Love, "if something could not be done to meet the conditions that exist in our high schools, where rich and poor children must mingle, and a few days ago the idea of uniforms was suggested to me by Herbert L. Baker." Continued Love: "Mr. Baker, of course, could have no personal interest in such a suggestion, as the cost of his children's clothes is a matter that doesn't worry him. He simply realizes, as every one must, that poor children are subjected to a good deal of embarrassment through having to mix with their better-dressed fellows in the schools."

MORE PARDONS CONSIDERED.

A Detroit Italian's Case Favorably Recommended.

Jackson, Mich., Dec. 18.—The advisory board of pardons, in session at the prison, recommended a parole in the case of Francisco St. Angelo, an Italian, sent up from Detroit in July, 1897, for 15 years, for the manslaughter of an Italian named Antoch. Henry F. Chipman of Detroit appeared before the board in behalf of St. Angelo, and showed that clemency had been recommended by Judge Chapin, before whom the case was tried, and by Attorney Fraser.

The board also took favorable action regarding John Ellis, a farmer who liverd near Mt. Pleasant, Isabella county, and was sent to prison for 10 years for criminal assault, and, if the governor concurs, Ellis will be free by Christmas. The daughter of an itinerant preacher named Martindale was the complaining witness, and Ellis was convicted entirely on her story. Since then the preacher's reputation has tumbled and the prosecution has been diagnosed as spite work.

Witnesses Disagree.

Mt. Clemens, Mich., Dec. 18.—The prosecution still holds sway in the trial of Homer Bliss for the murder of his father, but the testimony of Tuesday was of a somewhat conflicting character. Dr. Yates testified that it was his belief that the wound in the neck of the dead man severed the main artery, causing instant death. John W. Switzer was then produced by the defense. He said that the doctor told him after the inquest that the old man might have died a lingering death in the woods. This the doctor denied, and the greater part of the day was spent in the examination of these two witnesses.

Michigan Pensioners.

Washington, Dec. 18.—Michigan pensions were granted Tuesday as follows: Original—Alfred Dunn, Saranac, $6; John H. Franklin, Mt. Clemens, $6. War with Spain—Robert W. McClements, South Lake, $6. Increase, restoration, reissue, etc.—George B. Mann, Port Hudson, $8; John Burnham, Saginaw, $10. War with Spain—Orietor C. Beach, Birmingham, $10. Mexican war—Jesse C. Myers, Crosswell, $12. Original widows, etc.—Frianna Prichard, Walloon Lake, $8; Mary Ceseky, Dice, $8.

Port Huron, Mich., Dec. 18.—Lester Milliken asks the city of St. Clair to pay him $5,000 for injuries received from a fall on a bridge across Pine river. His arm was broken Nov. 20, 1900.

Gone After Miss Stone.

Constantinople, Dec. 18.—W. W. Peet, treasurer of the Turkish mission in Constantinople, accompanied by M. Gargiulo, dragoman of the United States legation here, started last night to meet the brigands who hold Miss Stone captive. In accordance with instructions received from Washington, they will attempt to secure the release of the prisoner in exchange for the ransom money now available. It is reported here that Madame Tsilka's baby is still alive and well.

Raynor's Protest Completed.

Baltimore, Dec. 18.—Atty.-Gen. Isidor Raynor, counsel for Admiral Schley, has finished the draft of the formal document to be delivered to Secretary of the Navy Long, protesting against the finding of the court of inquiry. Today Mr. Raynor will carry the draft of the protest to Washington and after he and Admiral Schley have conferred over it a copy will be prepared for transmission to Secretary Long.

Collision Kills One Man.

Marshalltown, Ia., Dec. 18.—In a collision between a passenger train and a freight, at Potter, a station on the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul road, Mail Clerk J. E. Carpenter was killed and Engineer Ben Giles severely injured. Seven passengers were slightly hurt. The accident is attributed to failure of the air brakes on the freight train.

CAPTURED AT LAST

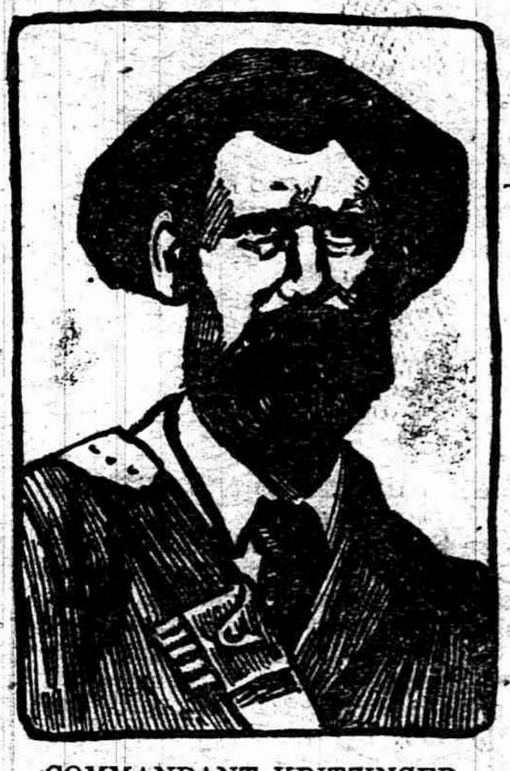
British Succeed in Nailing Famous Boer Leader.

KRITZINGER IS THE MAN

Has Many Times Fooled the British, and This Time Was Severely Wounded Before He Would Consent to Surrender.

London, Dec. 18.—A dispatch from Kitchener announces that Commandant Kritzinger, the famous Boer commander, has been captured, badly wounded, by General French. Kritzinger was trying to break the blockhouse cordon at Hanover road.

Commandant Kritzinger has been described as a leader of exceptionable ability, not second even to Christian De Wet. He has been repeatedly referred to in dispatches from South Africa as being hotly pursued, cornered or crushed up against the Orange river in flood. But he always succeeded in escaping through some gap in the British line. He has been reported as having 1,000 men with him and a day or two later, when the British had concentrated, his force had been broken up into small bands and had disappeared among the mountains, where pursuit was useless. Once no fewer than seven British columns were in hot pursuit of him and drove him towards the Orange river, which was then unfordable. But when the British thought they had him caught they discovered that he was 50 miles in their rear, threatening the railroad after having divided his command into two sections.



COMMANDANT KRITZINGER.

An officer of the British intelligence department who fell into Kritzinger's hands described the Boer leader as a fine looking man about 5 feet 10 inches in hight, broadly built and speaking English perfectly. At that period, the officer said, Kritzinger was attired in lavender-colored trousers, with yellow tanned gaiters, a well-cut coat, a starched white linen shirt and a brand new tally-ho hat, with a pugaree. Kritzinger wore gloves and carried a hunting-crop. His men were well dressed and all their horses were in splendid condition.

More Deaths in Flood.

Towanda, Pa., Dec. 18.—Two more deaths from the flood are reported, making five lives thus far known to be lost in this (Bradford) county. A telephone message from Austinville in the western part of the county, states that Mr. and Mrs. Abner Richards, well-to-do residents of that place, aged about 50 years, were swept down the stream while endeavoring to save their poultry from the rushing water. Their bodies were found a half mile from their house, half buried in the sand and debris.

Siam King Our Guest.

Washington, Dec. 18.—Senator Frye has introduced a joint resolution authorizing the president to invite the king of Siam to visit the United States. It sets forth in a preamble the fact that the king of Siam has made known to our minister at Bangkok his desire to visit the United States and the resolution provides that he shall be invited to become the guest of the nation while here. An appropriation for his majesty's suitable entertainment is provided, but the sum is left blank for the present.

To Tag Shoddy Goods.

Washington, Dec. 18.—Rep. Grosvenor of Ohio has introduced a bill applying the principle of the oleomargarine law to shoddy woolen goods. It provides that all manufacturers of shoddy goods shall tag them in plain letters and figures, showing the percentages of wool and of shoddy. Tailors and clothiers are required to tag all garments so as to show the percentages of wool and shoddy.

Abolish Sugar Bounties.

Brussels, Dec. 18.—The international sugar conference, which opened here Monday, is still in session. The indications are that the delegates, who represent all the countries of Europe except Russia, favor the total abolition of sugar bounties in the countries represented. The delegates have pledged themselves to abstain from making any communication to the press, but this much was ascertained.

Protest Dewey's Findings.

New York, Dec 18.—Stayton & Campbell, attorneys for Rear Admiral Sampson, are engaged in drawing up a formal protest against the minority finding of Admiral Dewey in the Schley court of inquiry.

DIED AT 107 YEARS.

Michigan's Oldest Man Passes Away at Ludington.

Ludington, Mich., Dec. 19.—Louis Rock, oldest man in Michigan, died here yesterday at the age of 107. He was born Dec. 15, 1794, on a whaling vessel bound from Havre to Newfoundland, and was the first white man to enter the Yosemite valley. This was in the spring of 1844, when he was in charge of a hunting party, all of whom were killed by Indians, he alone escaping. Later he made his way back to Canada and then removed to Ludington, where he had worked in the lumber camps until a few years ago. During the last years he became a charge of the city, having deeded his little property to Ludington for his care.

Dueled it to Death.

Uniontown, Pa., Dec. 19.—Daniel Bradburn and David Fagan fought a duel to the death Tuesday night in a small room of Hall's boarding house, where both men lived. Bradburn was killed and Fagan is in jail with a bullet wound in his side from the effects of which he may die. Fagan had accused Bradburn of stealing money from him, and the latter went down town, purchased a revolver and returning challenged Fagan to get his gun and fight it out. Fagan immediately went to his room and got his revolver and the fight was on in deadly earnest. Mrs. Hall and Mrs. Addis were in the room and did what they could to stop the quarrel, Mrs. Hall holding Fagan and Mrs. Addis, Bradburn. Mrs. Hall got a bullet through her hand for her trouble. Shot after shot followed until each man had emptied the five chambers of his revolver. Bradburn then threw himself across the bed and was dead within 25 minutes. Fagan left the house, but returned yesterday and gave himself up, saying he was shot through the side and was dying. The two women were partisan in the affair and at the coroner's inquest tried to make it appear that the other's companion was the aggressor. Bradburn's real name is said to be Daniel Nuse of Cumberland, Md.

Two Ships Lost.

New York, Dec. 19.—It is believed that the schooners Maud, Capt. Robinson and Ella Brown, Capt. Peabody, which sailed from this port for Beverly, Mass., and Camden, Me., respectively, on Nov. 5, will never be seen again. The Maud has not been reported since Nov. 13, and the Ella Brown since Nov. 10, the day of the heavy gale off Cape Cod in which several schooners foundered. Both vessels were in the neighborhood of Cape Cod on Nov. 10. The crews of the two vessels numbered all told, 13 persons. The companies which carry the insurance on the vessels have decided that they were lost and are preparing to pay the claims.

Schley for President.

Indianapolis, Ind., Dec. 19.—At French Lick Springs today Richard Croker expressed a very decided opinion that Admiral Schley would make a strong presidential candidate in 1904 and that the probabilities all favor a boom for him in the east, with a strong following both in the south and the west. He expressed the opinion that congress would not interfere in the matter in any way and that this would be to the advantage of Schley and the democratic party, for inaction would be tantamount to an indorsement of the majority verdict and thus commit the republican party to it.

CHILDREN OF LONG AGO.

The Etiquette They Were Taught In the Eighteenth Century.

The "polite academy" does not confine itself to purely ethical considerations. The minutest directions are given as to polite behavior under all sorts of circumstances:

"Take salt with a saltspoon or else with a clean knife, not with that you are eating with, for that will foul the rest.

"Do not laugh at table, much less sneeze, cough or yawn; but if you cannot avoid it hold up the napkin or tablecloth before your face and turn aside from the table.

"When you drink, bow to some one of the company and say sir or madam.

"Never regard what another has on his plate. It looks as if you wanted it.

"If you have occasion to laugh, turn from the company.

"Always look pleased, but not merry unless there is occasion."

Now as to the deportment of a young master:

"Let your feet be placed at a small distance from one another, not too close nor too wide in spreading.

"Put one hand easy and free into the bosom of your waistcoat and the other under the flap of it.

"Do not button more than the three lowest buttons of your waistcoat that your hand may not be raised too high.

"Do not thrust your hand into your breeches as vulgar boys do, but let it fall with one under the flap of your waistcoat."

To face this page there is a beautiful "copper cut" of a young master in the easy and elegant attitude recommended, and truly "there is a great deal of sweetness in his looks."

If new tinware is rubbed over with fresh lard and thoroughly heated in the oven before it is used, it will never rust afterward, no matter how much it is put in water.

A good way to clean zinc utensils is to dip a piece of cotton in kerosene and rub the articles with it until the dirt is removed. Dry afterward with a clean [illegible] to get rid of all grease.

For [illegible] tinware borax produces the best results. If the teapot or coffeepot is discolored on the inside, boil it in a strong solution of borax for a short time and all its brightness will return.

Pans and kettles partly filled with water should not be placed on the range to soak, as it only makes them harder to clean. They should be filled with cold water and be kept away from the heat.

Names For Farms.

"We wish that every farm in Maine would be named," says the Lewiston Journal. "This is not a mere matter of sentiment, by any means, but it is strictly business.

"The man whose farm is known by some name is certain to take a greater interest in its products and to conduct all of his operations on a better plan. On every place there is certain to be some peculiarity that will suggest a name. A spring of pure water, a grove of oak or maple trees or something else of a similar nature will give it a local flavor. Then paint its name on the end of the barn facing the road. Let it be where every passerby can see it. Your farm will then soon become known far and wide and will aid you in a thousand ways.

"Besides, how much more dignified it is to be spoken of as the proprietor of Oak Grove farm than to be alluded to as Jim Jones. By all means name your farms, and it will make you all better farmers."

What a Bureau Really Is.

When parchment was used for writing and when bookbinding was in its infancy and a bound book was a costly luxury, it was the custom to place the book on a piece of cloth or a strip of wool in order to prevent the binding from possible damage on the rough wood of the table. Those who had to deal with money also had a strip of cloth on the table or counter so that the coins should not roll. This strip was called "bureau."

In course of time the custom changed, and the same word was applied to the writing table covered with green or other colored cloth and at length descended to the modern table with the center protected by leather. As an office contains one or more of these tables it is not difficult to understand that the name should, in one country, have been given to the room that contained the bureau.—London Standard.

Waste of Postage.

The lawyers were discussing the merits and demerits of a well known member of the New Orleans bar who had been gathered to his fathers, and one of the party, says the New Orleans Times-Democrat, recalled the time when he studied in the old man's office.

We had a copying clerk whose inefficiency continually worked the judge up to the point of explosion. One day a wire basket fell off the top of his desk and scratched his cheek. Not having any courtplaster, he slapped on three postage stamps and went on with his work.

A little later he had some papers to take to the United States court, and, forgetting all about the stamps, he put on his hat and went out.

As he entered the office the judge raised his head and fixed him with an astonished stare. The clerk stopped and looked frightened and finally asked:

"Anything—er—wrong, sir?"

"Yes, sir!" thundered the old gentleman. "You are carrying too much for second class matter."

By Jules Verne

plume of ruddy flames among the volumes of smoke the sparks seemed to fall among the group as though thousands of spangles had been suddenly illuminated. Michael was about to step up the ladder when a few words reached his ear, distinctly uttered in that strange tongue which he had heard during the night at the fair.

Instinctively he stopped to listen. Protected by the shadow of the forecastle, he could not be perceived himself. As to seeing the passengers who were talking, that was impossible. He was obliged to confine himself to listening.

The first words exchanged were of no importance—to him at least—but they allowed him to recognize the voices of the man and woman whom he had heard at Nijni Novgorod. This, of course, made him redouble his attention. It was, indeed, not at all impossible that the gypsies, a scrap of whose conversation he had overheard, now banished with all their fellows, should be on board the Caucasus.

And it was well for him that he listened for he distinctly heard this question and answer made in the Tartar idiom:

"It is said that a courier has set out from Moscow for Irkutsk."

"It is so said, Sangarre, but either this courier will arrive too late, or he will not arrive at all."

Michael Strogoff started involuntarily at this reply which concerned him so directly. He tried to see if the man and woman who had just spoken were really those whom he suspected, but the shadow was too deep, and he could not succeed.

In a few moments Michael Strogoff had regained the stern of the vessel without having been perceived, and, taking a seat by himself, he buried his face in his hands. It might have been supposed that he was asleep.

He was not asleep, however, and did not even think of sleeping. He was reflecting on this, not without a lively apprehension: "Who is it knows of my departure and who can have any interest in knowing it?"

CHAPTER V.

THE next day, the 18th of July, at twenty minutes to 7 in the morning, the Caucasus reached the Kasan quay, seven versts from the town.

Michael did not even think of landing. He was unwilling to leave the young Livonian girl alone on board, as she had not yet reappeared on deck.

There was a report along all the eastern frontier of Russia that the insurrection and invasion had reached considerable proportions. Communication between Siberia and the empire was already extremely difficult. All this Michael Strogoff heard without leaving the deck of the Caucasus from the new arrivals.

This information could not but cause him great uneasiness and increase his wish of being beyond the Ural mountains, so as to judge for himself of the truth of these rumors and enable him to guard against any possible contingency. He was thinking of seeking more direct intelligence from some native of Kasan when his attention was diverted.

Among the passengers who were leaving the Caucasus Michael recognized the troop of gypsies who the day before had appeared in the Nijni Novgorod fair. There on the deck of the steamboat were the old Bohemian and the woman who had played the spy on him. With them and no doubt under their direction landed about twenty dancers and singers from fifteen to twenty years of age, wrapped in old cloaks, which covered their spangled dresses. These dresses, just then glancing in the first rays of the sun, reminded Michael of the curious appearance which he had observed during the night. It must have been the glitter of those spangles in the bright flames issuing suddenly from the steamboat's funnel which had attracted his attention.

"Evidently," said Michael to himself, "this troop of Zingari, after remaining below all day, crouched under the forecastle during the night. Were these gypsies trying to show themselves as little as possible? Such is not according to the usual custom of their race."

Michael Strogoff no longer doubted that the expressions he had heard which so clearly referred to him had proceeded from this tawny group and had been exchanged between the old gypsy and the woman named Sangarre.

Michael involuntarily moved toward the gangway as the Bohemian troop was leaving the steamboat, not to return to it again.

The old Bohemian was there in a humble attitude, little conformable with the effrontery natural to his race. One would have said that he was endeavoring rather to avoid attention than to attract it. His battered hat, browned by the suns of every clime, was pulled forward over his wrinkled face. His arched back was bent under an old cloak, wrapped closely round him notwithstanding the heat. It would have been difficult in this miserable dress to judge of either his size or face. Near him was the gypsy Sangarre, a woman about thirty years old. She was tall and well made, with olive complexion, magnificent eyes and golden hair, and carried herself to perfection.

Sangarre was regarding him with a peculiar gaze, as if she wished to fix his features indelibly in her memory.

It was but for a few moments when Sangarre herself followed the old man and his troop, who had already left the vessel.

"That's a bold gypsy," said Michael to himself. "Could she have recognized me as the man whom she saw at Nijni Novgorod? These confounded Zingaris have the eyes of a cat! They can see in the dark, and that woman there might well know"—

Michael Strogoff was on the point of following Sangarre and the gypsy band; but he stopped.

"No," thought he; "no unguarded proceedings. If I were to stop that old fortune teller and his companions, my incognito would run a risk of being discovered. Besides, now they have landed, before they can pass the frontier I shall be already beyond the Ural. I know that they may take the route from Kasan to Ichim, but that affords no resources to travelers, and, besides, a tarantass drawn by four good Siberian horses will always go faster than a gypsy cart."

By this time the old man and Sangarre had disappeared in the crowd.

An hour afterward the bell rang on board the Caucasus, calling the new passengers and recalling the former ones. It was now 7 o'clock in the morning. The requisite fuel had been received on board, and about 10 o'clock in the morning the young Livonian, leaving her cabin, appeared on deck. Michael Strogoff went forward and took her hand.

"Look, sister!" said he, leading her to the bows of the Caucasus.

The view was indeed well worth examining.

The Caucasus had just then reached the confluence of the Volga and the Kama. There she would leave the former river after having descended it for more than 400 versts to ascend the latter for 460 versts.

The Kama was here very wide, and its wooded banks were lovely. A few white sails enlivened the sparkling water. The horizon was closed by a line of hills covered with aspens, alders and sometimes large oaks.

But these beauties of nature could not distract the thoughts of the young Livonian even for an instant. She had left her hand in that of her companion and soon, turning to him, said:

"At what distance are we from Moscow?"

"Nine hundred versts," answered Michael.

"Nine hundred out of seven thousand!"

The bell now announced the breakfast hour. Nadia followed Michael Strogoff to the restaurant. She ate little, as a poor girl whose means are small would do. Michael Strogoff thought it best to content himself with the fare which satisfied his companion, and in less than twenty minutes Michael Strogoff and Nadia returned on deck. There they seated themselves in the stern, and without other preamble Nadia, lowering her voice so as to be heard by him alone, began:

"Brother, I am the daughter of an exile. My name is Nadia Fedor. My mother died at Riga scarcely a month ago, and I am going to Irkutsk to rejoin my father and share his exile."

"I, too, am going to Irkutsk," answered Michael, "and I shall thank heaven if it enables me to give Nadia Fedor safe into her father's hands."

"Thank you, brother," replied Nadia.

Michael Strogoff then added that he had obtained a special podorojna for Siberia and that the Russian authorities could in no way hinder him.

Nadia asked nothing more. She saw in this fortunate meeting with Michael a means only of accelerating her journey to her father.

"I had," said she, "a permit which authorized me to go to Irkutsk, but the order of the governor of Nijni Novgorod annulled that, and but for you, brother, I should have been unable to leave the town, and without doubt I should have perished."

"And dared you alone, Nadia," said Michael, "attempt to cross the steppes of Siberia?"

"The Tartar invasion was not known when I left Riga," replied the young girl. "It was only at Moscow that I learned that news."

"And notwithstanding that you continued your journey?"

"It was my duty."

This word showed the character of the courageous girl.

She then spoke of her father, Wassili Fedor. He was a much esteemed physician at Riga, but his connection with some secret society having been asserted he received orders to start for Irkutsk, and the police who brought the order conducted him without delay beyond the frontier. Wassili Fedor had but time to embrace his sick wife and his daughter, so soon to be left alone, when, shedding bitter tears, he was led away.

A year and a half after her husband's departure Mme. Fedor died in the arms of her daughter, who was thus left alone and almost penniless. Nadia Fedor then asked and easily obtained from the Russian government an authorization to join her father at Irkutsk. She wrote and told him she was starting. She had barely enough money for this long journey, and yet she did not hesitate to undertake it. She would do what she could. God would do the rest.

The next day, the 19th of July, the Caucasus reached Perm, the last place at which she touched on the Kama.

The government of which Perm is the capital is one of the largest in the Russian empire and, extending over the Ural mountains, encroaches on Siberian territory. Marble quarries, mines of salt, platinum, gold and coal are worked here on a large scale. Although Perm by its situation has become an important town, it is by no means attractive, being extremely muddy and dirty and possessing no resources. This want of comfort is of no consequence to those going from Russia to Siberia, for they come from the more civilized districts and are supplied with all necessaries, but to those arriving from the countries of central Asia, after a long and fatiguing journey, it would no doubt be more satisfactory if the first European town of the empire, situated on the Asiatic frontier, were better supplied with stores.

At Perm the travelers sell their vehicles, more or less damaged by the long journey across the plains of Siberia. There, too, those passing from Europe to Asia purchase carriages during the summer and sleighs in the winter season before starting for a several months' journey through the steppes.

Michael Strogoff had already sketched out his programme, so now he had only to execute it.

A vehicle carrying the mail usually runs across the Ural mountains, but at the present time this, of course, was discontinued. Even if it had not been so, Michael Strogoff would not have taken it, as he wished to travel as fast as possible without depending on any one. He wisely preferred to buy a carriage and journey by stages, stimulating the zeal of the postilions by tips.

Unfortunately, in consequence of the measures taken against foreigners of Asiatic origin, a large number of travelers had already left Perm, and therefore conveyances were extremely rare. Michael was obliged to content himself with what had been rejected by others. As to horses, as long as the czar's courier was not in Siberia he could exhibit his podorojna without danger, and the postmasters would give him the preference. But once out of European Russia, he had to depend alone on the power of his rubles.

But to what sort of vehicle should he harness his horses?

It is to be hoped that the invention of Russian coachbuilders will devise some improvement in this last named vehicle. Springs are wanting in it, so it is very uncomfortable. In the absence of iron, wood is not spared, but its four wheels, with eight or nine feet between them, assure a certain equilibrium over the jolting, rough roads. A splash board protects the travelers from the mud, and a strong leather hood, which may be pulled quite over the occupiers, shelters them from the great heat and violent storms of the summer.

It was not without careful search that Michael managed to discover this tarantass, and there was probably not a second to be found in all the town of Perm. Notwithstanding that, he haggled long about the price, for form's sake, to act up to his part as Nicholas Korpanoff, a plain merchant of Irkutsk.

Nadia had followed her companion in his search after a suitable vehicle. Although the object of each was different, both were equally anxious to arrive and consequently to start. One would have said the same will animated them both.

"Sister," said Michael, "I wish I could have found a more comfortable conveyance for you."

"Do you say that to me, brother, when I would have gone on foot, if need were, to rejoin my father?"

"I do not doubt your courage, Nadia, but there are physical fatigues which a woman may be unable to endure."

"I shall endure them, whatever they may be," replied the girl. "If you ever hear a complaint from my lips, you may leave me in the road and continue your journey alone."

Half an hour later on, the podorojna being presented by Michael, three post horses were harnessed to the tarantass. These animals, covered with long hair, were very like long legged bears. They were small, but spirited, being of Siberian breed.

They were harnessed thus: One, the largest, was secured between two long shafts on whose farther end was a hoop called a douga, carrying tassels and bells. The two others were simply fastened by ropes to the steps of the tarantass. This was the complete harness, with mere strings for reins.

Waiting for Christmas

Tis not the little ones alone who are waiting for Christmas to come, Older folks as well enjoy the festival.

The older ones enjoy not only receiving presents from others, but are happy to be able to bestow presents upon their loved ones.

Just what to give each one is a question that is not dicided in a moment, it takes sometime to determine just what would be the best and most appropriate for father, mother, brother, sister and friend.

Then, too we all like to give that which will make the best possible appearance, that which will look the best for the amount of money we think we ought to spend.

And while it is a pleasant task, it is nevertheless a difficult one, a task that requires patience. You will find every man in our store appreciates this fact and will give you every attention possible,

Any day from now until Christmas we will be ready and willing to help you by showing to you many articles suitable for Christmas Presents.

Eber M. Tayer, the 12 years old son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward P. Tayer, of Adrian, by mistake took an over dose of laudanum Tuesday night and died at his home on Company street about 9:15 Wednesday morning. The child had been troubled with the tooth ache and he rubbed laudanum on the gum to relieve the pain. When he retired Tuesday evening he placed the bottle containing the laudanum on a chair at his bed side and at different times rubbed it on his gums with his finger. It is thought he used too much and swallowed enough to put him asleep, from which he never awoke.

Editing a paper is a nice thing. If we publish jokes, people will say we are rattle-brained; if we don't we are an old fossil. If we publish original matter, they say we do not give enough selections; if we give selections they say we are too lazy to write. If we don't go to church we are a heathen, if we do, we are a hypocrite. If we wear old clothes they laugh at us, if we wear good clothes they say we have a pull.—Exchange.

THE SCHOOLS.

Miss Blanche Roberts visited Miss Hartbeck's room Thursday.

Lora Cairns was absent from Miss Hartbeck's room Thursday.

It is very amusing to hear the German I students pronounce German words with Latin pronunciation.

German II finished "Hohenals die Kirche" Thursday and take up the poem "Wilhelm Tell," the first of January.

The first ones to go through the oration grinder next term are Floy Freeman and Hazel Roberts Jan. 14, 1902.

Tests were held in algebra, geometry and physic Monday forenoon and in literature and German in the afternoon.

"Miss Hall's room is noted for its pretty girls, Miss Welchli's for order without mishap, Miss Hartbeck's and Miss Thomas' for carved desks, while Prof. Kellogg's is famous for its strap."

Matches are said to be made in heaven and Miss Thomas' room seems to have a plentiful supply of both kinds, the latest case is where one was found in rather a common place, that was under the feet of a certain young man of that room.

Miss McKenna should be given great credit for the musical ability she develops in the ninth grade pupils. One sitting in Miss Hartbeck's room may hear over their head a continual thump in 6-8 time. No doubt the pupils are practicing some difficult selection.

The tallest boy in the high school is Sam Camburn who measures 6 feet 3 inches, while the shortest is Bertram Wood who measures 3 feet 11½ inches. Among the girls Florence Preston is the tallest, measurement 5 feet 10½ inches, with Mabel Goff the shortest who measures 4 feet 2 inches.

Prof. Osborne, of Olivet college, will give a demonstration in wireless telegraphy Monday evening, Jun. 6, 1902, at the Universalist church. Prof. Osborne has a complete apparatus for conducting this demonstration and will make it prove of interest to all. Tickets may be purchased of high school pupils. Admission 10 cents.

The gymnasium had better take Edward Marks in hand. It seems that his strength is lacking in his arms. The fact was brought before our notice when a young lady had to assist him in placing his hat upon his head. Edward, we know 'tis an honor to have a young lady wait upon you, but 'tis sad to see such a good boy gone wrong.

The age of the desks in Miss Thomas' room can only be guessed at, but if certain marks, which appear upon them can be relied upon, they must indeed be very old. After much work translating, some of the inscriptions which appear upon them are Doc. North, Pad Orr, Dan Williamson, Tubber McClure, and Floyd Elliott. These no doubt are the names of past occupants.

Marconi has accomplished great results with his wireless telegraphy, but one young man in Miss Hartbeck's room having a nature peculiar to himself, has discovered that many improvements may be added for the use of wireless telegraphy in school, just watch the manner in which he uses his eyes and all will be explained, or watch the girls Coller him.

A serious case has been reported to us it seems that one young man is in the habit of holding down the school house corner, also a very narrow piece of walk in front of a certain young lady's home; it has become so serious that it is feared the young man may contemplate leaseing the above places. We appreciate his feelings but at the same time he should have a little feeling for ours.

The pupils of Miss Richardson's room in the west branch, Miss Gilkey's room in the north branch, and Misses Norris and Lamb's rooms in the east branch held their Christmas exercises this afternoon at their schools. Christmas trees in each room was greatly enjoyed by the pupils. Miss Corey of the west branch held her exercises this morning, they also had a Christmas tree.

"Christmas comes, let's hurry it along,
For it brings one consolation;
Our studies done, perpare for the fun,
In spending our two weeks' vacation."

COUNCIL PROCEEDINGS.

Council Chamber, Village of Tecumseh.

Regular meeting held December 2, 1901. Present, President Elliott, Clerk Bowen and Trustees Belding, Shepard, Smith and Avery. Absent, Trustees Hunt and Hayden. Minutes of previous meetings read and approved.

Street commissioner's report for November submitted, showing fire team, labor 21 days 4 hours. Hand labor, 18 days 8 hours $23.50, Gravel sold $14. Also work done from Nov. 8 to Dec. 2: fire team, 19 days 4 hours; Wm. Cassel, 15 days 8 hours.

A request for damages alleged to have been sustained on a sidewalk on Maumee street, by Miss Winifred Perrin, was referred to the village attorney for investigation.

J. F. Hicks appeared before the council and asked that petition presented by him one year ago, asking that an arc lamp be placed on Union street near Shawnee, be reconsidered and the request granted. Referred to the street committee.

Dr. W. H. Maddox made an extended report on the meeting of the State Board of Health at Ann Arbor.

Moved and supported that the village assume the entire expense of constructing cement sidewalk along the St. Peter's church property. Carried.

President Elliott called Trustee Avery to the chair and took up the discussion of electric light service, offering the following resolution, "Resolved, That unless the Tecumseh Electric Company lives strictly to the terms of its contract with this village, as regards public lighting and improves its street service, the Common Council will claim a breach of contract and refuse payment for service until the service is made satisfactory." This resolution was unanimously adopted.

Council then adjourned.

AN AGED VETERAN

When the Annual Reunion of the G. A. R. is held, Michigan is always well represented. Around the camp fires of the encampment our boys will tell of the hardships they have gone through and the listener who knows nothing of war will wonder how they lived to tell the tale. Few men who followed old glory and escaped the shot and shell returned home without some legacy as a constant reminder of their war days. Our representative found veteran O. P. Newcomb of Detroit at his place of residence, No. 237 Second street. Mr Newcomb told him how the little conqueror had rendered him invaluable service. We give his account here and some words of advice tersely told. He said: "A lake covering about two acres in extent, containing the dead bodies of 20 mules is not tempting water to drink, but I was one of many who drank it, and all of us would have done so if we had known there was death in every swallow. This illustrates but one of the many hardships and privations passed throug during the Civil war, and it is no wonder that G. A. R. men suffer from aches and pains, the most prevalent of these being due to kidney disorders. I am pleased to note that a great many others who passed through as trying ordeals as I, have now learned how these troubles can be mitigated. When I say Doan's Kidney Pills will cure them I not only speak from experience but from observation. To all old soldiers or anyone suffering from kidney complaint my advice is to try that remedy."

LURED BY SCENT.

Rats Caught in Numbers by an Ingenious Means.

Rats are very susceptible to the odor of certain drugs, and any ordinary trap set in their haunts is likely to be successful if dressed with these scents, the attraction of which, rat catchers affirm, they cannot resist. An example is Powdered assafetida, eight grains; oil of rhodium, two drams; oil of aniseed one dram; oil of lavender, one-half dram. Shake together in a bottle and use a very small quantity to dress the bait.

To catch rats, cover a common barrel with stiff, stout paper, tying the edge round the barrel. Place a board so that the rats may have easy access to the top. Sprinkle cheese parings or other food for the rats on the paper for several days until they begin to think that they have a right to their daily rations from this source. Then place in the bottom of the barrel a piece of rock about six or seven inches high, filling with water until only enough of it projects above the water for one rat to lodge upon.

Now replace the paper, first cutting a cross in the middle, and the first rat that comes on the barrel top goes through into the water and climbs on the rock. The paper comes back to its original position, and the second rat follows the first. Then begins a fight for the possession of the dry place on the stone, the noise of which attracts the others, who share the same fate.—Baltimore American.

A schoolmaster was endeavoring to make clear to his young pupils' minds the meaning of the word "slowly." He walked across the room in the manner the word indicates.

"Now, children, tell me how I walked."

One little fellow who sat near the front of the room almost paralyzed him by blurting out. "Bowlegged!"

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address,

There has never come to any other medicine so great an abundance of Tecumseh testimony as that showing the unequaled merits of Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Pills. There is probably no cause of nervous sick headaches they will not cure.

Mrs. J. F. Burtch, of Tecumseh, Mich., says: "I was troubled with severe nervousness and nervous headaches. I got a box of Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Pills at Chas. A. Wright's drug store and now after using two boxes I can say my nerves are steadied and my head does not trouble me. I think the pills a splendid medicine."

A HEARTY LAUGH.

The Wonderful Effects It Has Upon the Human System.

"Laugh and grow fat" is a saying as old as the hills. It has long been an accepted fact that humor is a promoter of digestion and merry words the deadliest foes of disease. Dr. J. E. Kennedy, editor of the Iowa Health Bulletin, writes an interesting article on the value of laughter, in which he shows it is not only a remedial agent, but is also a valuable preventive against a host of diseases. The physical effects of laughter are thus put down by Dr. Kennedy:

Laughter increases the blood circulation.

It enlarges the heart.

It expands the lungs.

It jiggers the diaphragm.

It promotes the dioculation of the spleen.

In other words, laughter stirs up the vital regions of the body, gives them healthful exercise and produces a mental exhilaration which acts upon the system much as a brisk walk in a crisp atmosphere does upon the appetite. As strong allies to laughter Dr. Kennedy gives the following directions for mental peace of mind:

Beware of theologians who have no sense of mirth. They are not altogether human.

Keep your chin up.

Don't take your troubles to bed with you. Hang them on a chair with your trousers or drop them in a glass of water with your teeth.

Dr. Kennedy has surely hit the nail on the head. If his prescription and advice are followed, his own bills will be decidedly cut down.—Burlington Hawkeye.

"Dr. Miles' Nervine cured me of Neuralgia in the head and nervous prostration that had lasted 14 years. I was blind in both eyes for three months, and lost my right eye, but never had an attack after I commenced its use."

More Pardons Recommended.

Jackson, Mich., Dec. 19.—The advisory board of pardons finished its session at the prison yesterday. William Kramer of Grand Rapids, sentenced for 10 years for criminal assault in October, 1898, was recommended for pardon on the request of the prosecutor and most of the jurors in the case. James Kelley, a boy, sentenced from Cass county for three years for breaking into and entering a railroad car, was recommended for parole. The case of Robert S. Smith of Kawkawlin, Bay county, who was sentenced for life for murder, has been given much consideration by the board and, while not yet decided, his liberty may be given him before long. He has been in prison since May 12, 1891. The application of James Lee of Jackson county was denied. Lee is up for pilfering money from nickel-in-the-slot machines, but has a bad record of drunkenness against him. The board meets next at Lansing.

Has Saved $100,000.

Lansing, Mich., Dec. 19.—Secretary of State Warner believes that he has saved the Michigan stockholders of the Michigan Savings & Loan association of Detroit about $100,000 by a discovery which he made while in Texas examining into the assets of the concern located there. If he had done as originally intended, and secured the appointment of a receiver in Texas, where most of the assets are located, the receipts would have been divided among the Texas stockholders entirely. He took the matter to the United States courts and succeeded in saving the proceeds for the Michigan stockholders.

Too Much Laudanum.

Parker, 25, both of this place, were instantly killed last evening by a terrific explosion of nitro-glycerine which completely wrecked the nitro-glycerine factory of B. Humes, about a half mile from here. Not a shred of the two unfortunates could be found, and the site of the magazine was marked by a hole 20 feet deep and 40 feet in diameter.

COLDS

We Have Many Friends Here in Town Who Are Subject to Such Trouble.

Colds if neglected lead to serious and often fatal consequences.

Do not go on living with the continual dread of catching cold. There is no need of it. People who take cold easily do so because their system is in just the condition to contract them.

We know of something that will quickly drive colds out of the system by invigorating the entire body. It is VINOL, the great tonic reconstructor, that contains all the active curative principles found in cod liver oil.

Here is one letter that we nave had presented to us that we would like our friends to read:

"I have been suffering from a severe cold for a number of weeks, and having heard so much about VINOL as being a cure for such troubles, I decided to try it. Two bottles entirely cured me and I now feel in better health than ever before in my life. J. M. BROWN, 319 W. Mahanoy St., Mahanoy City, Penn."

Remember that if you do not find that VINOL is all that we claim for it we are always glad to refund to our customers the money that they pay us for it, which emphatically endorses Vinol.

THEY CRUSH THE POWERS

This is written in mid-October. The long, oppressive summer is quite gone. Fading leaf, withering tree and the rustling corn in the fields are signs of the season. Fog, frost, rain, snow,—they are coming. You remember last winter; of 1900 and 1901. The weather was cruel. Ah! the thousands it killed, and the hundreds of thousands it maimed and crippled. Oh, the rough grasp it laid on men at work, women at home, and children in cribs and cradles. Coughs that began before Thanksgiving Day are racking and tearing them still; yes, and growing worse as they dig deeper into the poor, tired throat and lungs. Many were cured by using Benson's Porous Plasters. For the soothing and healing power of these Plasters is wonderful. They conquer the complaints

THAT ARE KILLING THE PEOPLE.

No other plaster, no other medicine or application, can compare with them. Coughs, colds, backache, rheumatism, lumbago, kidney and liver troubles, asthma, influenza,—they all go down before Benson's Plasters like a snow image in the sun. You can't throw money away on a Benson's Plaster. Everybody is going to use them this season. But make certain you get the genuine. All druggists, or we will prepay postage on any number ordered in the United States on receipt of 25c. each.

HEAD NOISES CEASE IMMEDIATELY.

F. A. WERMAN, OF BALTIMORE, SAYS:

BALTIMORE, Md., March 30, 1901.

Gentlemen:—Being entirely cured of deafness, thanks to your treatment, I will now give you a full history of my case, to be used at your discretion.

About five years ago my right ear began to sing, and this kept on getting worse, until I lost my hearing in this ear entirely.

I underwent a treatment for catarrh, for three months, without any success, consulted a number of physicians, among others, the most eminent ear specialist of this city, who told me that only an operation could help me, and even that only temporarily, that the head noises would then cease, but the hearing in the affected ear would be lost forever.

I then saw your advertisement accidentally in a New York paper, and ordered your treatment. After I had used it only a few days according to your directions, the noises ceased, and to-day, after five weeks, my hearing in the diseased ear has been entirely restored. I thank you heartily and beg to remain Very truly yours,

F. A. WERMAN, 730 S. Broadway, Baltimore, Md.

IN THE CABINET

Geo. Shaw of Iowa Accepts Treasury Portfolio.

SECRETARY GAGE RETIRES

Shaw's Term of Governor Expires on Jan. 16—Secretary Gage Agrees to Continue at His Post Until Convenient for His Successor to Take Hold.

Washington, Dec. 26.—It was announced last evening that Gov. Leslie M. Shaw of Iowa would be appointed secretary of the treasury to succeed Lyman J. Gage. There will be no change in the office of secretary of agriculture, Secretary Wilson, also of Iowa, continuing to retain that portfolio.

The date of transfer of the treasury department will depend on the mutual convenience of the outgoing and incoming secretary, Mr. Gage having signified an entire willingness to remain at the head of his department until such time as it may be agreeable to his successor to take hold. It is supposed, however, that Gov. Shaw will be inducted into his new office some time in January. It has been known for two or three days that Gov. Shaw was slated for appointment to succeed Secretary Gage, but it was not until yesterday that the Iowa executive accepted the tender made to him.

Des Moines, Ia., Dec. 26.—Gov. Shaw was seen again last evening with regard to his appointment as secretary of the United States treasury. He declined to talk at length about the matter, merely reiterating that the president had confidentially asked him by wire if he would accept the position if it should be tendered to him. He replied that he would accept, but up to the present time no formal tender of the position has been made by the president. However, from the tone of the dispatches from Washington, he assumed the president will appoint him and that, to all intents and purposes the matter has been fully settled. The governor's term as chief executive of Iowa will not expire until Jan. 16, when Gov.-elect Cummins will be inaugurated. The legislature will convene Jan. 13, and Gov. Shaw will be very busy in the interim with the preparation of his annual message, so that if the appointment by the president shall be made Gov. Shaw will hardly be able to take up the duties before Jan. 20, and possibly later. With Allison as senate leader, Henderson as speaker of the house and with the prospect now of two members of the cabinet, the state is undoubtedly greatly honored and largely influential in national affairs.

A PROTOCOL IS SIGNED.

Chile and Argentine Come to an Understanding.

Santiago de Chile, Dec. 26 (via Galveston).—Senhor Portela, Argentine minister to Chile, has postponed his departure, and it is announced that a protocol will be signed establishing a modus vivendi between the two countries. The general opinion is that the questions at issue will be solved son, to the great satisfaction of the whole country.

Buenos Ayres, Dec. 26—(via Galveston).—The new protocol between Chile and Argentine has been signed. The newspapers saw the protocol dispels the immediate danger of war, but that the remedy is not permanent. The armies of the two countries are meantime continuing their warlike preparations. Chile has decided upon the erection of new fortifications at Talcahuano and Punta Arenas.

At a secret session of the Chilean thority for the expenditure of $15,000,000 in preparations for defense. The sitting was an exciting one. It was finally decided to authorize the floating loan for the purpose.

According to the Diario and the Commercio, Argentina, for her part, in view of the new naval acquisition by Chile, has decided upon the construction in Italy of two warships of 5,600 tons, to be ready by the end of 1902

Building Operations Suspended.

Guthrie, Ok., Dec. 26.—Acting on an order received from the secretary of the interior, government officials have stopped all building and improvement operations at McAlester, I. T., until a schedule of values of all property shall have been prepared by the town site committee. A former survey schedule was found to be false and the secretary of the interior has interfered.

Tossed Coins to the Poor.

Berlin, Dec. 26.—Emperor William, while walking in the environs of Potsdam, tossed several three and four mark pieces to poor-looking persons whom he passed. The emperor's Christmas bounty is never limited, but this year he has doubled his usual subscriptions to charitable funds.

Queen Gives Many Toys.

London, Dec. 26.—The queen sent an enormous quantity of toys, with autograph cards, to the children's hospitals in London, and the royal family made generous gifts to other hospitals yesterday. King Edward sent contributions to the dinners of all the regiments of the household troops.

Troubles Bring Suicide.

Cleveland, Dec. 26.—John Vancata, 41 years old, upon finishing his Christmas dinner yesterday, went into an adjoining room and killed himself with a bullet in the head. Brooding over the recent incarceration of a son in an insane asylum is believed to have made the father insane.

Saw Death Near.

"It made my heart ache," writes L. C. Overstreet, of Elgin, Tenn., "to hear my wife congh until it seemed her weak and sore lungs would collapse. Good doctors said she was so far gone with Consumption that no medicine or earthly help could save her, but a friend recommended Dr. King's New Discovery and persistent use of this excellent medicine saved her life." It's absolutely guaranteed for Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, Asthma and all Throat and Lung diseases 50c and $1.00 at C. A Wright's. Trial bottles free.

XMAS WEDDING BELLS.

Many Couples Start Domestic Life on Sacred Anniversary.

Escanaba, Mich., Dec. 26.—Quincy McBride of St. Clair and Miss Adella Lindquist were married at 5:30 Christmas afternoon. The groom is a well-known traveling salesman and the bride is the daughter of Capt. A. V. Lindquist. After Jan. 10 Mr. and Mrs. McBride will be at home in St. Clair, Mich.

Saginaw, Mich., Dec. 26.—Florence Ripley Hadley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph F. Hadley, and William F. Noble of Detroit, were married at the home of the bride's parents on Weadock avenue yesterday afternoon. The 75 guests were mostly relatives, several of them from Detroit, and among the latter being Mr. and Mrs. George Noble, father and mother, and J. H. Clouse, grandfather of the groom. After a 10 days' tour in the east, Mr. and Mrs. Noble will be at home at 29 Blaine avenue, Detroit.

Durand, Mich., Dec. 26.—The wedding of Miss Julia Cronk of Hazelton to A. E. Sherman, principal of the local public schools, took place here Christmas. Mr. Sherman is a graduate of the State Normal school and was a prominent athlete there.

Potterville, Mich., Dec. 26.—Le Grande Morell, principal of schools at Au Sable, was married to Miss Edith Barnes, daughter of Charles Barnes, foreman of the Grand Trunk steel gang, at high noon yesterday in this village.

Earl Cook and Miss Grace Merritt, daughter of Postmaster N. O. Merritt, were married here on Christmas.

LAD PERISHES IN FLAMES.

Sad Christmas Eve Accident at Royal Oak.

Royal Oak, Mich., Dec. 26.—Part of the family of George Geddis, who live on a farm three miles northeast of this village, went to Detroit Tuesday night to make purchases of Christmas gifts. Wilson and Albert, grown sons, stayed at home and retired before their parents returned.

They were awakened by the crackling of flames, and made frantic efforts to escape from the burning building. One of the boys succeeded in getting out, but the other was overcome by smoke and heat and fell before reaching a window.

The loss on the house and contents will reach $3,000.

Pardoned on Christmas.

Saginaw, Mich., Dec. 26.—Christmas week there went from this city—from the home of Gov. Bliss—two pardons that carried a ray of Christmas cheer into the gloomy atmosphere of the state prison at Jackson. Two men of the hundreds immured there yesterday bid farewell to penitentiary life, presumably forever. The wrong done John Ellis, farmer, of Isabella county, in 1894, is one of the wrongs righted. He is the man who was sentenced for 12 years on the story of a young woman, daughter of an itinerant preacher, who told a tale of assault—one of the most distressing stories in the criminal annals of the state. The other recipient is Francisco St. Angelo. He shot and killed Marina Anteka at an Italian dance on Rivard street, Detroit, in 1896, and was sentenced for 15 years. The prosecuting attorney and ex-Sheriff Chipman recommended him to clemency.

Stepped in Front of a Train.

Port Huron, Mich., Dec. 26.—John McIntosh, a fireman on the Pere Marquette railroad, lies at the point of death at the hospital as the result of an accident yesterday noon. He was waiting for his train to pull out on the Sand Beach division and stepped from his engine to cross the track. The escaping steam hid an approaching engine from sight and he was run down. The pilot of the engine threw him for some distance and he sustained internal injuries. He resides on Tenth street and has a family.

Crushed Between Cars.

Monroe, Mich., Dec. 26.—Henry Grover, a motorman on the Toledo & Monroe railway, met with a fatal accident near Alexis, while he was making a coupling between a relief car and his own, the latter giving out at that point. Grover was caught between the drawheads. His right leg was broken and left one badly smashed. Grover was taken to Toledo hospital, where Dr. McVeagh amputated his left leg just above the knee.

Ferry May Be Saved.

Ludington, Mich., Dec. 26.—The situation of the stranded Pere Marquette car ferry Muskegon remains unchanged. Tuesday night the wreckers had the boat pumped almost dry when the sea rose, necessitating the suspension of operations. A high northwest wind at this time would probably seal the fate of the boat. On the other hand, the prospects of a release are good with even ten hours of perfectly still weather. The boat has not yet been turned over to the insurance companies.

Hotel Girl's Romance.

Niles, Mich., Dec. 26.—George L. Sassady, son of G. Burr Cassady, a South Bend millionaire, eloped from that city to Niles Saturday with Miss Carrie Horein, a chambermaid in a hotel in that place, and the pair were married here. Young Cassady is said to be but 18 years old and the determination of his parents to have the marriage annulled, if possible, caused the story to become known.

A Sad Christmas.

Bay City, Mich., Dec. 26.—Just as the bells were ringing in the Christmas morning, two children of Mr. and Mrs. Freeman Webb died from scarlet fever. Helen, aged 6, was the first to succumbs, and her brother, a little over a year younger, died five minutes later.

Deadly Coal Gas.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Dec. 26.—Mrs. Mary Gore, aged 55 years, was found unconscious in her home, where she lived alone, last night, from the effects of coal gas from her stove. She was taken to a hospital, and it is feared she will not recover.

Devoid of Science.

Cincinnati, Dec. 26.—Larry Temple of New York knocked out Eddie Kennedy of Pittsburg in the fourth round before the Abbey Athletic club here Christmas afternoon. The contest was devoid of science, owing to the men trying continually for a knockout, and it developed into a slugging match in which Temple got the best of his opponent.

A $2,000 Christmas Dinner.

Roanoke, Va., Dec. 26.—The Order of Elks, following a custom originated here, gave a Christmas dinner at which 800 persons were fed and expended about $2,000 in Christmas charities.

MANY MURDERERS

THE FIRST AMERICAN COURT

Many Difficulties Are Encountered in Court Procedure Because of Different Languages—Wants United States to Be Slow in Annexation.

Lansing, Mich., Dec. 25.—Superintendent of Public Instruction Fall has received a letter from Prof. R. F. Johnson, formerly of Ann Arbor, now a federal judge in the Philippines, in which the former Michigan man speaks entertainingly of his present work as follows:

"I opened the first American court here July 1, 1901. I found 92 prisoners in jail when I arrived, many of whom had been waiting trial for months, and 44 of whom were charged with murder. Since that date I have tried, in my different provinces, 173 defendants; have sentenced three men to death, and have eight more whom I shall sentence to death tomorrow. There are still 179 men awaiting trial here in this province alone, a majority of whom are charged with no less crimes than murder or attempted murder. I tried one man who confessed that he had killed 13 persons, that the last one was a child and that he held the child in the fire until its feet were burned off.

"To show some of the difficulties under which an American holds court here I desire to tell you that, in one case, where there were seven men charged with murder, it was necessary to have the complaint read in four different languages and then each had to be translated into English. In another case a man and his wife and two girls were arrested charged with highway robbery. The complaint was read in one language to the husband and in another language to the wife and children."

Judge Johnson concludes his letter as follows: "I do hope that the people of the United States, as well as congress, will make haste slowly in making any permanent compact with 'our little brown brothers' of the orient."

A PATHETIC STORY

Ends With a Suicide of the Principal.

Kalamazoo, Mich., Dec. 25.—Mrs. Alice Loomis Talladay, aged 22 years, employed as a domestic, committed suicide yesterday by taking opium. A few months ago it is said she was deceived by a young man whom she compelled to marry her. They soon parted, but his whereabouts are not known. She learned after their marriage that he already had a wife when he married her, and this is supposed to have been the cause for her suicide. Mrs. Talladay's home was near Bloomingdale.

SLEPT AT HIS POST.

Watchman for Calumet & Hecla Co. Burned to a Crisp.

Calumet, Mich., Dec. 25.—Sleeping at his post of duty cost Ned Chartz his life last night. Chartz was watchman for the Calumet & Hecla Co. He was found in the fourteenth level near No. 14 shaft, burned to a crisp. His oily clothes caught fire while he was sleeping, and before he awakened he was enveloped in flames. The smoke in the shaft created the impression that the entire mine was on fire, and the miners were hustled to the surface quickly.

$200,000 Lumber Deal.

Marquette, Mich., Dec. 25.—One of the largest timber deals in the history of the upper peninsula has just been closed here. Standing pine, aggregating over 30,000,000 feet, representing the remaining timber holdings of the Michigan Land & Iron Co.—Lord Brassey's corporation—has changed hands. Kibby & White, lumbermen of Albany, N. Y., are the purchasers, at a price close to $200,000. Logging operations will be started in the spring with the intention of cutting the pine, which is located on the banks of Dead river and tributaries within the next two years. The pine will be sawed here.

BUTTERFIELD OUT OF IT.

And Collingwood Will Go In as M. A. C. Postmaster.

Lansing, Mich., Dec. 25.—I. H. Butterfield, postmaster at the college, has received word from Congressman Smith that he had decided to recommend C. B. Collingwood for appointment. Mr. Collingwood had evidently been advised of the congressman's intention beforehand, for he had rented a house and was preparing to move his family to the college. It is understood that the college postoffice pays about $1,500 annually. Mr. Collingwood will probably employ an assistant and continue to look after his law business in this city.

I. H. Butterfield, who was indorsed for reappointment by nearly every patron of the college postoffice, did not receive the information from Congressman Smith with much satisfaction. He objects strongly to the congressman paying his political debts by appointing a non-resident to the postoffice, but as this has been done at several places in the district it is not likely that the congressman will reconsider his intentions.

ALGER HOLDS HIS OWN.

Suffered a Vomiting Attack Yesterday Afternoon.

Detroit, Mich., Dec. 25.—At 10 o'clock last night, Dr. Jennings gave out the following statement as to Gen. Alger's condition:

"The general has had a fair day. His stomach was disturbed at 2 p. m., after which there was a slight increase of fever. His other conditions continue satisfactory. His temperature is now 100 2-5, pulse 80. The patient has been sleeping all the evening and is very comfortable. The rise in temperature was probably the result of septic absorption. He is now well into his third day and the outlook is hopeful, though we can't say anything yet as to the outcome. He will have one more critical day and no stomach nourishment will be permitted for 24 hours at least. If he passes through Wednesday with no more alarming symptoms than he has now we shall feel very much encouraged.

Robber Caught in Michigan.

Rochester, N. Y., Dec. 25.—Chief Cleary received a dispatch yesterday from Sheriff Little of Frankfort, Benzie county, Michigan, saying that a man named Frank McMahon, alias McNamara, had been arrested there. He is charged with being the third and the last of a gang of robbers who entered the house of Mrs. Louisa French in this city last October, horribly beat Mrs. French and her sister, Mrs. Alicia Gardner, and robbed them of diamonds valued at $3,000.

Increase in Soo Traffic.

Saut Ste. Marie, Mich., Dec. 25.—A statistical report of the lake traffic through the Soo canals for 1901 has been made public. The report shows a total of 23,403,065 net tons of freight passing through the canals, of which less than 3,000,000 is credited to the Canadian lock. This is an excess of 2,759,992 tons freight shown over last season. Eighteen million, ninety thousand, six hundred and eighteen tons of iron ore passed through the canals from Lake Superior.

Died From Neglect.

Lansing, Mich., Dec. 25.—Mrs. Martha Madison died late Monday night in a hovel in the west end of the city, as the result of neglect and want following recent childbirth. The police are puzzled by the failure to locate the whereabouts of the child, and it is supposed that the unfortunate infant was made way with several days ago. The woman, who was a widow with two children, came here from Findlay, O., some months ago.

Found Her Fiance Dead.

Port Huron, Mich., Dec. 25.—While his sweetheart was speeding to this city to be married today, George Grigg, her fiance, passed away yesterday. She arrived a few minutes after his death. Grigg was proprietor of a pool room, and had been ill with pneumonia. He suffered a relapse and died yesterday morning. He took part in the Cuban war as a member of Co. M, 33d Michigan vounteers, and will be buried by his comrades.

Too Much Law.

Owosso, Mich., Dec. 25.—The case of May Rose Ada Derham against her former father-in-law, William Derham, for the alienation of her husband's affections, has again bobbed up. Judge Smith made an order that, before Jan. 4 William pay May $50 on a judgment of $100 or be arrested for contempt of court. Suits and counter-suits have been dragging through the circuit court until they have cost thousands of dollars, and practically all the property the senior Derham had.

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., Dec. 25.—During an altercation on the street last night between Lindsey Morrison and Reginald Barr, Morrison was knocked down. He never regained consciousness and died within a few minutes. Morrison leaves a widow and large family of children in poor circumstances. Barr was placed in jail.

FIERCE RACE FIGHT

Negroes and Whites of Harlem Fight in Streets.

THE WHITES BEGAN IT

Number of White Boys Stone Two Colored Girls and Negroes Chastised Them—Whites Get Up a Gang and Make a Formal Attack.

New York, Dec. 26.—A race skirmish between whites and blacks in Harlem yesterday developed serious proportions and kept the police busy for a time. The negroes, 100 strong, were armed with revolvers and clubs, while equally as many whites used stones as weapons. The negroes had the advantage, but were driven back into their tenements by the police after they had charged on the whites with pistols and razors. Fourteen negroes were arrested. Four whites, including a policeman, were badly shot or cut.

The rioting began when some white boys stoned two colored girls, whereupon a dozen negroes seized the white boys and beat them. The boys when released, told their story to white-men in the vicinity, and an organized attack was made on the negroes, who were driven back to their tenements under a shower of stones. The confusion increased when the white men began to bombard the tenements with stones and other missiles, and the negroes fired from their windows into the crowd. The whites, surprised by the shooting, and seeing men fall wounded, turned and ran followed by the negroes, who used knives and clubs freely. At this point a squad of policemen arrived on the scene and with drawn clubs stopped the rioting, chasing the negroes into their houses.

Important Clue to Forgeries.

Kansas City, Dec. 26.—A fraudulent stamp, similar to that used at the Union depot ticket office for the purpose of validating the return of portions of railway tickets, has been voluntarily surrendered to George H. Foote, secretary of the Kansas City Passenger association. The stamp was given to Mr. Foote by a local attorney, who said it was turned over to him by a client in this city. This unknown man begged that with its surrender the investigation of recent wholesale frauds in railway tickets, started by H. C. Townsend of St. Louis, general passenger agent of the Missouri Pacific railway, and Mr. Foote be dropped. The name of the owner of the stamp was not made public. Mr. Foote says the investigation will be continued and intimates that arrests will follow.

Xmas Wedding at Niles.

Niles, Mich., Dec. 26.—A notable nuptial event took place here yesterday when Miss Edyth A. Gage, a local society young lady, became the bride of Dr. Paul Van Riper, a former resident of this place, who is now in charge of the Champion Iron Co.'s hospital at Champion, this state. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. G. Lowrie, pastor of the Presbyterian church. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Azra Gage. The groom is a graduate of the University of Michigan. Dr. and Mrs. Van Riper will reside at Champion.

American Xmas in Paris.

Paris, Dec. 26.—American children in Paris were benefitted by the kindliness of Mr. and Mrs. Michael De Young of San Francisco, who gave a fete yesterday afternoon in their aptrtments at the Continental hotel. An immense Christmas tree laden with glittering toys had been erected in one of the rooms. United States Ambassador Porter and Mrs. Porter, and Consul General Gowdy and Mrs. Gowdy were present at the distribution of gifts and a constant stream of children left the hotel carrying armfuls of toys which Mr. and Mrs. De Young had brought specially from America.

Eight Lives Believed Lost.

Gloucester, Mass., Dec. 26.—Eight men are believed to have lost their lives in the probable foundering of the schooner Eliza H. Parkhurst of this port, which was posted today by its owners as missing. The Parkhurst, commanded by Capt. John D. McKinnon, sailed from the Bay of Islands, Newfoundland, Nov. 24, for this port with a crew of six men and one passenger, Lawrence McDonald, of this city. The boat carried a cargo of herring. A gale sprang up Nov. 25, and in it the Parkhurst is believed to have foundered.

Make Schley a Senator.

Baltimore, Dec. 26.—It was reported in republican circles that the leaders are considering the advisability of nominating Rear Admiral Schley for United States senator from Maryland in case the democrats put up Arthur P. Gorman. When the democratic managers were apprised of this report they ridiculed the idea, saying that Schley was ineligible because he was not an inhabitant of the state, as is required by the constitution of the United States.

Marconi Returns Home Soon.

St. Johns, N. F., Dec. 25.—Mr. Marconi left here for Ottawa yesterday afternoon. He expects to stay there but a short time and hopes to reach England by Jan. 10, passing first through New York. The inventor is gratified over the outcome of his controversy with the Anglo-American Telegraph Co., as is evidenced by a letter from the Anglo-American company printed today in the London Times. One of Marconi's assistants has accompanied the inventor to Ottawa. Marconi's other assistants have returned to England, taking part of the wireless apparatus with them.

THE COURIER OF THE CZAR

By Jules Verne

Neither Michael Strogoff nor the young Livonian girl had any baggage. The rapidity with which one wished to make the journey and the more than modest resources of the other prevented them from embarrassing themselves with packages. It was a fortunate thing under the circumstances, for the tarantass could not have carried both baggage and travelers. It was only made for two persons, without counting the driver, who kept his equilibrium on his narrow seat in a marvelous manner.

The driver is changed at every relay. The man who drove the tarantass during the first stage was, like his horses, a Siberian and no less shaggy than they—long hair, cut square on the forehead, hat with turned up rim, red belt, coat with crossed facings and buttons stamped with the imperial cipher. The driver on coming up with his team threw an inquisitive glance at the passengers of the tarantass. No luggage? And had there been, where in the world could he have stowed it? Rather shabby in appearance too. He looked contemptuous.

"Crows," said he, without caring whether he was overheard or not; "crows at 6 copecks a verst!"

"No; eagles," said Michael, who understood the slang perfectly; "eagles, do you hear, at 9 copecks a verst and a tip besides."

He was answered by a merry crack of the whip.

In the language of the Russian postilions the "crow" is the stingy or poor traveler who at the posthouses only pays 2 or 3 copecks a verst for the horses. The "eagle" is the traveler who does not mind expense, to say nothing of liberal tips. Therefore the crow could not claim to fly as rapidly as the imperial bird.

Nadia and Michael immediately took their places in the tarantass. A small store of provisions was put in the box, in case at any time they were delayed in reaching the posthouses, which are very comfortably provided under direction of the state. The hood was pulled up, as it was insupportably hot, and at 12 o'clock the tarantass, drawn by its three horses, left Perm in a cloud of dust.

CHAPTER VI.

On the afternoon of the 23d of July Michael Strogoff and Nadia were not more than thirty versts from Ichim. Suddenly Michael caught sight of a carriage, scarcely visible among the clouds of dust, preceding them along the road. As his horses were evidently less fatigued than those of the other traveler, he would not be long in overtaking it. This was neither a tarantass nor a telga, but a post berlin, all over dust and looking as if it had made a long journey. The postilion was thrashing his horses with all his might and only kept them at a gallop by dint of abuse and blows. The berlin had certainly not passed through Novo-Saimsk and could only have struck the Irkutsk road by some less frequented route across the steppe.

Michael's first thought on seeing this berlin was to get in front of it and arrive first at the relay, so as to make sure of fresh horses. He said a word to his driver, who soon brought him up with the berlin.

As he passed a head was thrust out of the window of the berlin.

He had no time to see what it was like, but as he dashed by he distinctly heard this word uttered in an imperious tone:

"Stop!"

But he did not stop. On the contrary, the berlin was soon distanced by the tarantass.

It now became a regular race, for the horses of the berlin, no doubt excited by the sight and pace of the others, recovered their strength and kept up for some minutes. The two carriages were hidden in a cloud of dust. From this cloud issued the cracking of whips, mingled with excited shouts and exclamations of anger.

Nevertheless the advantage remained with Michael, which might be very important to him if the relay were poorly provided with horses. Two carriages were perhaps more than the postmaster could provide for, at least in a short space of time.

Half an hour after the berlin was left far behind, looking only a speck on the horizon on the steppe.

It was 8 o'clock in the evening when Michael and his companion arrived at the posthouse in Ichim.

The news was worse and worse with regard to the invasion.

Here had arrived just a short time before two men.

The one was English, the other French. Both were tall and thin, but the latter was sallow, as are the southern provencals, while the former was ruddy like a Lancashire gentleman. The Anglo-Norman, formal, cold, grave, parsimonious of gestures and words, appearing only to speak or gesticulate under the influence of a spring operating at regular intervals. The Gaul, on the contrary, was lively and petulant, expressed himself with lips, eyes, hands, all at once, having twenty different ways of explaining his thoughts, whereas his interlocutor seemed to have only one immutably stereotyped on his brain.

The strong contrast they presented would at once have struck the most superficial observer, but a physiognomist, regarding them more closely, would have defined their particular characteristics by saying that if the Frenchman was "all eyes," the Englishman was "all ears."

In fact, the visual apparatus of the one had been singularly perfected by practice. The sensibility of its retina must have been as instantaneous as that of those conjurers who recognize a card merely by a rapid movement in cutting the pack or by the arrangement only of marks invisible to others. The Frenchman, indeed, possessed in the highest degree what may be called "the memory of the eye."

The Englishman, on the contrary, appeared especially organized to listen and to hear. When his aural apparatus had been once struck by the sound of a voice, he could not forget it, and after ten or even twenty years he would have recognized it among a thousand. His ears, to be sure, had not the power of moving as freely as those of animals who are provided with large auditory flaps; but, since scientific men know that human ears possess, in fact, a very limited power of movement, we should not be far wrong in affirming that those of the said Englishman became erect and turned in all directions while endeavoring to gather in the sounds in a manner apparent only to the naturalist. It must be observed that this perfection of sight and hearing was of wonderful assistance to these two men in their vocation, for the Englishman acted as correspondent for The Daily Telegraph and the Frenchman as correspondent of the—of what newspaper or of what newspapers he did not say, and when asked he replied in a jocular manner that he corresponded with "his cousin Madeleine." This Frenchman, however, beneath his careless surface was wonderfully shrewd and sagacious. Even while speaking at random, perhaps the better to hide his desire to learn, he never forgot himself. His loquacity even helped him to conceal his thoughts, and he was perhaps even more discreet than his confrere of The Daily Telegraph.

It is needless to say that these two men were devoted to their mission in the world—that they delighted to throw themselves in the track of the most unexpected intelligence; that nothing terrified or discouraged them from succeeding; that they possessed the imperturbable sang froid and the genuine intrepidity of men of their calling. Enthusiastic jockeys in this steeplechase, this hunt after information, they leaped hedges, crossed rivers, sprang over fences with the ardor of pure blooded racers who will run "a good first" or die.

Their journals did not restrict them with regard to money, the surest, the most rapid, the most perfect element of information known to this day. It must also be added, to their honor, that neither the one nor the other ever looked or listened at the walls of private life and that they only exercised their vocation when political or social interests were at stake. In a word, they made what has been for some years called "the great political and military reports."

It will be seen in following them that they had generally an independent mode of viewing events and, above all, their consequences, each having his own way of observing and appreciating. The object to be obtained being of adequate value, they never failed to expend the money required.

The French correspondent was named Alcide Jolivet. Harry Blount was the name of the Englishman. The dissimilarity of their characters, added to a certain amount of jealousy, which generally exists between rivals in the same calling, might have rendered them but little sympathetic. However, they did not avoid one another, but endeavored rather to exchange with each other the news of the day. They were two sportsmen, after all, hunting on the same grounds, in the same preserve. That which one missed might be advantageously secured by the other, and it was to their interest to meet and converse together.

From these two correspondents Michael learned that the town itself was menaced by the Tartar vanguard, and two days before the authorities had been obliged to retreat to Tobolsk. There was not an officer nor a soldier left in Ichim.

On arriving at the relay Michael Strogoff immediately asked for horses.

He had been fortunate in distancing the berlin.

Only three horses were in a fit state to be immediately harnessed. The others had just come in worn out from a long stage.

The postmaster gave the order to put to.

As the two correspondents intended to stop at Ichim, they had not to trouble themselves to find means of transport and therefore had their carriage put away.

In ten minutes Michael was told that his tarantass was ready to start.

"Good," said he.

Then, turning to the two reporters, he said:

"Well, gentlemen, since you remain at Ichim, I wish you success in the prosecution of your mission."

"What, Mr. Korpanoff," said Alcide Jolivet, "shall you not stop even for an hour at Ichim?"

"No, sir, and I also wish to leave the posthouse before the arrival of a berlin which I distanced."

"Are you afraid that the traveler will dispute the horses with you?"

"I particularly wish to avoid any difficulty."

"It is possible that we shall meet you again in a few days at Omsk," added Blount.

"It is possible," answered Michael, "since I am going straight there."

"Well, I wish you a safe journey, Mr. Korpanoff," said Alcide.

Almost immediately the sound of a carriage was heard outside, the door was flung open and a man appeared.

It was the traveler of the berlin, a military looking man, apparently about forty years of age, tall, robust in figure, broad shouldered, with a strongly set head and thick mustache meeting red whiskers. He wore a plain uniform. A cavalry saber hung at his side, and in his hand he held a short handled whip.

"Horses," he demanded, with the air of a man accustomed to command.

"I have no more disposable horses," answered the postmaster, bowing.

"I must have some this moment."

"It is impossible."

"What are those horses which have just been harnessed to the tarantass I saw at the door?"

"They belong to this traveler," answered the postmaster, pointing to Michael Strogoff.

"Take them out!" said the traveler in a tone which admitted of no reply.

Michael then advanced.

"These horses are engaged by me," he said.

"What does that matter? I must have them. Come, be quick; I have no time to lose."

"I have no time to lose either," replied Michael, endeavoring to be calm, but restraining himself with difficulty.

Nadia was near him, calm also, but secretly uneasy at a scene which it would have been better to avoid.

"Enough!" said the traveler.

Then, going up to the postmaster:

"Let the horses be taken out of the tarantass and put into my berlin," he exclaimed, with a threatening gesture.

The postmaster, much embarrassed, did not know whom to obey and looked at Michael, who evidently had the right to resist the unjust demands of the traveler.

Michael hesitated an instant. He did not wish to make use of his podorojna, which would have drawn attention to him, and he was most unwilling either by giving up his horses to delay his journey, and yet it was important not to engage in a struggle which might compromise his mission.

The two reporters looked at him, ready to support him should he appeal to them.

"My horses will remain in my carriage," said Michael, but without raising his tone more than would be suitable for a plain Irkutsk merchant.

The traveler advanced toward Michael and laid his hand heavily on his shoulder.

"Is it so?" he said in a rough voice. "You will not give up your horses to me?"

"No," answered Michael.

"Very well, then they shall belong whichever of us is able to start. Defend yourself, for I shall not spare you!"

So saying the traveler drew his saber from its sheath, and Nadia threw herself before Michael.

Blount and Alcide Jolivet advanced toward him.

"I shall not fight," said Michael quietly, folding his arms across his chest.

"You will not fight?"

"No."

"Not even after this?" exclaimed the traveler, and before any one could prevent him he struck Michael's shoulder with the handle of the whip. At this insult Michael turned deadly pale. His hands moved convulsively, as if he would have knocked the brute down. But by a tremendous effort he mastered himself. A duel! It was more than a delay; it was perhaps the failure of his mission. It would be better to lose some hours. Yes, but to swallow this affront!

"Will you fight now, coward?" repeated the traveler, adding coarseness to brutality.

"No," answered Michael, without moving, but looking the other straight in the face.

"The horses this moment," said the man and left the room. The postmaster followed him.

The effect produced on the reporters by this incident was not to Michael's advantage. Their discomfiture was visible. How could this strong young man allow himself to be struck like that and not demand satisfaction for such an insult? They contented themselves with bowing to him and retired.

A moment afterward the noise of wheels and the cracking of a whip showed that the berlin, drawn by the tarantass' horses, was driving rapidly away from the posthouse.

Nadia, unmoved, and Michael, still quivering, remained alone in the room.

The courier of the czar, his arms crossed over his chest, was seated motionless as a statue. However, a color which could not have been the blush of shame had replaced the paleness on his manly countenance.

Nadia did not doubt that powerful reasons alone could have allowed him to suffer so great a humiliation from such a man.

Then, going up to him as he had come to her in the police station at Nijni Novgorod, she said:

"Your hand, brother."

And at the same time her hand with an almost maternal gesture wiped away a tear which sprung to her companion's eyes.

BIG FIRE IN PENNSYLVANIA.

Flames Consume a Whole Square—Set by Children.

Connellsville, Pa., Dec. 25.—Almost an entire square was wiped out by fire here yesterday. The loss is conservatively estimated at $75,000. The insurance in many instances does not half equal the loss. The fire lasted from 1 until 5 o'clock, and for several hours it looked as if all the dense downtown district would be wiped out. By hard and heroic work the firemen kept the flames within the confines of one square which is bounded by West Main street, Arch street and Orchard alley. The entire square was owned by the Wilkey estate and the buildings were occupied by almost 30 tenants, nearly all of whom were burned out.

UNDER WATER NINE HOURS.

Famous Diver Performs the Feat—Had a 'Phone With Him.

Chicago, Dec. 25.—Capt. Louis Sarcho last night broke the world's record for remaining under water in a diving suit. In a big tank at the coliseum he lay immersed under ten feet of water for nine hours. The best previous achievement of the kind was eight hours and thirty minutes. Sarcho made the performance novel by taking a specially constructed telephone apparatus down with him and talking at will from under the water with friends throughout the city after securing connection by means of the regular telephone exchanges. Sarcho is the diver whose exploits in exploring the wreck of the battleship Maine attracted attention in the harbor of Havana.

Shreveport, La., Dec. 25.—Fire that started in Jackson Bros.' furniture store, in the heart of the city, threatens the entire block and may spread. The loss so far is estimated at over $100,000.

Houston, Tex., Dec. 25.—The immense creosoting works of the Southern Pacific Railroad Co. near here were destroyed by fire today. The loss will reach about $100,000.

LITERARY NOTES

Astonishing advances have been made lately in the art of photographing flowers, trees and fruit. A proficient in this kind of work which he loves because he loves nature intimately and studies her with keenly trained powers of observation is Mr. J. Horace McFarland. Charming specimens of this kind of photography accompaning his article on the "Flowers of Late Autumn" in the January Magazine Number of the Outlook,

What should children between six and twelve years of age read? Answers to this question have lately been given by Kate Douglas Wiggin, Mary Mapes Dodge, Horace E. Scudder, Agnes Repplier, Tudor Jenks and others, together with some extremely sensible and interesting suggestions as to the principles underlying the choice of children's books. Here is a single typical list from the ten included in the article which The Outlook publishes in its Annual Book Number. The list is furnished by Mrs. Mary Mapes Dodge, editor of Saint Nicholas.

Half the ills that man is heir to come from indigestion. Burdock Blood Bitters strengthens and tones the stomach; makes indigestion impossible.

Information Wanted.

The manufactures of Banner Salve having always believed that no doctor or medicine can cure in every case, but never having heard where Banner Salve failed to cure ulcers, sores, tetter eczema, or piles, as a matter of curiosity would like to know if there are such cases. If so they will gladly refund the money. J. J. Orr.

People who quarrel about trifles seldom ever have anything else to quarrel about.

J. W. Bryan, of Lowder, Ill., writes: "My little boy was very low with pneumonia. Unknown to the doctor, we gave him Foley's Honey and Tar. The result was magical and puzzled the doctor, as it immediately stopped the racking cough, and he quickly recovered." J. J. Orr.

Some hotel keepers get a better living out of the business than the boarders do.

To Stop a Cold.

After exposure or when you feel a cold coming on, take a dose of Foley's Honey and Tar. It never fails to stop a cold if taken in time. J. J. Orr.

The man who minds his own business seldom runs out of good employment.

An affecting sight—Barrel in tiers.

Susan—The pimples, sores and blackheads are danger signals. Take Rocky Mountain Tea, you'll give a farewell reception to your troubles. J. J. Orr.

The man who uses a porous plaster becomes very much attached to it.

C W. Lynch, Winchester, Ind., writes "I owe the life of my boy to Foley's Honey and Tar. He had membranous croup, and the first dose gave him relief. We continued its use and it soon brought him out of danger." J. J. Orr.

Many men are honest only because they are financially able to be.

A cold, cough or lagrippe can be "nipped in the bud," with a dose or two of Foley's Honey and Tar. Beware of substitutes. J. J. Orr.

The Pacific mails—Quiet husbands.

Used by the ladies of fashion all over the world. It's without doubt the greatest beautifier ever offered the American woman. 35c. Made only by Madison Medicine Co. J. J. Orr.

The Indian question—Arms or alms.

Chas. Replogle, of Atwater, O., was in very bad shape. He says: "I suffered a great deal with my kidneys and was requested to try Foley's Kidney Cure, I did so and in four days I was able to go to work again, now I am entirely well." J. J. Orr.

Awl things to all people—Cobblers.

Why ought a thirsty man always carry a watch? Because it has a spring inside.

The church was prettily decorated and the program went off without a hitch in spite of Rev. Bower's illness.

SEVENTEENTH

MANY PEOPLE

From out of Town Present. Everyone had a Delightful Time.

The opera house was never more beautifully decorated than for this years christmas party. The color scheme was entirely in pink and green. Behind the orchestra on the stage serving to screen the refreshment room were alternate folds of pink and green bunting arranged behind arches of evergreen. The effect was very pretty and artistic. Bands of the same color were festooned from dome to gallery where ropes of ground pine caught up with bunches of holly hung in graceful curves from every gas jet.

The front of the stage was banked up with holly and ornamented with palms, and holly was abundantly mixed with the pines and evergreens in all the decorating. The whole effect was very pleasing, and was the work of a committee of which Lester Heesen was chairman and the other members assisting were Raynor Brewer, Louis Mcclure, Clyde Heck, Mina Hughes and Faron Anderson.

The orchestra was the finest we have ever had, Finney's orchestra of Detroit, of which Mr. Stone is leader. They gave a concert to a well filled gallery, who seemed very appreciative of the music The first violinist was a fine tenor singer and sang "Rose my Rose' delightfully, kindly responding to two encores. They played for twenty-five dances and gave eight extras, obligingly repeating any numbers that were called for again. Their dance music was pronounced exceptionally fine by the dancers.

There were many handsome and elegant gowns a description of which could occupy a column of space. Among the more noticeable was Miss Eulalie Douglas, of St. Paul, in black with long train and picture hat, the whole costume even to the gloves in unmodified black; Miss Vesta Kies, of Elkhart, in yellow silk mull; Miss Nina Rundell in black liberty silk trimmed in black lace; Miss Fee, of Adrian, in black lace over black silk with light trimmings; Mrs. A Van Buren, of Chicago, in an elegant black gown.

Of our own young people: Miss De. Wolfe was very becomingly gowned in white silk mull; Miss corey in gray trimmed in black velvet and white over lace; Miss Edith cory in blue silk trimmed in narrow black velvet ribbon; Miss Viola Shull in rose colored silk cut in princess style and trimmed in dark green velvet; Miss Florence Brewer in white silk mull with pink trimmings; Miss McKenna in black with light blue aigrettes; Miss cotton in pink organdie; Mrs Frank chilson in light green silk trimmed in rose velvet; Miss Hartbeck in old rose with white lace trimmed in Eton effect; Miss Floy Freeman in blue crepe de chene embroidered.

Mrs. Lyman in black lace over black silk; Miss Magdalene Arnold in yellow silk mull trimmed in cream applique and blue silk; Mrs Marshall Doolittle in white taffata silk; Miss Jule Hicks in white silk mull; Miss Florence Eccles in blue wearing red carnations; Miss Ernestine Anderson in yellow. These and many others, two in lavendar and several in white, made with the bright faces of our home girls, and the fine looking visitors from neighboring towns, a gay looking christmas scene, as viewed from a spectator's seat in the gallery.

Those from out of town attending were: Miss Nina Rundel, Miss Bailey, Edwin Lehr, charles Burtless and chas. Younghans, of Manchester; Miss Jessie Fee, Vern Smith and Arthur Palmer, of Adrian; Mr. Dennison, Toledo; Mr. Lowe, colorado Springs; Vesta Kies, of Elkhart; Mrs. Helman, of Helena, Mont.; Miss Gertrude Brown, of Jackson; Roy Burlingame, Detroit; Miss Douglas, St. Paul, Minn.; Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Van-Buren, Mary Mills, Mr Talcott, Anna Osborn and Miss Adams, of chicago.

Mr Hine catered very acceptably and the whole affair was voted one of the most enjoyable parties that has been given.

A Tiptop Bear Story in the Janua[illegible] McClure's

Henry Wallace Phillips, whose "Red-Headed Cupid" raised a laugh all over the country, comes up to the mark again, in the January McClure's with "The Demon in the Canon," a bear story in rollicking miner's slang. This story of "Hydraulic" Smith, Agamemnon G. Jones, Miguel, the "greasers" herder, and brother bear, will keep you laughing from start to finish.

ROUND ABOUT US.

The Dundee cheese factory now makes cheese each alternate day, to continue so during the winter months.—Dundee Reporter.

A young lady in this city for several days kept her friends guessing how herself and Mr. B. kept warm on Sunday evening in the parlor without any stove. After she had replied in the negative to all kinds of guesses she smillingly informed her friends that there was a furnace in the house.—Hudson Post.

There are 48 licensed dealers in liquors in this country and two manufacturers of brewed and malt liquors. The dealers are located, 24 in Monroe city, 4 in Dundee, 4 in Maybee, 3 in Carleton, 3 in Ida, 3 in Erie, 2 in Newport, 1 each in Petersburg, Oldport, South Rockwood, Scofield and Raisinville. The manufacturers are located, one in Monroe city, one in Monroe town.—Dundee People.

After the boiler explosion at Brooklyn several weeks ago, the power house clock was found buried in the ruins but nowhere could be discovered the big whistle that blew when the clock struck six. The timepiece had stopped just at twenty minutes to five but it was suggested that the whistle kept right on going. It was afterwards found buried with other brickbats, which had been driven through the roof into the attic over Frank Miller's saloon.

J. B. Poet is a Free Methodist pastor at Blissfield and that religious rhythm and harmony might prevail, and that his "feet" might not stray into forbidden paths of religious contention, to which he is evidently a "verse," he has discontinued revival services. He is evidently a better Poet than prose writer. This specimen needs some clarifying; "Not knowing that no permanent arrangement have been made for futher services after the union services close, they will, Lord willing, resume again at the close of the union services." But after all, it is the spirit, not the letter, which counts, and we admire his desire for peace.—Morenci Observer.

Detroit Tribune: Dear, dear? Who would have ever thought that such an accident as this could have happened? An Adrian township lady had a globe bowl of gold fish, which on bright days, she was in the habit of setting in such a position that the sun could shine on it and this is the sort of "shine" that it cut: The bowl had been placed on the floor so as to catch the tramp ray that came, burglar-like through the window. It fell upon the globe in such a manner as to operate like a sun glass, and the lady returned to find that two large holes had been burned through the new carpet; and she doesn't understand how it was that she could have a burned carpet without at the same time having boiled gold fish; but that is a problem for philosophers.

Jas. McFarland, who was a member of the Shannon Company and was discharged at Hudson and has been living there since, was driving the team owned by J. J. Neeley Wednesday afternoon. He had watered the horses at a trough on Bakers hill and in turning around turned the team too short and over turned the wagon, which threw him underneath in such a manner that he was caught by the rack and dragged quite a distance. Mr. McFarland sustained horrible injuries. The left ear was pulled out leaving a hole, over the right eye was a gash about two inches long and the jaw was fractured and he sustained other cuts and bruises. The team was not hurt nor the wagon much damaged.

A Woman's Awful Peril.

"There is only one chance to save your life and that is through an operation" were the startling words heard by Mrs. I. B. Hunt, of Lime Ridge, Wis., from her doctor after he had vainly tried to cure her of a frightful case of stomach trouble and yellow jaundice. Gall stones had formed and she constantly grew worse. Then she began to use Electric Bitters which wholly cured her. It's a wonderful Stomach. Liver and Kidney remedy. Cures Dyspepsia, Loss of Appetite. Try it. Only 50 cts. Guaranteed. For sale by C. A. TESTS PATIENCE.

The Most Patient People Must Show Annoyance at Times.

Nothing spoils a good disposition quicker
Nothing taxes a man's patience
Like any itchness of the skin
Itching piles almost drive you crazy
All day it makes you miserable,
All night it keeps you awake.
Itch. Itch. Itch. with no relief.
Just the same with eczema.
Can hardly keep from scratching it.
You would do so but you know it makes you worse.
Such miseries are daily decreasing.
People are learning they can be cured
Learning the merits of Doan's Ointment.
Plenty of proof that Doan's Ointment will cure piles, eczema or any itchness of the skin.
Read the testimony of a Battle Creek citizen.

Mr. A. G. Ayers, Book Binder, of 197 West Main street, Battle Creek, says: "My hands became so sore from eczema that it was with difficulty I could bend my fingers The skin cracked open large scabs formed and in addition to the spots being tender they itched intolerably. I tried everything I could hear about or get hold of to stop the troulbe but I was unable to do so until I procured Doan's Ointment. I had heard it spoken about by several people but as I thought it would act like all other preparations I tried I waited some time until I was compelled from the condition of my hands to do something. Doan's Ointment cured me. Up to date, and this is some months after I stopped the treatment, I have had no indication of any return'

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address,

TWIN TROUBLES

They are often Together these days They work Havoc all over the Country and in Tecumseh.

Weak nervous, the digestion out of order, that is what ails a host of people. It comes about in this way. First from over work or other causes the nerves are burdened beyond endurance, nerve waste is not replaced, nerve force is weakened then the stomach loses its nerve controlling power and indigestion follows with failing strength. When first Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Pills came to Tecumseh, people could hardly be convinced that this great medicine would remove these troubles. Now it is an accepted fact because of their cure of very stubborn cases no other medicine would influence.

Mrs. R. VanDuser, of Tecumseh, Mich, says: "My main trouble was with my stomach. my food did not digest properly and as a result suffered from severe headaches. I got a box of Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Pills at Chas. A. Wright's drug store and now I can say my digestion is good and my headaches relieved. I think the pills a good medicine for nervous troubles."

Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Pills are sold at 50c a box at dealers or Dr. A. W. Chase's Medicine Co., Buffalo N. Y. See that portrait and signature of A. W. Chase, M. D. are on every package.

DIBBLE—CLARK

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Clark in Ridgeway township on Wednesday, Dec. 18, at which time their eldest daughter, Adah E., became the wife of Bernice D. Dibble, of West Palmyra. Promptly at 12 o'clock to the strains of the wedding march played by Mrs. E. C. Barnes the bridal party entered the parlor, preceded by four young ladies dressed in pure white where before a handsomely draped corner in the presence of 135 guests, Rev. G. H. Peters, of Temperence, Mich., spoke the words which made them man and wife. The bride was handsomely dressed in a pearl colored gown. They were supported by Miss Gertrude Smith in a pretty green gown and Mr. Bert Pocklington. After congratulations the guests were invited to the dining room where an elegant two course dinner was served. The waiters were four of the bride's nearest associates, Misses Maryon and Nellie Pocklington, Lottie Sutton and Ruby Taylor. Guests were present from Toledo, Adrian, Tecumseh, Holloway and Palmyra. Fainting Spells always indicate a weak heart. They are usually preceeded or followed by palpitation or fluttering, and there may be pain in left side, a smothering sensation and shortness of breath. Such a heart should be treated at once, before the disease develops beyond control. Heart disease is as easily cured as other troubles if taken in time.

"I was subject to fainting spells, and many times I have fallen on the street. I was often compelled to sit down while walking to avoid falling. When physicians failed to help me, I took Dr. Miles' Heart Cure and was completely cured."

NOW LOOK OUT!

"Take care of yourself," say our friends, "I'll try to," we answer. We do take a little care, yet in spite of warm clothes, rubbers and mackintoshes, an army of people were bowled out by pneumonia and other lung and chest diseases last winter. They caught cold, neglected it, let it fix upon them, were torn by coughs, choked by inflammations and congestions, wasted by fever, tired out by pain and then gave up the fight. The hour you realize that you have a cold on the chest, place a Benson's Porous Plaster where the pain or oppression is felt. If you think two are needed make it two. No harm if you were covered with them. They act quickly and prevent the engorgment of blood in the organs. In this way—with ordinary caution as to exposure—you will break up the cold and avoid a serious sickness. No other applications, or any other form of treatment, will accomplish this as certainly and speedily. Benson's Plasters have a distinct and positive action and are curative to the highest degree. Use them with the same confidence for coughs, muscular rheumatism, the grip (back and chest) and all similar ailments. Women, who are chief sufferers from cold weather complaints, should keep these plasters always within reach. Get the genuine. All druggists, or we will prepay postage on any number ordered in the United States on receipt of 25c. each.

Rock-a-Bye Baby

These are sweet words, but how much pain and suffering they used to mean. It's different now. Since Mother's Friend has become known expectant mothers have been spared much of the anguish of childbirth. Mother's Friend is a liniment to be applied externally. It is rubbed thoroughly into the muscles of the abdomen. It gives elasticity and strength, and when the final great strain comes they respond quickly and easily without pain. Mother's Friend is never taken internally. Internal remedies at this time do more harm than good. If a woman is supplied with this splendid liniment she need never fear rising or swelling breasts, morning sickness, or any of the discomforts which usually accompany pregnancy.

The proprietor of a large hotel in Tampa, Fla., writes: "My wife had an awful time with her first child. During her second pregnancy, Mother's Friend was used and the baby was born easily before the doctor arrived. It's certainly great."

HEAD NOISES CEASE IMMEDIATELY.

F. A. WERMAN, OF BALTIMORE, SAYS:

BALTIMORE, Md., March 30, 1901.

Gentlemen:—Being entirely cured of deafness, thanks to your treatment, I will now give you a full history of my case, to be used at your discretion.

About five years ago my right ear began to sing, and this kept on getting worse, until I lost my hearing in this ear entirely.

I underwent a treatment for catarrh, for three months, without any success, consulted a number of physicians, among others, the most eminent ear specialist of this city, who told me that only an operation could help me, and even that only temporarily, that the head noises would then cease, but the hearing in the affected ear would be lost forever.

I then saw your advertisement accidentally in a New York paper, and ordered your treatment. After I had used it only a few days according to your directions, the noises ceased, and to-day, after five weeks, my hearing in the diseased ear has been entirely restored. I thank you heartily and beg to remain Very truly yours,
F. A. WERMAN, 730 S. Broadway, Baltimore, Md.

Our treatment does not interfere with your usual occupation.

A Warning Note to Newspapers From Gov Bliss.

MISCHIEF IN "PATENT INSIDES"

Beet Sugar Fighters Manage to Get Articles Printed in Country Newspapers Which Are in Opposition to the Papers' Policies

Lansing, Mich., Dec. 28.—Gov. Bliss has taken occasion to sound a warning note to the farmers of Michigan and of all other states interested in the development of the infant beet sugar industry. "The cane sugar manufacturers, or men operating in their interests, are after the beet sugar farmers and factories," he said, "and are apparently leaving no stone unturned in order to win. They are resorting to all sorts of tactics, and if they pursue the same sort of a campaign at Washington it seems to me there will be lively doings. It behooves the beet sugar interests to appeal to the people and let them know all about the industry which is having a life and death fight on its hands. I am sure that the farmers of the nation will never consent that the rapidly growing beet sugar industry shall be killed, for there is nothing of more promising benefit to them—not only to them, but to all the people.

"Look at this," and the governor exhibited a letter received from a country publisher. "Here is a sample of the campaign being carried on against the beet sugar industry. The writer of the letter informs me that a certain Wall street firm engaged in carrying on a fight against beet sugar, having found that the papers in the beet sugar states, particularly Michigan, were antagonizing their Cuban free sugar circulars, have contrived to have printed in the 'patent insides' arguments in behalf of greatly reducing the tariff on sugars from Cuba. Many country papers, the writer tells me, have been caught in this way. While their editorial columns were fighting in behalf of the beet sugar industry, their news columns were made to appear to be advocating free sugar.

"Following up this campaign, the United States Export association, with offices in New York, is addressing circulars to weekly papers urging them to advocate free sugar and send marked copies of their papers to their senators and congressmen.

Two Claimants of a Maniac.

Owosso, Mich., Dec. 28.—Two weeks ago people around Parshallburg saw what they called a wild man, but what was really an escaped lunatic. The story came to the ears of two persons in the state who think they know the man. They are Mrs. Augusta Cuss of Center Line, Macomb county, and Mrs. Ella Lowe of 422 Fifth street, Detroit. Both ladies have written Marshal Ross, asking his assistance. The husband of each lady is insane, and has been missing for several weeks.

Judge Smith is President.

Lansing, Mich., Dec. 28.—Judge Smith of Hastings was elected president of the State Association of Circuit Judges at its concluding session here yesterday, and Judge Alfred Wolcott of Grand Rapids vice-president. Judge Howard Wiest of Lansing was chosen secretary and treasurer. George I. Moore of Port Huron read a paper on the late Judge O'Brien Atkinson's character and life, and an informal discussion of several methods of practice took place.

Cause, Disappointed Love.

Gaylord, Mich., Dec. 28.—G. F. Ayres of Silverwood, who has been staying at the Mansard hotel here, committed suicide yesterday by taking morphine. He had loved a woman in Gaylord but found, on his arrival here after a lapse in the correspondence between them, that she had been married. The consequent disappointment was given as the cause of the act in two notes left for his relatives.

Three new cases of smallpox have just appeared near Pinconing.

August Swartz of Howard City dropped dead of heart disease Friday.

The macine shop of Dunford's drydock, Port Huron, burned Friday night, entailing a loss of $8,000.

Odd Fellows' lodge of Lowell is out $400. Benjamin C. Smith, the treasurer, denies taking it, but furnishes no information as to its whereabouts.

Secretary H. A. Hopkins of the Michigan Press association says the executive committee will consider arrangements for a trip of the association to Cuba in a month or two.

The Shiawassee County Poultry and Pet Stock association is holding an exhibition in Owosso. The attendance is large and the show is a financial success. There is a large number of high scoring birds.

Some teamsters Friday became stalled with a large log across the Pere Marquette track, just north of Holly. They did not have time to flag an approaching passenger train, and the engine was stopped with the pilot only a few feet from the log.

Saw Death Near.

"It made my heart ache," writes L. C. Overstreet, of Elgin, Tenn., "to hear my wife cough until it seemed her weak and sore lungs would collapse. Good doctors said she was so far gone with Consumption that no medicine or earthly help could save her, but a friend recommended Dr. King's New Discovery and persistent use of this excellent medicine saved her life." It's absolutely guaranteed for Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, Asthma and all Throat and Lung diseases 50c and $1.00 at C. A Wright's. Trial bottles free.

TO SAGINAW NEXT YEAR.

State Teachers Elect Officers and Hold Sessions.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Dec. 28.—The State Teachers' association goes to Saginaw next year. Officers elected. President, Cupt. C. L. Bemis or Ionia; vice-president, President A. G. Slocum, Kalamazoo college; second vice-president, Miss Margaret Sherwood, Saginaw; secretary, Prof. O. G. Frederick, Detroit.

At yesterday morning's session, Inspector James L. Hughes of Toronto spoke on Dickens as an educator, and Mrs. Anna B. Comstock of the department of nature study at Cornell, delivered an address on "Nature study as an aid to the grade teacher."

The convention scattered into sections in the afternoon to consider various phrases of educational work. There were eight of these sections, and each had a class room in the high school building for its deliberations. President Kollen of Hope college, Holland, presided over the college section, and Prof. Richard Hudson of the University of Michigan read a paper. A. B. Lightfoot of Big Rapids conducted the commissioners' section, and papers were read by William Wimer of Coldwater and C. T. Grawn of the Central Normal school.

Other sections were the grammar school conducted by Fred W. Moe of Detroit; the high school section, by E. O. Marsh of Lansing; the kindergarten section by Miss Mary Greer of Cadillac; the mathematical, by Prof. W. W. Beman of the U. of M.; the music section, by Miss Florence Marsh of Grand Rapids, and the primary by Martha A. Sherwood of Saginaw.

Last night Dr. Graham Taylor of Chicago lectured on "The social extension of the public schools."

The convention closed this morning with an address by James L. Hughes of Toronto on "Child study," and a symposium on "Present problems in education."

BATTERED TO DEATH.

Horrible Accident to a Young Detroit Man.

Detroit, Mich., Dec. 28.—Joseph Radamacher was killed in the Buhl Malleable Co.'s plant here at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon in a peculiarly horrible manner. He was standing on a platform in the machine shop at Wight and Adair streets, helping another employe to take down a loose belt, when he was caught in the shaft and his head was battered several times against a brick wall. Of course the unfortunate man was killed instantly, but the terrible battering was so prolonged that the head was almost entirely knocked off from the body before the machinery could be stopped.

Radamacher was 30 years old and leaves a widow and three children at 78 Waterloo street. He had been employed at the Buhl works for three years.

MACCABEES MEET.

Saginaw City Hall the Scene of Animated Gathering.

Saginaw, Mich., Dec. 28.—Major N. S. Boynton, great commander; Mrs. Frances E. Burns, great lady commander; many deputy great commanders of the state, and a large number of the rank and file of the K. O. T. M. and L. O. T. M. held a mass meeting in the city hall last night in the interest of the movement to expand the Maccabee organization into other states. Earnest addresses in favor of the scheme were delivered.

The gathering is in the nature of a school with members as the pupils and the grand officers as instructors. It is a fight between the grand and supreme officials on the question of going outside Michigan, the latter at present having complete jurisdiction beyond the state limits, and not wishing to abdicate.

POISONED BY FUMES.

Ann Arbor Boy Dead from Mine Explosion.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Dec. 28.—Word has been received here announcing the accidental death of Fred Ross, son of Mrs. Caroline Ross of this city. He was employed in the "Smugglers" mine at Aricola, Colo. Two weeks ago an explosion occurred in the mine and he was so poisoned by the fumes that he died after an illness of nine days.

Conduct Was Unbecoming.

Muskegon, Mich., Dec. 28.—Charges of conduct unbecoming a minister were preferred against Rev. M. H. A. Vandervalk of Immanuel Presbyterian church in a prayer offered at a church meeting by an elder last night. It is understood that the excitement which followed was so intense that no action was taken. Later Elders Abel Wolters and Henry Kieft were appointed a committee to wait upon the minister and notify him of the charge preferred against him.

WANTS HIS WAYWARD WIFE.

Inherits a Fortune and Wants Her to Share It.

Port Huron, Mich., Dec. 28.—Maggie Madwick, who is in jail awaiting trial on a serious charge, has received a letter from her aged husband, Elias Madwick of Watford, Ont., whom she deserted some time ago, stating that he had just received a letter from England, from his brother, stating he had fallen heir to $50,000. He begs of her to return to him, stating he forgives the past, and go to England with him to claim the amount. He enclosed the letter received from England, which brought tidings of good fortune, and this he begs of her to guard well and bring back with her. He did not know of her arrest and wrote a letter to Chief of Police Petit asking him to look his wife up and telling of the fortune which had come to him. The police will probably release the woman providing she goes direct to her aged husband. Mrs. Madwick is enamored of Wm. Turner of this city, and it was with him she was arrested for illegally living together.

Not a Very Fraternal Spirit.

New York, Dec. 30.—Five hundred members of the Order of Brith Abraham met Sunday night in this city. The order, which is a fraternal one, is said to number 40,000 in the country, 12,000 living in this city. The meeting was called by Past Grand Master Oscar Weiner of Newark, N. J.; Past Grand Treasurer Lubolsky and Past Deputy Grand Master Robert Strahl for the purpose of considering matters regarding the endowment funds of the order. Two factions developed, one led by the men mentioned, the other by Grand Master Samuel Dorf. In an effort to elect a chairman there was a fight, in which furniture was broken, and the police had to interfere. Finally the lights were turned off and the meeting perforce went over until next Sundar

DEATH TO THREE

All Were Prominent Personages in the State.

AN INCIDENT AT COLDWATER

Dr. John Bell of Benton Harbor; B. C. Farrand, Lawyer, of Port Huron, and D. Griffith, Prominint Citizen of Jackson, All Pass Away on Sunday.

Benton Harbor, Mich., Dec. 30.—Dr. John Bell, one of the most prominent men in southwestern Michigan, died at his home in this city at 9 o'clock Sunday morning, after a lingering illness brought about by blood poisoning contracted during an operation performed a year ago. The mayor has issued a proclamation calling for the closing of the stores and business places in the city all day on Thursday, the date of the funeral.

Dr. Bell was the highest ranking officer of the Uniformed Rank K. of P., in the world. In 1898 he was elected to the office of major-general and surgeon-general of the uniformed rank. He bore his honors easily, and few people in his own town knew the importance of the rank. He has long been prominent in the councils of the order, and he has done much to build it up.

Port Huron, Mich., Dec. 30.—Bethuel Clinton Farrand, one of the oldest pioneers of the city and for many years a prominent member of the St. Clair County Bar association, died yesterday at his home on Military street. Mr. Farrand was born in Aurelius, Cayuga county, New York, Dec. 13, 1820. He was the third son of Bethuel Farrand, first judge of probate of Washtenaw county, Mich., who came to this state with his family in 1825 and locted in Detroit. In the fall of the same year they moved to Ann Arbor, which was then populated by but 12 families.

Jackson, Mich., Dec. 30.—Dan Griffith, one of the best known veterans of the civil war in the state, died at his home in this city Sunday of heart trouble, aged 50 years. He enlisted in the 1st Michigan infantry and served in the army and navy throughout the war. He took great interest in the reunions and encampments of the G. A. R. and was known to veterans throughout the country for his popular war recitations at their gatherings. His last work was done as deputy county clerk of Jackson county from 1893-97. A widow, two sons and two daughters survive him.

Coldwater, Mich., Dec. 30.—An unusual coincidence has been brought to the notice of Coldwater people through the deaths, in widely separate parts of the country, of three former residents of this city, all of whom were intimate friends and all of whom died at almost the same hour. The coincidence is still more remarkable through the fact that the three were taken ill on the same day and with similar complaints.

Saturday night the body of George A. Coe, superintendent of the Susquehanna division of the Erie railroad, was brought here for burial. Coe was once a well-known local boy and is the son of ex-Lieut.-Gov. Coe.

Sunday afternoon the remains of Miss Eugenia Pruden arrived here from Washington, D. C., in charge of her brother-in-law, ex-Congressman McGowan.

Today P. P. Wright of Cleveland will reach here from St. Paul, bringing the body of his daughter, Mrs. Wm. Canby, who died there.

Although separated during the latter part of their lives, the former friends will all be interred in Oak Grove cemetery. The coincidence is further emphasized by the fact that their graves will be nearby, the family lots being almost adjacent.

Many People Buncoed.

Niles, Mich., Dec. 30.—Diligent inquiry reveals the fact that about 80 Nilesites were taken in by the Ladies' Weekly Publishing Co. of Chicago, which secured subscribers here and in other towns throughout southwestern Michigan on the strength of great promises held out in the shape of premiums. The terms of the contract promised subscribers that, after taking 65 single numbers of the publication at 10 cents per number, the subscriber would be entitled to a premium. After several of the payments had been made agents went about and induced many to pay the difference then of what they had paid and what they would have to pay before getting the premium, with a result that many forked over the money, but no permium showed up.

"Poison" Was a Bluff.

Flint, Mich., Dec. 30.—Frank Dilleree pretended that he had taken a dose of "Sure shot," a vermin exterminator, and a doctor was called in haste, but investigation showed that he had put up the matter as a bluff on his wife, to whom he was married two weeks ago, and of whom he is jealous.

MICHIGAN BRIEFS.

There are now but 10 cases of smallpox in Interlochen.

Dr. Duncan McLeod of Detroit, a prominent man throughout the state in medical circles, died Sunday night.

A naval training station may be located at Detroit. Cleveland and Chicago are also in for a chance.

Members of the 33d Michigan who went south during the Spanish war are endeavoring to form a reunion association.

Ludington has been without lights for several weeks because the city treasury did not contain money enough to pay for them.

The supposed wild man in the woods near Crystal Falls is thought to have been John Johnson, who recently escaped from a Milwaukee asylum. It is believed he has perished.

Charity's Choice.

"Mummy," said a small girl—"mummy, dear, I do wish I might give some money for poor children's dinners."

"So you may, darling."

"But, mummy, I haven't any money."

"Well, darling, if you like to go without sugar I will give you the money instead, and then you will have some."

The small child considered solemnly for a moment, and then said, "Must it be sugar, mummy?"

"Why, no, darling. I don't mind much. What would you like to do without?"

"How would soap do, mummy, then?" exclaimed the small maiden in triumph.—Philadelphia Ledger.

FEELING OF CHEERFULNESS

Prevades Ending of Year's Business, According to Bradstreet.

New York, Dec. 28.—Bradstreet's today says:

Reports of a record-breaking holiday trade, of sensational quiet in leading wholesale lines, of exceptional activity at top prices in iron and steel, of sustained activity in other industries, continued complaint of car and motive power shortages, and a general hardening of speculative markets for food products, are the features of trade to Bradstreet's this week. The year closes with a cheerfulness of feeling never exceeded, even of late years, and with expectations of the new year as bright as any that have gone before. Specially good reports as to holday distribution come from the east, central west, northwest and southwest.

Wheat apparently cut loose from corn this week and displayed exceptional activity and strength for a holiday week. The winter wheat markets took the lead in this respect, bulying being specially good at St. Louis. Reports of lack of snow over the winter crop have been received, but reports of a smaller surplus in Argentina, better cables, light receipts west and northwest, and smaller gains in the visible supply have all been features. Export business has rather been checked by the rise. Corn has been dull though steadied by wheat, while oats have firmed up a little. Provisions have shown more strength, and cheese has been helped also. Wheat, including flour, exports for the week aggregate 4,291,543 bu, as against 4,332,832 last week and 3,868,165 in this week last year. Wheat exports, July 1 to date (twenty-six weeks) aggregate 144,928,090 bu, as against 92,952,244 last season. Corn exports aggregate 424,336 bu, as against 330,941 last week and 4,011,105 last year. July 1 to date corn exports are 20,550,515 bu, against 95,178,344 last season.

Business failures for the week number 219, as against 262 last week, 213 in this week last year, 220 in 1899, 218 in 1898 and 297 in 1897. Canadian failures numbered 16, as against 24 last week and 15 in this week a year ago, and 22 in 1899.

NEW YEAR'S PROGRAM.

President's Time Will Be Occupied From 11 a. m. to Close of Day.

The president will receive at 11 a. m., the members of the cabinet, the diplomatic corps; 11:15 a. m., justices and judges of several courts, ex-cabinet members and ex-ministers; 11:25 a. m., senators, representatives and delegates in congress, the commissioners and judicial officers of the District of Columbia; 11:40 a. m., officers of army and navy; 12 m., the several commissioners and assistants of departments; 12:15 p. m., the several soldier organizations of the United States; 12:35, reception of citizens.

Too Early for Germans.

Caracas, Venezuela, Dec. 28 (via Galvestin).—The German cruiser Vineta anchored off Laguira yesterday. An interesting incident occurred early in the day. When the Venezuelan health officer went alongside the Vineta at 6 o'clock in the morning he was not allowed to board her. The Venezuelan officials immediately interpreted the action of the German officers to mean that the cruiser had visited Laguira on warlike business in connection with the claims of German citizens, but at 8 o'clock a German officer called on the authorities and explained that the refusal to allow the health officer to board the Vineta was due to the fact that he went alongside the cruiser at too early an hour.

To Watch Our Methods.

Berlin, Dec. 28.—The German government has decided to attach agricultural experts to the more important German consulates. The first of these experts will be sent to the United States, whose agricultural developments are being more carefully observed now than formerly. The action is understood to be one of the results of the increasing use of American farm machinery in Germany and the belief that the American system of farming on a large scale might be adapted to the princely estates of Germany.

An Explosion Kills Three.

ERRORS OF HISTORY

FICTIONS THAT FOR CENTURIES HAVE POSED AS FACTS.

Why the Colossus of Rhodes Could Not Have Spanned the Harbor—The Force of Leonidas at Thermopylæ. The William Tell Myth.

There have been woven into history many interesting stories that time and investigation have proved myths, but in spite of the efforts of the iconoclasts these mistakes of history still pass current with many people.

Probably one of the most affecting scenes connected with the making of literature is that described in the oft repeated story of the blind poet Milton dictating "Paradise Lost" to his daughters. Dr. Johnson, however, has been quoted as denying it. He said, furthermore, that Milton never even permitted his daughters to learn to read and write.

A favorite "piece" with western and southern schoolboys on recitation and exhibition days was a set of verses telling of the heroic stand of Leonidas and his brave "300" at Thermopylæ. The Abbe Barthelemy, who asserted that he had inquired minutely into the subject, wrote that, according to Diodorus, Leonidas had 7,000 men under him and that Pausanias gave the number of Leonidas' army as 12,000.

Did Cæsar say to the pilot:

"Why do you fear? You have Cæsar on board."

Many trustworthy historians declare that Cæsar never used the words quoted.

The inside of cigar box covers are sometimes ornamented with a picture of the Colossus of Rhodes, with ships in full sail passing between the outstretched legs of the gigantic statue. These pictures reflect the popular and what for centuries was the historical idea of the Colossus, which was accounted one of the seven wonders of the world. It may be interesting to know that all drawings of the statue are purely imaginary and, what is more, are modern, not ancient, efforts. The Colossus was erected in 305 B. C. The most trustworthy of ancient accounts of it is contained in a manuscript dating about 150 B. C., in which the height of the statue is given as 105 feet. The entrance to the harbor of Rhodes is 350 feet across, so that it was manifestly impossible that the legs of the Colossus should span the entrance to the port or that ships should sail beneath it.

As a matter of fact the Colossus was not built across the harbor, but on an open space of ground near it; but, for all that, it was a wonderful statue.

People whose sympathies are easily aroused have wept over the wrongs of Belisarius, the conqueror of the Vandals, who, many were taught, "begged his bread at the city gates" after having commanded victorious armies and been of much service to the state. The good old general was unquestionably an unfortunate and much abused man, but there is no proof that he begged his living at the city gates or elsewhere. Yet Van Dyke engraved him and David, the great Frenchman, painted him, and tragedies and romances were written around him in the belief that he did sit at the city gates a forlorn and disconsolate object with palm outstretched for alms.

The facts are, a conspiracy against the Emperor Justinian being discovered, two of Belisarius' officers confessed under torture that the old general was in the plot. He was condemned without further hearing, his property sequestrated, and he suffered imprisonment for six months. His innocence being established, Belisarius was released, and he died about a year later. But that he ever was reduced to the extremity of begging is declared to be absolutely untrue.

The schoolbook tale of William Tell shooting an apple from his son's head is also without foundation in fact. Tell's name doesn't even appear in the chronicles of Zurich, and the most ancient writing in which the story is mentioned bears date some 200 years after the event it pretends to describe. The story is a variation of an old Scandinavian saga. A similar bit of "history" is related of William of Cloudsley in England in the twelfth century.

It is denied also that Emperor Charles V. of Spain on his abdication adopted the habit of a monk and occupied himself in the manufacture of clocks. It is declared that he never ceased to be emperor de facto, and he never surrendered control of affairs of state.

Coming down to later times, the people of three different countries claimed three different men as inventors of the steam engine. In America there is a popular belief to this day that Robert Fulton built the first successful engine and steamboat. In England the Marquis of Worcester, who published an account of a steam engine in 1663, has received credit for the invention. In France Solomon de Caus (1615) was regarded as the genius who had given to the world a new motive power. Each of them may have conceived and worked out the idea of a steam engine without the slightest knowledge of what had been done in that direction before their day, but none of them might rightly lay claim to being the first in the field.

On April 17, 1543, Don Blasco de Garay launched a boat of 200 tons burden at Barcelona in the presence of the Emperor Charles V. The boat was propelled by steam and made ten miles an hour. She was called La Sanctissima Trinidada. The emperor gave to Don Blasco a handsome present, but did not regard the invention as practicable, and nothing came of it. From this it would seem that Fulton was centuries behind the times.—New York Mail and Express.

CHAPTER VII.

NADIA, with the clear perception of a right minded woman, guessed that some secret motive directed all Michael Strogoff's actions; that he for a reason unknown to her did not belong to himself; that he had not the power of doing what he desired, and that in this instance especially he had heroically sacrificed to duty even his resentment at the gross injury he had received.

Nadia, therefore, asked no explanation from Michael. Had not the hand which she had extended to him already replied to all that he might have been able to tell her?

Michael remained silent all the evening. The postmaster not being able to supply them with fresh horses until the next morning, a whole night must be passed at the house. Nadia could profit by it to take some rest, and a room was therefore prepared for her.

The young girl would no doubt have preferred not to leave her companion, but she felt that he would rather be alone, and she made ready to go to her room.

Just as she was about to retire she could not refrain from going up to Michael to say good night.

"Brother," she whispered.

But he checked her with a gesture. The girl sighed and left the room.

Michael Strogoff did not lie down. He could not have slept even for an hour. The place on which he had been struck by the brutal traveler felt like a burn.

"For my country and the Father," he muttered as he ended his evening prayer.

He especially felt a great wish to know who was the man who had struck him, whence he came and where he was going. As to his face, the features of it were so deeply engraved on his memory that he had no fear of ever forgetting them.

Michael at last asked for the postmaster. The latter, a Siberian of the old type, came directly and, looking rather contemptuously at the young man, waited to be questioned.

"You belong to the country?" asked Michael.

"Yes."

"Do you know that man who took my horses?"

"No."

"Had you never seen him before?"

"Never."

"Who do you think he was?"

"A man who knows how to make himself obeyed."

Michael fixed his piercing gaze upon the Siberian, but the other did not quail before it.

"Do you dare to judge me?" exclaimed Michael.

"Yes," answered the Siberian, "for there are some things that even a plain merchant cannot receive without returning."

"Blows?"

"Blows, young man. I am of an age and strength to tell you so."

Michael went up to the postmaster and laid his two powerful hands on his shoulders.

Then in a peculiarly calm tone he said:

"Be off, my friend; be off! I could kill you."

The postmaster understood this time.

"I like him better for that," he muttered as he retired without adding another word.

At 8 o'clock the next morning, the 24th of July, three strong horses were harnessed to the tarantass. Michael and Nadia took their places, and Ichim, with its disagreeable remembrances, was soon left far behind.

The next day, July 25, at 3 o'clock in the morning, the tarantass arrived at the posthouse in Tioukalmsk, having accomplished a distance of 120 versts since it had crossed the Ichim.

They rapidly changed horses. Here, however, for the first time the driver made difficulties about starting, declaring that detachments of Tartars were roving across the steppe and that travelers, horses and carriages would be a fine prize for such robbers.

Only by dint of a large bribe could Michael get over the unwillingness of the driver, for in this instance, as in many others, he did not wish to show his podorojna. The last ukase, having been transmitted by telegraph, was known in the Siberian provinces, and a Russian specially exempted from obeying these orders would certainly have drawn public attention to himself, a thing above all to be avoided by the czar's courier. As to the driver's hesitation, either the rascal traded on the traveler's impatience or he really had good reason to fear some misfortune.

However, at last the tarantass started and made such good way that by 3 in the afternoon it had reached Koulatsinskoe, eighty versts farther on. An hour after this it was on the banks of the Irtish. Omsk was now only twenty versts distant.

The Irtish is a large river and one of the principal of those which flow toward the north of Asia. Rising in the Atai mountains, it flows from the southeast to the northwest and empties itself into the Obi after a course of nearly 7,000 versts.

At this time of year, when all the rivers of the Siberian basin are much swollen, the waters of the Irtish were very high. In consequence the current was changed to a regular torrent, rendering the passage difficult enough. A swimmer could not have crossed, however powerful a one he might be, and even in a ferryboat there would be some danger.

But Michael and Nadia, determined to brave all perils whatever they might be, did not dream of shrinking from this one.

However, Michael proposed to his young companion that he should cross first, embarking in the ferryboat with the tarantass and horses, as he feared that the weight of this load would render it less safe. After landing the carriage on the opposite bank he would return and fetch Nadia.

The girl refused. It would be the delay of an hour, and she would not for her safety alone be the cause of it.

The embarkation was made not without difficulty, for the banks were partly flooded and the boat could not get in near enough.
the three horses on board. Michael, Nadia and the driver embarked also, and they shoved off.

For a few minutes all went well. A little way up the river the current was broken by a long point projecting from the bank and formed an eddy easily crossed by the boat. The two boatmen propelled their barge with long poles, which they handled cleverly, but as they gained the middle of the stream it grew deeper and deeper until at last they could only just reach the bottom. The ends of the poles were only a foot above the water, which rendered their use difficult and insufficient. Michael and Nadia, seated in the stern of the boat and always in dread of a delay, watched the boatmen with some uneasiness.

The shout was occasioned by the new direction the boat was rapidly taking. It had got into the direct current and was being swept down the river. By diligent use of the poles, putting the ends in a series of notches cut below the gunwale, the boatmen managed to keep their craft against the stream and slowly urged it in a slanting direction toward the right bank.

They calculated on reaching it some five or six versts below the landing place; but, after all, that would not matter so long as men and beasts could disembark without accident. The two stout boatmen, stimulated, moreover, by the promise of double fare, did not doubt of succeeding in this difficult passage of the Irtish.

But they reckoned without an incident which they were powerless to prevent, and neither their zeal nor their skillfulness could under the circumstances have done more.

The boat was in the middle of the current at nearly equal distances from either shore and being carried down at the rate of two versts an hour when Michael, springing to his feet, bent his gaze up the river.

Several boats, aided by oars as well as by the current, were coming swiftly down upon them.

Michael's brow contracted, and an exclamation escaped him.

"What is the matter?" asked the girl.

But before Michael had time to reply one of the boatmen exclaimed in an accent of terror:

"The Tartars! The Tartars!"

They were indeed boats full of soldiers, and in a few minutes they must reach the ferryboat, it being too heavily laden to escape from them.

The terrified boatmen uttered exclamations of despair and dropped their poles.

"Courage, my friends!" cried Michael. "Courage! Fifty rubles for you if we reach the right bank before the boats overtake us!"

Incited by these words, the boatmen again worked manfully away, but it soon became evident that they could not escape the Tartars.

It was scarcely probable that they would pass without attacking them. On the contrary, there was everything to be feared from robbers such as these.

"Do not be afraid, Nadia," said Michael, "but be ready for anything."

"I am ready," replied Nadia.

"Even to throw yourself into the water when I tell you?"

"Whenever you tell me."

"Have confidence in me, Nadia."

"I have indeed."

The Tartar boats were now only a hundred feet distant. They carried a detachment of Bokharian soldiers on their way to reconnoiter round Omsk.

The ferryboat was still two lengths from the shore. The boatmen redoubled their efforts. Michael himself seized a pole and wielded it with superhuman strength. If he could land the tarantass and horses and dash off with them, there was some chance of escaping the Tartars, who were not mounted.

But all their efforts were in vain.

The soldiers from the first boat shouted.

Michael recognized the Tartar war-cry, which is usually answered by lying flat on the ground.

As neither he nor the boatmen obeyed this injunction, a volley was let fly among them, and two of the horses were mortally wounded.

At the next moment a violent blow was felt. The boats had run into the ferryboat.

"Come, Nadia!" cried Michael, ready to jump overboard.

The girl was about to follow him when a blow from a lance struck him, and he was thrown into the water. The current swept him away. His hand raised for an instant above the waves, and then he disappeared.

Nadia uttered a cry, but before she had time to throw herself after him she was seized and dragged into one of the boats.

In a few minutes the boatmen were killed and the ferryboat was left to drift away while the Tartars continued to descend the Irtish.

His Three Good Deeds.

A certain business man noted for his grasping methods came into his office one day and told his partner that he was very happy because he had done three good deeds that morning. "In the first place," he said, "I met a poor woman who was weeping bitterly because she had lost the $4 with which she had intended to pay for the baptism of her baby. I gave her a ten dollar bill, telling her to have the child baptized and give me the change as I came from my club. Charity was one good deed. Saving the child's soul was the second."

"And what was the third?" asked the partner.

"Oh, the third was that I got six good dollars for my green goods ten."

A City of Padlocks.

Irkutsk, Siberia, is a city of padlocks. There are more padlocks on the shutters and doors of an Irkutsk shop than can be found in an English city of 200,000. There are as many as three padlocks on some shop doors, and every lower story shutter bears from one to five. The padlocks weigh from one to fifteen pounds. The popular size is five pounds and two and one-half inches thick.

Impressive Condemnation.

Speaking with a farmer about one of his neighbors, I said, "So-and-so is a good man." He looked at me steadily without making any reply.

"So-and-so is a good man," I repeated in a louder tone, fancying he must be deaf.

Then the farmer answered, "I heard what you said."—New York Herald.

COLLISION KILLS 4

Fatal Accident on Chicago & Northwestern, Near Malta.

EIGHTEEN WERE INJURED

A Freight, Too Long for the Siding, Stood in Path of the Omaha Flyer—Coaches Were Overturned and Fire Added Horror to the Accident.

Chicago, Dec. 30.—Four persons were killed and 18 injured, several of them possibly fatally, in a collision on the Chicago & Northwestern railroad Sunday, at Malta, Ill., 60 miles west of Chicago. The trains in collision were "the Omaha flyer," an eastbound passenger train, and an eastbound freight train. The wreck caught fire and two passenger coaches, one sleeping car and eight freight cars were burned and another sleeping car was partly consumed.

The dead: George W. Rudio, Mrs. George W. Rudio, Omaha; D. O. Nichols, Council Bluffs; E. B. Duncan, sleeping car porter, Chicago.

The injured: Bert Carr, Willett, N. Y.; George W. Fox, Boulder, Colo.; H. D. Gray, Evanston, Ill.; Edward Hinckley, Surprise, Neb.; W. A. Sweenex, Larchford, Ia.; Marion Wilkes, Fremont, Neb.; Veronica Bohrmoser, Millard, Neb.; F. Larrabee, passenger engineer, leg fractured; F. P. Corran, fireman; C. W. Aiken, yardmaster; P. D. O'Neil, special agent Northwestern railroad; John W. Wilson, civil engineer Northwestern railroad; W. R. Dawes, Pullman conductor; Fred Dunham, Mrs. J. L. Kail, Clarence Lauzerus, Mrs. Eva Hall, Lincoln Taft, all of Chicago.

Injured passengers were attended immediately by surgeons from Rochelle and De Kalb, and later were removed to St. Luke's hospital in Chicago by special train.

The freight train had taken a siding at Malta, but the train was longer than the siding and the freight locomotive protruding upon the main track beyond the side track. The incoming train from the west was not stopped until the two locomotives "cornered" at the switch, the passenger engine being thrown into the ditch and several coaches piling upon the wreck. The cars caught fire from the locomotive.

A statement given out by officials of the railroad company explains that the switch at the east end of the siding was opened through mistake and that the responsibility probably lies with some member of the crew of the freight train. The statement placed the company's property loss at about $30,000.

President Burt Sued.

Toledo, O., Dec. 30.—Suit has been brought by Austin B. Fletcher of New York, on behalf of the creditors and stockholders of the Ann Arbor railroad, against Wellington R. Burt, president of the road, asking judgment for $5,000,000. The petition avers that Burt, as receiver of the road, mismanaged the property, concealing the amounts of money that he paid for improvements with the intention of depreciating the price of the property in the market in order that he and his associates might buy in the same at a low price. In consequence of his representations, it is claimed, Burt and his associates bought it in for $2,627,000. They immediately issued $7,000,000 of bonds against it and $7,250,000 of stock. It is claimed that this $14,250,000 is in fact something like the true value of the property, which was well known to Burt and his associates. Plaintiff seeks to recover in his own behalf and in behalf of all the creditors and stockholders the amount of their damage by the sale of the property.

Chinese Customs Passed Up.

Pekin, Dec. 30.—Considerable sensation has been caused in Chinese official circles by a dinner given at his residence by United States Minister Conger and which was attended by leading officials of Chinese foreign office. Among those present were Ma Tung, a former "boxer" leader, and Wang Wen Shao, one of the Chinese plenipotentiaries. The dinner was attended by sevaral American ladies. It was formerly the custom for prominent Chinese officials never to enter a foreign legation except upon the most formal occasions, while the meeting of foreign ladies socially would have been considered as degrading as would the associating with Chinese women upon the same footing. This event is significant of the progressive tendency of today which has recently been manifested in many ways.

RURAL EDUCATION EXPENSIVE.

Supt. Fall Gives Important Statistics and Advocates Remedies.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Dec. 30.—The Michigan Teachers' association completed its forty-ninth annual meeting Saturday and adjourned after one of the best sessions of the series. What proved to be one of the most interesting features of the entire convention came at the close when the symposium on present educational problems was introduced by the president. More interesting than any other of the papers presented on account of the subject, perhaps, was that on "Administration of Rural Schools," by Superintendent of Public Instruction Delos Fall.

"A great impediment to progress under our present system is the fact that the reports from school directors show to a very great extent small schools prevail. Last year 83 schools in the state had an average attendance of three or less; over 400, an average of seven or less; and nearly 1,000, an average of attendance of less than ten. In 1,004 schools containing an enrollment of 15 pupils the average cost per pupil per month is $4.16. While the average cost per pupil per month in city schools varies, but in no case have we found it more than $1.94.

"The foregoing figures show that the people in the small rural districts are paying very much more per capita than the people in the cities, and at the same time have but little more than one-half as much school. In my opinion the remedy lies in the consolidation of districts, and the establishment of central high schools. Three methods have been suggested by which the central high school may be realized. The first, which is known as the Illinois plan, by which the smaller and weaker districts are consolidated so that the number in each township shall be reduced to about four. A fifth district is made in the center of the township, and a high school building erected large enough to accommodate the children of all grades who live in that district, and all the high school pupils from the entire township.

"A second, known as the Ohio plan, consists of the abandonment of all the district schools in the township and the massing of all the pupils into one central school. It has been found that this work can be done at an expense not exceeding the original cost of maintaining the separate district schools.

"A third plan is that suggested by the law passed by the last legislature of Michigan known as the Humphrey rural high school bill. This law is only applicable to townships in which there is not already existing a village or graded school. There is no provision made for the transportation of the pupils, which is a necessary part of the plan. It seems necessary that some plan of consolidation with a central high school is the only solution of this important question."

The speaker pointed out many collateral advantages which would arise from the establishment of a central rural school. Strong resolutions along the lines of those adopted by the committee, and presented Friday, were adopted by the State Teachers' convention. They call for a longer term of office for the superintendent in Michigan, for the changing of spelling of words not now spelled as they are pronounced, and for the carrying out of the idea of a centralization of the rural school system.

Tricky Oleo Men.

Munising, Mich., Dec. 30.—The officers of the pure food commission say that they have discovered a novel method of evasion of the oleo law, and several arrests of local grocers may follow. The plan as outlined by the deputy commissioners is for the dealer to have two kinds of oleo in stock, one of which is the regulation axle-grease colored article, the other being colored to resemble the sweetest product of the dairy. The firm displays the former as oleo and the latter as butter. When a customer asks for oleo he is shown the white grease, when for butter, the yellow is produced.

Marquette's New Station.

Marquette, Mich., Dec. 30.—It now seems probable that the new depot which has been in the course of erection for some time by the South Shore railroad, will be opened for business by Jan. 1. The structure is ample in size, and cost $25,000. It will contain on the second floor the offices of the general officers of the road. The material used is Port Wing brown sandstone.

New Railroad Completed.

Munising, Mich., Dec. 30.—The Marquette & Northwestern railroad has completed its line of 27 miles to Lawson, where it joins the Munising railway. It was necessary to shovel the snow from the greater part of the last five miles, in order to lay the rails, but the work trains can now make the trip at any time. The road will not go into service until May.

Children and Matches.

Flint, Mich., Dec. 30.—Children playing with matches set fire to a feather bed in one of the upper rooms of a house on Fifth street east. The youngsters fled but said nothing of what they had done, and the inmates knew nothing of the matter until the fire department arrived on the scene and extinguished the blaze, which was seen by a passerby.

People who quarrel about trifles seldom ever have anything else to quarrel about.

J. W. Bryan, of Lowder, Ill., writes. "My little boy was very low with pneumonia. Unknown to the doctor, we gave him Foley's Honey and Tar. The result was magical and puzzled the doctor, as it immediately stopped the racking cough and he quickly recovered." J. J. Orr.

Strange Facts About Animals.

Have you ever noticed that all animals which chew the cud are cloven footed? Also that most of those which drink water by suction are herbivorous, the carnivorous variety lapping it with the tongue, like the cat, dog, tiger, etc. Sheep have no teeth in the upper jaw, and tortoises and turtles are without altogether.

Unlike most animals, horses have no eyebrows, and hares are minus eyelids. Consequently the eyes of the latter cannot be shut, and a thin membranous substance covers them when asleep. The eye of the owl is also very peculiar, seeing that it is immovably fixed in its socket and cannot stir in any direction. To compensate for this seeming disadvantage it can turn its head almost completely round without moving its body. If you were to keep a frog's mouth open many minutes, it would soon die, as owing to its peculiar construction it can only breathe with the mouth closed.

On the other hand, fishes are compelled to keep opening and closing their mouths in order to give their respiratory organs full play. It is also a strange fact that the deer has additional breathing places besides the nostrils, as if nature had foreseen his great need of free respiration when forced to flee before the hounds. Snakes usually have their teeth in the head, but one variety in Africa, whose principal food is eggs, is provided with a substitute for them in its stomach

Terrible Effect of Eloquence.

An unfortunate man has obtained access to rich Baron Rapineau. He depicts his misfortunes, his misery, in so moving a manner that the baron, with tears in his eyes and his voice choked with sobs, calls to his servant:

"Jean, put this poor fellow out in the street! He is breaking my heart!"—

ROUND ABOUT US.

Ice boating is a favorate pastime just now at Sand lake. Geo. Bowerfind, Ed Stebbins and Roy Rogers, of Adrian, made the run from Monaghan's cove to Putman's hotel, last Sunday, a distance of something over a mile in 55 seconds.—Exchange.

Mrs. Julia Deusler came out this year as usual with the banner flock of geese, and again sold the majority of them to O. R. Pierce. Mrs. Deusler dressed 50 of them Friday and brought them to town. They were beauties, and Mr. Pierce took the whole lot, paying $62.50 for them.—Hudson Gazette.

A law suit over a barrel of rain water which a neighboring farmer's cattle drank up, was the cause of a suit which occupied the attention of an Ypsilanti justice court Monday. The complainant was awarded a verdict of 6 cents damages—hardly enough to pay for the water consumed by the thirsty bovines.—Ex

About 2 o'clock Saturday morning Claude H Cooper was called out of bed to answer the door bell, and mistaking the cellar door for the one leading into the sitting room, stepped forward and landed in a heap on the floor below. One ankle, a knee and both wrists were hurt badly and he was otherwise injured.—Adrian Times.

Alexander Gunn has just died at Abilene, Kan., at the age of 116 years. He left behind him nine sons of Gunns and six daughters. Gunn was a great temperance man and never in his life came home loaded. In the campaigns he was a regular breech-loader, and shot forth his arguments right and left. It was quite a sight to see his children looking up his barrel of money and dividing the wad between them.—Adrian Times.

J. Rox Cartwright, of the Lyons Herald, came to Adrian "the day before Christmas" and though not in any way connected with a menagerie, brought with him Miss Lyon, also of Lyons, and when they return to Lyons, there will be one less Lyon than when he and Miss Lyon left Lyons. Our young editorial coworker and his winsome bride have the hearty congratulations of the craft. They spent Christmas in Chicago.—Adrian Press

Miss Emelie Tag went over to Tecumseh Monday afternoon on the train. When she took the train back that night she was very much surprised to find her brother Fred aboard and asked him what he was doing there. When he asked her if she did not know that Willie had been drowned it came as a terrible shock. Her parents not knowing just where to find her had sent no word and this was the first she knew that her youngest brother was dead. Little we know when we start out in the morning what will happen before night—Clinton Local.

Zack S. Snell.

Zack S. Snell quietly passed away at his home last Saturday night. His health had been poor for the last four years and during the last four weeks of his life it failed rapidly. He was taken away just in the prime of life, he being but 49 years of age and leaves a wife and two children to mourn their loss.

His parents, Calvin and Mary Snell, were among the first settlers of Tecumseh, coming from Pennsylvania in the early thirties. They located in this county, their first home being at Lenawee Junction, from there they moved to this village and built what is now the Lilley House block. Seven children were born to them; two, Barbary and Frank, in Pennsylvania and five in Tecumseh, Mich., Amaliza, George, William, Zack and Charles. William and Frank died in the year 1861 and it seems the family were still to suffer loss, for the same year the father, Calvin Snell, was taken away and upon the mother fell all the family cares, until the year 1878 when the angel of Death again knocked at the door and claimed her.

In the year 1881 on Christmas eve Zack Snell was united in marriage to Ella M. Slater, by whom he has had two children, Perley R. born in 1883 and Roy L. born in 1889. Zack S. was a painter by trade, and it was while acting in that capacity that he was taken with rheumatism, this was in 1897 and for four years has been a constant sufferer, the rheumatism having settled in his knee, thus making him a cripple, but he bore the burden without complaint, until health began to fail him so rapidly that he found in necessary to leave off labor, even then he would not give up, and for four weeks he was able to walk about the street, until the 18th of Dec., when he climbed the stairs for the last time, and from this time on he gradually failed and passed away at 11:35 o'clock, on the 29th anniversary of their marriage. Thence from us goes a man, loved by all who knew him and worshiped by all his family. The funeral will be held from the house Tuesday, Dec. 31st at two o'clock, Rev. C. C. Kemp conducted the services.

At Home In the Spring.

Nelson, B. C., Dec. 18, 1901.

Not wishing to lose any copies of the paper, I write to request that you send as you have and I will settle on my return, which will be in the early spring if not before. We have had very cold weather while the snow has been on the mountains. A month before it has been warm and spring like, pansies and sweet peas in blossom in the yard Thanksgiving day. The sun rises now at 9:30, sets at 1:45.

FLORIDA LETTER

Written by a former Tecumseh man

ELMER HAUSE

Who now Resides in Sorrento, Fla.

Sorrento, Fla., Dec. 25, 1901.

DEAR HERALD:—

We wish you a Merry Christmas, will tell you of this Christmas day in Florida, at 2 p. m, the thermometer indicates 80 in the shade with a cloudless sky, a frost has quieted insects and we now enjoy a most perfect climate with orange trees green and all right for a crop of fruit another year. Our village of Sorrento is putting on its former style of thrift, tourist are coming, health seekers are here.

Dr. E. E. Howard, of Atlantic City, N. J., has purchased the Frank Burman property and converting it into a sanitarium for consumptives, but will have his patients live in canvass tents in the pine groves within the healing influences of its balsam with which the atmosphere is freighted.

This location is most favorable of all Florida as a health resort being high rolling pine lands far enough from the ocean to escape the fog or damp atmosphere, good roads free of dust or mud the year round. The citizens here are blessed with a milkman, who furnishes good rich milk and fresh (Jersey cows) butter, which is a treat to those that in former years have been obliged to resort to the tin can for milk, condensed.

Very little fuel is needed to keep one comfortable in this climate and that is furnished at the door for one dollar a cord, stove wood, prepared. Cost of living here will compare favorably with that of the north, with a heap more enjoyment out of the cold. Yours,

E. HAUSE.

Resolutions of Respect.

Again we are called to record the death of one of our members, Dr. Leman Barnes, who departed this life Nov. 26, 1901, being an honorary member of the W. F. M. S. for many years and being in full sympathy with its work and believing it to be one of the most efficient methods of Christianizing the world. We always found him helpful in every way, sacrificing ease and comfort to lend assistance where needed. And whereas, he has endeared himself to us by his gentle ways, wise counsel and faithfulness to duty,

RESOLVED, that we extend to Sister Barnes, our president, most loving and heartfelt sympathy in this her great affliction.

Power of an Inch of Rain.

"Fine shower we had last night," said a talkative man.

"Yes," answered the thoughtful man. "How much rain fell?"

"The weather report says just an inch."

"Do you know what that means?" asked the other as he took a pencil from his pocket and began to figure.

"It means clearing the air, laying the dust and furnishing needed moisture for vegetation and for us, I suppose."

"But have you ever thought what it means in power?" continued the thoughtful man. "You said an inch of rain. Now, see these figures. New York city contains 308 square miles of surface, and one inch of water over that would measure 715,455,600 cubic feet, which at 63 pounds—which is the weight of a cubic foot of water—makes 45,079,372,800 pounds, or 22,539,686 tons. Can you realize it?

"Now, what comes down has gone up, and this water fell about 5,000 feet. Old Sol had quite a pull to get that moisture up there, for a mechanical engineer will tell you that that represents the expenditure of nearly 2,500,000,000,000 foot pounds of energy. It's sad that we can't hitch machinery to that power without having to take it secondhand through coal."—New York Herald.

He Wouldn't Interfere.

An old Scotchman went to stay for a short time, as he said, with friends of his, a young couple with no family. After living with them for some two or three weeks the young couple began to get tired of their visitor, but did not like to tell him the state of their feelings toward him, so they arranged a little plan between them as to how they would get rid of him.

"Tomorrow," said the husband, "when I come home for dinner, I shall quarrel about the soup and say it is not good. In the midst of our quarrel we will appeal to our friend, and if he takes your part I will give him notice to leave the house, and if he takes my part you do just the same."

Next day at dinner the "quarrel" arose about the soup, and in the heat of the argument "uncle" was appealed to, but he coolly replied:

"Ye see, ma freens, for a' the time I intend tae be here—just a month or twa—I hae made up ma mind no tae interfere wi' ye'r hoose affairs."

A Story of Wendell Phillips.

At the close of the civil war and before he was well known Wendell Phillips, the distinguished abolitionist, went to Charleston and put up at a hotel. He had breakfast served in his room and was waited upon by a slave. Mr. Phillips seized the opportunity to represent to the negro in a pathetic way that he regarded him as a man and a brother and, more than that, that he himself was an abolitionist. The negro, however, seemed more anxious about his breakfast than he was about his position in the social scale or the condition of his soul, and finally Mr. Phillips became discouraged and told him to go away, saying that he could not bear to be waited on by a slave.

"You must 'scuse me, massa," said the negro. "I is 'bliged to stay here 'cause I'm 'sponsible for de silverware."

Got His Money.

When King Edward VII. was an undergraduate at Oxford, he was a great huntsman, and few men could beat him across country. On one occasion his royal highness and some other riders galloped into a farmyard by way of a short cut. The farmer, a sturdy yeoman, closed the gates and told the huntsmen they must pay £1 apiece for trespass.

One of the gentlemen smiled indulgently at the rustic and said, "But, my good man, this is the Prince of Wales."

The good man was in nowise abashed and retorted, "Prince or no prince, I'll have my money." And he got it.

A Lost Chance.

"He that will not when he may" is likely to repent his indecision for many a long day afterward. A lady who had spent a weary hour in "beating down" the salesman at a Turkish shop in Paris returned the next day prepared to purchase. "I believe you said 20 francs," she began, taking out her purse.

"Ninety, madame!" answered the smiling Turk.

"But you came down to twenty!"

"Ah, that was yesterday, madame! Everything goes up again in the night!"

KNOWING HOW PAYS.

The Moral of this old, old Anecdote Will save a Heap of Trouble and a Pile of Money.

Something had gone wrong with some simple part of a stationary engine, and the stoker could not fix it. After spending a day or two on it, he was forced to ask the aid of a more competent workman. He failed also, and some one suggested the employment of a local celebrity, a sort of tinker at any mechanical job. There is generally one in every locality. He gave two or three raps with his hammer and touched up rod or two, when the pounding or whatever ailed the machine, ceased. When asked to make out his bill, it read as follows: Fixing engine, 50 cents; knowing how, $10.

This anecdote clearly demonstrates that it pays to know how. Engineer J. J. Jeffries of the Royal Cycle Works at Marshall, Mich., residing in that city at No. 141 S. Marshall street tells in the following of his experience with the little conqueror; it will pay you to know how he got rid of a troublesome companion, he says:

"My kidneys troubled me more or less for years and finally became so bad that I was compelled to give up locomotive engineering on account of jarring of the train and seek employment as a stationary engineer. When the attacks of kidney complaint occurred I could not rest or lie comfortably in any position and often in the mornings after a restless night I was more tired and worn out than when I went to bed. When the attacks were at their height I was unable to stoop or lift anything and despite the use of every remedy that came to my notice, preparations recommended to me by my acquaintances numerous plasters of all kinds worn day and night I was unsuccessful in procuring anything to help me until I tried Doan's Kidney Pills. The first box helped me. I steadily improved while taking the second and I stopped the treatment when I had finished the third, as I considered there was no more necessity for continuing the remedy."

Moon and Mirror.

Some night when the moon is at its full and the air is free from haze go outdoors with a hand mirror and hold it so that the moon's image will fall on it. Make the experiment, preferably, when the moon is well up in the heavens.

Instead of seeing one image, as you will expect, you will see four.

One of these images will be very bright, but the other three will be dull, like unburnished silver.

They will be in a straight line, one of the dull images on one side of the bright image and two on the other side of it. Turn the mirror slowly around, and the images will appear to revolve around on a common center.

The explanation of this queer little phenomenon may be found in the fact that there are two surfaces in a mirror, one in front and the other in the back, where the quicksilver is.

The brightest of the images is from the moon itself. The others are what are known as secondary images, reflected from the front to the back of the mirror and thence to the eye.

A similar experiment may be made with the planets Venus, Jupiter and Mars or with any of the first magnitude stars, such as Sirius, Capella, Arcturus, Vega and Antares.

The planets and the stars, however, make only three images, the number of images depending on the breadth of the object. A perfectly clear night is essential.—New York Herald.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address,

There is a condition that a great many people get into these days., not sick abed, able to be around but never feeling well, weak and the least exertion tuckers them out. As months go on they become weaker until, resistence to disease is practically overcome. It was directly for this class that Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Pills were formulated, they provide the lacking element that is wanted, Nerve Force.

Mrs. Edgar Packard, of Tecumseh, Mich., says: "Until I tried Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Pills sold at Chas. A. The return party given by the young men at the Clintonian hotel Friday evening was a success socially and financially. The ball room presented a very pretty scene as nearly fifty couple opened the dance with a two step to the music of Jackson's orchestra of Adrian. At 12 o'clock in the prettily decorated dining hall Landlord and Mrs. Gilmore served a most elegant banquet to which everybody expressed praise and pronounced them royal caterers. Turner's Toast.

Turner, the painter, was a ready wit. Once at a dinner of artists and literary men a minor poet, by way of being facetious, proposed as a toast "the health of the painters and glaziers of Great Britain."

The toast was drunk, and Turner, after returning thanks for it, proposed "the health of the British paper stainers."

Inquisitive Penguins.

We often met companies of six or eight or more penguins promenading on the arctic ice pack in the sunshine. When they saw us, they generally exhibited curiosity and approached to get a nearer view. I do not know if these birds have the instinct of the naturalist and take a lively interest, doubtless philosophic from their point of view, in everything new which presents itself or if the object of their investigations is entirely practical, but they certainly came near us with a distinct purpose of making examination. But if we had the misfortune to excite much curiosity they became aggressive. One would first come close to us and reconnoiter, and then, on his order, the others would advance with a menacing air, and the battle began, a battle in which we sometimes had trouble to demonstrate effectively our superior strength.—Geographical Magazine.

Question Answered.

Yes, August Flower still has the largest sale of any medicine in the civilized world. Your mothers' and grandmothers' never thought of using anything else for Indigestion or Biliousness. Doctors were scarce, and they seldom heard of Appendicitis, Nervous Prostration or Heart failure, etc. They used August Flower to clean out the system and stop fermentation of undigested food, regulate the action of the liver, stimulate the nervous and organic action of the system, and that is all they took when feeling dull and bad with headaches and other aches. You only need a few doses of Green's August Flower, in liquid form, to make you satisfied there is nothing serious the matter with you. Get Green's Prize Almanac at J. J. Orr's.

Barnum's Monkeys

"All well—all happy—lots of fun". That is the regular report from the monkey cage of Barnum's Circus ever since the keepers began dosing the monkeys with Scott's Emulsion. Consumption was carrying off two thirds of them every year and the circus had to buy new ones.

One day a keeper accidentally broke a bottle of Scott's Emulsion near the monkey cage and the monkeys eagerly lapped it up from the floor. This suggested the idea that it might do them good. Since then the monkeys have received regular doses and the keepers report very few deaths from consumption. Of course it's cheaper to buy Scott's Emulsion than new monkeys—and that suits the circus men.

Consumption in monkeys and in man is the same disease. If you have it or are threatened with it can you take the hint?

This picture represents the Trade Mark of Scott's Emulsion and is on the wrapper of every bottle.

The Dear Old Frauds.

Those old, pleasant, innocent frauds of the circus are not practiced now—the imposing, five barred gates that, as the horse approached them, were sloped into insignificant wattles and the rings through which the signorina purported to leap, but which in reality were insinuated over her by compliant attendants. And then there was that venerable jockey performance, the culmination of which was a leap from the ring to a standing position, albeit at an angle of 30 degrees, on the horse's back. In the old circuses it was the custom of the horseman to miss the crowning jump two or three times in order that a fiercer flame of interest might be kindled in the audience. After two failures the band would stop (always the presage of a moment of strain supreme), the horse's head would be loosed, he would be urged to a greater pace, and the feat would gloriously succeed. Then what a crash of brass and outburst of delight in the building, involving even the staff and ringmaster in the expression of ecstasy. Those old, simple days!—Cornhill.

Making It Clear.

To confuse a witness is generally an easy task, and lawyers know no easier way than to make a witness explain the meaning of his words, knowing that very few people can do so without getting excited. Occasionally a victim resents this nagging and answers in a spirited and unexpected manner. A lawyer was cross examining a young girl of rather haughty temper. She had testified that she had seen the defendant "shy" a book at the plaintiff, and the lawyer had seized on the word.

"Shy—shy a book? What do you mean by that? Will you explain to the court what the word 'shy' means?"

The girl leaned over the desk beneath the witness box, picked up a lawbook and threw it at the lawyer's head, who dodged just in time.

"I think the court now understands the meaning of the word 'shy,'" said the judge gravely, and the girl was allowed to finish her testimony without further interruption.—London Tit-Bits.

One Boy's Loyalty.

A New York boy was at school in Canada, and it was his first day in class. The geography lesson was called, and it was his turn to answer.

"Which is the largest city in the world?" asked the teacher.

"New York," unhesitatingly came the answer.

"I mean the largest city in the world," said the teacher.

As promptly came the reply, "New York."

"But," expostulated the teacher, "I did not say the largest city in the United States, but the largest city in the world. You surely know which is the largest city in the world."

"New York," persisted the boy.

"London has a larger population than New York," said the teacher. "If I do not have the correct answer this time, I shall have to punish you. Come now," coaxingly, "tell me the name of the largest city in the world."

"New York."

"Stay in during recess and write me fifty lines."

He wrote the fifty lines, and every line read: "The biggest city in the world is New York."—New York Tribune.

Praying and Prinking.

Sam Jones, the revivalist, was once taking women to task for spending more time in prinking than in praying. "If there's a woman here," he screamed finally, "who prays more than she prinks, let her stand up."

One poor old faded specimen of femininity in the sorriest, shabbiest of clothes arose.

"You spend more time praying than prinking?" asked the preacher, taking her all in.

The poor old creature said she did—prayed all the time, prinked none at all.

"You go straight home," admonished Jones, "and put a little time on your prinking."

The Other Way.

Teacher—I would like some one in the class to define the meaning of vice versa.

Bright Boy—It's sleeping with your feet toward the head of the bed.

He Caught the Car.

The man dashed down the street after the retreating State street car.

Every muscle was strained; his breath came in quick gasps; the beads of moisture stood out upon his forehead. His feet were working like the pedals on a bicycle. He only touched the ground in the more altitudinous places.

"I'll—catch—that—street—car," he gasped, "or die."

Faster went the street car. Faster went the man.

He overturned fruit stands and aged blind men in his wild career. He knocked down children and trampled upon them. But onward he rushed. He collided with a baby buggy. The baby was knocked into the street. The mother of the child picked it up. She pointed a finger at the disappearing form of the man. "Murderer!" she hissed through her clinched teeth.

He draws nearer to the car—nearer yet.

He reaches out his hand.

He touches the rail on the rear platform.

He gives one last convulsive effort.

He is on the car.

He sinks breathless into a seat and mops his brow. The conductor touches him on the shoulder.

Ate $25,000 Worth of Liver.

Among the many poker stories afloat a good one is told concerning Dutch Hank, a well known player of Rochester, N. Y. Hank went into Daly's place, in New York city, one day and sat in a game, winning $25,000 with very little trouble. Then he rose to go, thinking it was time to stop. Daly shook hands with him and asked him what was his hurry. Hank said he would have to go to a Dutch restaurant he knew where they always cooked liver in a way that he particularly liked.

"Oh, if that's all," said Daly, "just stay here. We can serve the liver just that way, and you can go right on playing."

Dutch Hank had left some friends outside waiting, but he said he would stay and eat the liver. He sat down and ate and played. His $25,000 soon went back to Daly in a turn of luck. Hank went out without a cent.

"What kept you so long?" his friends demanded.

"Well, you don't suppose a man can eat $25,000 worth of liver in a minute, do you?" was the retort of Hank.

The Tempter Won.

When the late Baron Nordenskjold was at Ceylon on the way home from his journey along the northern coast of Siberia, he received a telegram from the Russian government asking him whether he would accept from the czar a certain decoration as an appreciation of his services to Russia. For many days the famous explorer wavered, as he was a member of Bjorsterne Bjornson's Antidecoration club, whose members were solemnly pledged never to accept any decoration from anybody. Nordenskjold, however, could not resist the temptation, so he replied to the telegram in the affirmative.

It is not hard to imagine his disappointment when, upon reaching home, a friend of his, a high official, told him the following: "The Russian government was well aware of your antagonistic views in regard to decorations and had, therefore, placed in readiness 300,000 rubles to be paid you in the event of your refusing to accept the insignia, but before paying that sum they wanted to try your firmness. Russia is certainly grateful to you for your failure to live up to your pledge."

The Lamps of the Sea.

Many kinds of jellyfish are phosphorescent at night and present a wonderfully beautiful appearance when slowly moving through the water, and it is this phosphorescence which has given them the poetic title of "the lamps of the sea." They are not less beautiful in the daytime, for most of the species are striped or tinted, some being melon shaped, with rows of fringes dividing the sections. The tentacles are often plumed, and, while waving about in graceful curves, attract or gather in the food of the animal. The "Portuguese man-of-war" is probably the best known, as well as most attractive in form, of the whole family.

His Gift.

Mrs. Wyles—Did your husband give you anything for a birthday present?

Mrs. Styles—Indeed he did.

"Did it have your name on it?"

"Yes, and my husband's name too."

"That's just like selfish men. He must share the gift with you."

"But he didn't."

"What was his name doing on it then?"

"It wouldn't have been any good without it. It was a check."

What's In a Name?

Voltaire under a fictitious name offered to the Comedie Francaise a play entitled "Le Droit du Seigneur." It was promptly rejected as badly written and poor in rhyme, but when he offered the same manuscript a second time under the title of "L'Ecueil du Sage" and signed with his own name it was accepted with enthusiasm and universally declared admirable.

A Neighbor's Grief.

Mrs. Stutson—Oh, I'm so sorry! It used to take up Fido's time so pleasantly barking at her.—Boston Transcript.

An Unusual Race.

An unusual race was advertised to be run at Ripon, in Yorkshire, in 1725: "The Lady's Plate, of £15 value, by any horse that was no more than five years old the last grass. Women to be the riders. Each to pay a guinea entrance. Three heats and twice round the common for a heat."

"For Ways That Are Dark," Etc.

"Some years ago," says the advertising agent of a tobacco firm quoted by the Philadelphia Record, "I wished to introduce among the Chinese a two for five cigar that my people were heavily interested in, and I decided to draw up a little card extolling this cigar in Chinese characters.

"I sought out Lo Hen Wong in San Francisco, a very intelligent fellow, and got him to write me a few sentences in praise of my article. I had what he wrote lithographed and distributed the cards by thousands in all the Chinatowns of the United States. They were inscribed with a picture of the cigar, and below were the words: 'Smoke this cigar. It is the best on the market, and two for five is its price.'

"That, at least, is what I thought was the meaning of the Chinese characters. I found out, some six months later, my mistake. The words Lo Hen Wong had written and which I had had lithographed were: 'Don't smoke this cigar. It is not good. But the Gong company's cigarettes, for sale in every Chinatown at 3 cents a package, are excellent.'

"Lo Hen Wong had got $10 from me for his work, and I don't know how much he got from the Gong company. We distributed many thousands of the cards before we got on to the trick that had been played on us."

Old Names In London.

If London street names are not always what they seem, the names of the great parishes usually are. Take Lambeth, for instance. That vast district has retained its name practically unaltered since the days of Edward the Confessor, who granted a charter in which it is styled Lambehith. Some illiterate scribe, who helped in the making of "Domesday," did, indeed, make an effort to obliterate its real name by calling it Lanchei, but his efforts were, fortunately, in vain. William Rufus in another charter named it Lambeth, since when it has kept its title unsullied.

In the old days Lambehith (from hithe, a haven) was the great river port whence agricultural produce was ferried across the Thames to the more populous country opposite. There are still many "hithes" left us, such as Queenhithe and Rotherhithe, and, although their original functions have gone, there still remains a shadow to remind us of their departed glory.—London Chronicle.

How to Make Chop Suey.

For those who like or who think they would like the famous Chinese dish, chop suey, the following recipe, which any intelligent housewife can follow, was given by W. E. S. Fales, for several years vice consul at Amoy:

"For four persons two chickens' livers, two chickens' gizzards, one pound young, clean pork cut into small pieces, half an ounce of green root ginger and two stalks of celery. Saute this in a frying pan over a hot fire, adding four tablespoonfuls of olive oil, one tablespoonful of vinegar, half a cupful of boiling water, one teaspoonful of worcestershire sauce, half a teaspoonful of salt, black and red pepper to taste and a dash of cloves and cinnamon. When nearly done, add a small can of mushrooms, half a cupful of either bean sprouts or French green peas or string beans chopped fine or asparagus tips. The see-yu sauce which is eaten with this delectable dish can be procured at any Chinese grocery."

Be Prepared.

Daniel Webster once told a friend that his great speech in reply to Hayne, which is the high water mark of modern eloquence, but which at the time was supposed to have been delivered without preparation, had been substantially prepared long before. When called upon suddenly to reply to the fiery Carolinian's attacks, which so alarmed the New Englanders at the capital, he was entirely at ease and ready for the fray, for, as he said, he had "only to turn to his notes tucked away in a pigeonhole," and refresh his recollection. "If Hayne," he said, "had tried to make a speech to fit my notes, he could not have hit them better. No man is inspired by the occasion. I never was."

Left and Right Limbs.

Physiologists and scientists in general have been making some curious experiments with a view to determine the relative length and strength of "right and left limbs." Fifty and nine-tenths per cent of the men examined had the right arm stronger than the left, 16.4 per cent had the two arms of equal length and strength, and 32.7 per cent had the left arm stronger than the right. Of women, 46.9 per cent had the right arm stronger than the left, and 24.5 per cent had the left stronger than the right.—London Family Doctor.

The Black Maria.

The following is given as the origin of the term "Black Maria:" When New England was filled with emigrants from the mother country, a negress named Maria Lee kept a sailors' boarding house in Boston. She was a woman of great strength and helped the authorities to keep the peace. Frequently the police invoked her aid, and the saying, "Send for Black Maria," came to mean, "Take him to jail." British seamen were often taken to the lockup by this amazon, and the stories they spread of her achievements led to the name of Black Maria being given to the English prison van.

Where Smoking Is a Crime.

There is one country in the world where it is considered a crime to smoke. Abyssinia is the region, and the law forbidding tobacco dates from the year 1642. It was at first merely intended to prevent priests from smoking in the churches, but it was taken too literally, and nowadays even foreigners have to be careful not to be seen smoking.

F. A. WERMAN, OF BALTIMORE, SAYS:

BALTIMORE, Md., March 30, 1901.

Gentlemen: — Being entirely cured of deafness, thanks to your treatment, I will now give you a full history of my case, to be used at your discretion.

About five years ago my right ear began to sing, and this kept on getting worse, until I lost my hearing in this ear entirely.

I underwent a treatment for catarrh, for three months, without any success, consulted a number of physicians, among others, the most eminent ear specialist of this city, who told me that only an operation could help me, and even that only temporarily, that the head noises would then cease, but the hearing in the affected ear would be lost forever.

I then saw your advertisement accidentally in a New York paper, and ordered your treatment. After I had used it only a few days according to your directions, the noises ceased, and to-day, after five weeks, my hearing in the diseased ear has been entirely restored. I thank you heartily and beg to remain Very truly yours,

A GRAND AFFAIR

President Met Eight Thousand People New Year's.

IN WHITE HOUSE BLUE ROOM

The Day an Ideal One and President and Mrs. Roosevelt in Excellent Spirits—Miss Alice and a Number of Girl Friends Assisted.

Washington, Jan. 2.—President Roosevelt's first public reception was attended more largely than any New Year's reception in a number of years. In all, 8,100 persons filed through the White house and shook hands with the president. Mr. Roosevelt, on being apprised that the crowd in line outside the White house was unusually large, gave orders that the gates should not be closed until the last person desiring to do so had an opportunity to pay his respects. The reception began promptly at 11 o'clock, and it was 2:30 o'clock before the last person in line had been presented to the president, and a quarter of an hour later before the reception came to an end. The weather was delightful, being clear and crisp, so that no hardship was suffered by the throng that waited for hours before admission to the White house. The reception was in every way successful, the attendance not only being large, but the decorations really beautiful, the arrangements perfect and the president in excellent spirits. To each person he extended a cordial happy new year, and Mrs. Roosevelt was equally pleasing to each of those who filed past the line in the blue parlor, where the receiving party stood. Miss Alice Roosevelt was conspicuous among those assisting at the reception. A party of her young girl friends, by invitation, also participated in the function.

The president rounded out a very busy day by visiting the new National theater last night to witness Francis Wilson in "The Toreador." It was strictly a family party, the president being accompanied by Mrs. Roosevelt and the children. The capacious theater was crowded to the walls.

Although there was no general reception by the members of the diplomatic corps, some of them kept open house and entertained a large number of callers. Particularly was this the case with the legations from the Orient, the Chinese, Japanese and the Korean ministers being "at home" to those who came.

The Chinese new year does not occur until about a month from now, but Mr. Wu, following the practice of the country in which he is stationed, participated in the festivities of New Year's day and, assisted by the members of his suite, received many callers at the handsome home of the legation on Q street. Minister Wu always gives his friends a cup of tea, and many of them enjoyed his hospitality yesterday.

Minister Takahira of Japan and his wife celebrated New Year's day as they would at home, where the European calendar is used and where the new year is the greatest event of season. The members of the legation joined in the festivities.

At the Korean legation, New Year's day was observed much the same as in this country. A dinner was given in the evening and was attended only by gentlemen, there being no women among the household.

New District of Columbia Laws.

Washington, Jan. 2.—A new code of laws for the District of Columbia has gone into effect. The code is not a complete body of laws for the government of the district, the old Maryland statutes, the common law, and the statutes of the United States applicable to the district and acts of congress relating to the district remaining in force except where inconsistent with the new body of laws. The code was passed at the last session of congress. The feature of most popular interest is a section prohibiting the granting of divorces except for infidelity, divorces no longer being procurable for desertion, drunkenness, cruelty and other offenses against the marital relation for which a divorce formerly might be secured. There is also a considerable change made in the practice before justices of the peace, the city being divided into 10 districts, with one salaried justice in each district in place of the former fee officers, whose locations were not to any considerable extent governed by geographical distinctions.

Germany's Condition Improved.

Berlin, Jan. 2.—President Koch of the reichsbank is of the opinion that the business situation in Germany has really taken a turn for the better and believes the new year opens with somewhat better prospects. In an interview he says:

"The worst appears to be past. This is not merely my personal impression. The statement is based on reports I have received from the various parts of Germany where an improvement of the situation has begun. I must admit, coal and iron do not show improvement. In Silesia, the Rhineland and Westphalia, it appears that business cannot improve. The overproduction has been doubtless too great. When the times promised so much the works hastened to secure material, and went too far. I have read of some failures; but these do not compare in numbers or importance with those of last summer."

Warrants for Forty Persons.

Nashville, Tenn., Jan. 2.—Writs have been sworn out for the arrest of 40 alleged gamblers. The warrants were issued on the affidavit of F. K. Odil, a brother of Guy Odil, who recently lost $3,000 in the gambling houses of this city. The warrants charge the defendants with various felonies.

Eastern Train Meets With Terrible Mishap.

TWO KILLED--MANY INJURED

Happens on Grade near Glencoe, Pa. —Heavy Vestibuled Cars Saved Lives of Many—Gas Tanks Exploded and Set Fire to the Wreck.

Pittsburg, Pa., Jan. 2.—As a result of a through train on the B. & O. road jumping the track yesterday, two men are dead and 17 injured, five of whom are considered seriously hurt. Through the courtesy of General Superintendent W. R. Woodford of the Pittsburg division, the following official list of dead and injured is given.

Dead: John Collins, Connellsville, Pa., engineer. —— McCune, Connellsville, fireman.

Injured: D. J. Partella, mail clerk, Washington, D. C., seriously; William Avery, a B. & O. engineer, seriously; G. W. Ryan, Baltimore, seriously; C. A. Young, mail clerk, Hagerstown, Md., seriously; R. R. Souser, Napier, Pa., seriously; Charles Henry, Philadelphia, slightly; C. B. Smith, Allegheny; J. S. Matthews, Cheyenne, Wyo.; J. R. Watters, Huttonsville, W. Va.; M. R. McKinley, Rock Island, Ill.; M. A. Hall, Gainesville, W. Va.; F. J. Yazy, Chicago; Frank W. Brunner; S. J. Jones, Summit, Md.; E. J. Lebman, Washington; J. A. Barton, Chicago; I. N. May, Meyersdale, Pa.

The injured were all taken to Meyersdale for treatment as quickly as the relief train from Cumberland could get them there.

The train which was ditched was the through passenger which left here at 8:40 yesterday morning bound for New York. It was a full vestibuled train, composed of engine, baggage car, postal car, two coaches, sleeper and Pullman chair car. In going down the steep grade one and a half miles west of Glencoe the engine, from cause as yet unexplained, jumped the track at the curve and the entire train piled on top of it. Probably the only thing that prevented a wholesale death list was the fact that the heavy vestibuled cars did not break up in going over the embankment.

The work to rescue the injured had to be done quickly because the gas tanks in the cars were exploded and set fire to the wreckage. The flames spread rapidly and in a short time the entire train was burned. The engine was completely demolished and the two dead men when taken from the debris were horribly mangled. Collins (who went by the nickname of "Katy") was one of the oldest engineers on the road. As soon after the accident as possible a relief train with physicians and nurses was sent to the scene from Sumberland, and the injured were soon after taken to Meyersdale, Pa., where every attention is being paid them.

Y. M. C. A. Wants a Million.

New York, Jan. 2.—Although the offices of the international committee of the Y. M. C. A. in this city were kept open all of yesterday, no contributions to the million-dollar jubilee endowment fund were received. The total amount remained at Tuesday night's figure, $789,750. The Rev. Richard C. Morse of the international committee said last night that he had hopes that today's mail might bring subscriptions that would complete the fund. Of the amount subscribed, fully $300,000 is conditional on a million being raised by Jan. 1. Subscriptions sent in letter that had been mailed before Jan. 1 could be included in the fund, and that leaves a bare chance that the million may be raised.

Big Electric Combine.

New York, Jan. 2.—J. Pierpont Morgan has under way a deal of vast importance to the electrical world, involving a combined capital of $50,000,000. The Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co. of Pittsburg, and the General Electric Co., in which Morgan is the controlling factor, are to be brought together and operated under the community of interest plan. The news of the proposed merger in well-informed circles in Wall street has been officially confirmed. No statement will be made until the merger has been accomplished.

Uribe-Uribe Makes Invasion.

New York, Jan. 2.—According to cablegrams received by Dr. Restrepo, of the Colombian revolutionary junta, Gen. Uribe-Uribe, the revolutionary leader, with 3,000 men, has invaded Colombia from Venezuela. The invasion was made in the Colombian province of Santander. Uribe-Uribe is confronted by Gen. Gonzalez Valencia. In the rear of the government force is said to be a liberal army, which recently took possession of Bucuramanga. Four battalions of government troops in that town, it is said, joined the liberal forces in a body.

Think Now a Good Time.

London, Jan. 2.—It is admitted that the Alaskan boundary question is the most difficult problem that faces Hay and Pauncefote. Canada is believed to be less disposed to compromise than the imperial authorities would be if not pressed by colonial opinion, but hope is expressed that the present moment, when England's relations with America are on a favorable footing, will not be allowed to pass without a general settling up.

River Rose Forty Feet.

Chattanooga, Tenn., Jan. 2.—The Tennessee river became stationary here at 8 o'clock last night. The highest stage reached is 40.8 feet. The river is falling at all points above Chattanooga and began to fall here about midnight. But little damage has been done here by the flood.

DUCHENE DENIES IT

Deputy Game Warden Says Blackmail Charges Are False.

WAS DONE TO OUST HIM

He Wants an Investigation, and Governor Bliss and State Game Warden Morse Mean to Give Him One—Looks Like a Fight.

Lansing, Mich., Jan. 2.—Concerning the charges against Deputy Game Warden Duchene, made by the Saginaw Bay Fish Co., to the effect that Duchene had "squeezed" money out of them as a means of keeping him silent regarding certain violations of the game and fish laws, Gov. Bliss says he received an intimation a short time ago that complaints were being made and that he wrote a Saginaw fisherman to ascertain what there was to the matter. He has heard nothing from his letter, but he says that he will at once take the matter up. If there is anything wrong in the game warden's department, the governor says he wants it corrected. Gov. Bliss said yesterday that he would send for Game Warden Morse and take the matter up with him.

Bay City, Mich., Jan. 2.—Deputy Game Warden John Duchene denies the charges made against him in a letter written to Game Warden Morse by the Saginaw Bay Fish Co.

"The charges are absolutely false," said Duchene, "and are concocted to work against my reappointment. Last spring H. A. Benson, manager of the Saginaw Bay Fish Co., after several inspections which did not please him, said openly that he would make a report of my actions to the game warden and get me discharged. They are now working against my reappointment, although supporting me when the appointment was made."

Mr. Duchene says he desires an investigation. His commission expired yesterday, and he does not know whether or not it has been renewed.

In response to a telegram asking what disposition he intended making of the Duchene case, Game Warden Morse sent the following telegram:

"Portland, Mich., Jan. 1.

"Matter is being thoroughly investigated. Party will be given personal hearing before conclusion is reached. Kindly defer any reference to same until decision is had.

BIG FIRE IN MUSKEGON.

Flames Cause Destruction of $30,000 Worth Property.

Muskegon, Mich., Jan. 2.—Fire yesterday broke out in the clothing store of the A. P. Conner Co., and destroyed about $30,000 worth of property, fully insured. The fire originated in the basement from an unknown cause and spread to the adjoining department store of J. O. Jeannot & Co. The floor of the Conner store fell in, throwing about $25,000 worth of clothing into the basement, which was badly damaged by fire, smoke and water.

The stock of J. O. Jeannot & Co. was partially insured, as was that of the Leahy Dry Goods Co. and the W. D. Hardy & Co.'s department store, both of which were damaged. The loss to the four mercantile concerns will probably aggregate $28,000, while the damage to the buildings is estimated at $2,000.

Smoke permeated the entire establishment of W. D. Hardy & Co., who carried a stock ranging from $75,000 to $100,000. The same situation exists in the case of the Leahy company. It will require an inventory of the stocks to ascertain the exact loss.

A. P. Connor of the A. P. Conner Co., which is the largest sufferer, is spending New Year's with friends in Detroit.

Who Owns the Ice?

Flint, Mich., Jan. 2.—Geo. A. Cotharin and the Hughes-Mann Ice Co. cut ice on the river adjoining each other. The former has erected a barricade in the middle of the river along his reserve field which the Hughes-Mann Co. claims interferes with their work of cutting. There is a likelihood that legal steps will be taken in the matter.

MICHIGAN BRIEFS.

It is again reported that the Pennsylvania road is planning to invade the upper peninsula, together with the Cleveland Iron Cliffs railway properties.

Prof. Russell of Ann Arbor read a paper on "Geology of the Snake river plains, Idaho," Wednesday before the Geological Society of America, in session at Rochester, N. Y.

While a party of young people at Mendon were trying to ring a bell in an old church Tuesday night the bell fell from the rafter and broke into several pieces. It had not been rung in 11 years.

Railroad Commissioner Osborn will issue in a few days a complete and up-to-date map of the railroads of the state, showing in addition to previous maps the electric lines which have been constructed.

The steamer Katahdin, owned by H. W. McCormick of Bay City, has been sold to New York parties. The price was not given nor was the purchasers names. The Katahdin was built in West Bay City in 1895, is 239 feet long and measures 1,380 gross tons.

The reserve chest in the bank of H. H. Terwilliger at Montague, was finally gotten open Monday, after two weeks' work upon it. Cash to the amount of $2,500 was found in it, and also two packages of papers, one addressed to the missing man's wife and the other to his son. The contents of the papers are as yet unknown.

A Happy Investment.

Muskegon, Mich., Jan. 2.—Attorney Hiram Hoyt of this city is the happiest man in the state, and he has a right to be. Some 30 years ago he invested in a silver mine in Utah, and the thing nearly swamped him. He had assessments coming every few months, and also large holdings in this city, and when the boom "busted" here a few years ago he thought it was all off with him. He continued to meet the payment of the mine assessments, however, and a few days ago he received a check for $50,000, and was also notified that his dividends would amount to $700 per month. And now Mr. Hoyt is making some very nice presents among his relatives and friends.

PHENOMENAL YEAR

Dun's Review Will Speak Well of Year 1901.

MANUFACTURING IS FOREMOST

Such Development Has Never Been Experienced by This or Any Other Nation in the Same Length of Time —All Departments Doing Well.

New York, Jan. 1.—Dun's Review will say Jan. 4:

Most marvelous of all the phenomenal evidences of advancement in business during the year was the progress made in manufacturing. It is impossible to be too extravagant in delineating the movements of the industrial world. Never in the history of this or any other nation has such development occurred within the space of a 12 month. The expansion of productive capacity was enormous, the improved methods of work and organization were conspicuous, wise economies were introduced, but more than all other factors that made for permanent prosperity was the conservative resistance to price inflation.

Iron and Steel.

After the reaction of 1900 the level of prices remained depressed for some months, but gradually responded to the increasing demand as excessive accumulations were absorbed. From a condition of glut there arose almost a famine, greatly exaggerated by the stubborn strike. Some idea of the changes in size of supplies may be found in the comparison of furnace stocks of pig iron, as published in the Iron Age, which amounted to 584,663 tons on Jan. 1. These figures declined throughout the year until only 223,462 tons were held on Dec. 1.

Coal and Coke.

All records of output for hard and soft coal were surpassed during 1901, despite the scarcity of cars that retarded operations. A feature of great advantage was the expanding export movement, which reached more encouraging proportions than in earlier years. In ten months the value of shipments was $19,087,353, against $17,820,864 the year previous. Coke ovens made a phenomenal record, establishing a new high water mark of weekly output at 244,529 tons late in November.

Market for Wool.

Further declines occurred in the price of this staple during the opening months of 1901, and the bottom was not reached until July 1, when 100 grades, according to Coates Bros.' circular, were quoted at 17.06c. This represented a loss of 31 per cent from the high point of 24.70 in December, 1899. With the absorption of surplus stocks and general revival in the industry, the turning point was reached in September. Further strength and activity was in evidence each succeeding month.

Produce Markets.

While 1900 was the best year ever experienced by domestic interests, the opening year of the new century was in many ways more profitable and the two together have put the farming population in much the most satisfactory position in the nation's history.

Meats naturally reflected the expensive position of fodder, and it was gratifying to notice that exports were not materially reduced by the high level.

Crop estimates were also far apart, causing irregularity and a tendency to await more definite information. The crop year opened with a new record of wheat and flour exports, amounting to 34,130,380 bushels in August, far surpassing any previous month, while for five months ending Nov. 30, the aggregate was 126,928,162 bushels.

No Alliance Formed.

Washington, Jan. 1.—An authoritative denial is made of the report that an alliance has been formed between Chile and Colombia for offensive and defensive purposes. It appears, however, that it grew out of a recent visit of a Chilean commissioner to Bogota, with a view to influencing the Colombian government in its attitude before the congress of American republics at Mexico City. The exchanges were very cordial and a friendly feeling was created between the two countries; but there has been no alliance, secret or otherwise, between them.

The Bones of a Martyr.

Louisville, Ky., Jan. 1.—A package containing the bones and dried blood of St. Magnus, a Roman centurian, and St. Bonaso, a Roman virgin, who were martyred in the time of Nero, arrived from Rome at the office of the surveyor of the port in Louisville yesterday. The relics will be placed under the altar of St. Martin's Catholic church in this city. They were taken from the catacombs more than 200 years ago and have since rested in the Church of the Convent of Agnai, near Rome.

Remembered His Employes.

New York, Jan. 1.—By the will of Edward Kemp, the millionaire druggist, which was filed for probate yesterday, $50,000 is bequeathed to employes who have been in his firm for five years or longer. To his widow, Augusta, he leaves $100,000 and his household effects absolutely, a country seat of 500 acres in Monmouth county, New Jersey, and the income of the rest of the estate. At his widow's death his nephews, George and Edward Kemp, Jr., are to have $160,000 each.

Crew of "Fitch" Saved.

San Juan, P. R., Jan. 1.—A German bark has arrived at Ponce, having on board Capt. Parker and the crew of the oil-laden American four-masted schooner James W. Fitch of Boston, bound from New York to the River Plate. The captain and the crew of the Fitch were picked up in the western West Indies. The Fitch was burned to the water's edge.

A STORY OF TWO FLAGS.

How a Man's Life Was Saved at the Very Last Moment.

The following stirring incident of the two flags happened at Valparaiso, Chile, and was related at Montreal in 1881 by the Rev. Dr. J. O. Peck. Dr. Peck said:

"The man who gave me the facts I am about to relate was Mr. Haskins, an American sailor who had sailed to a port in Chile. On going ashore, he said, to enjoy his day of liberty he drank a little and became hilarious. One of the police officers, instead of warning him not to make a noise in the street, drew his sword and, striking him a blow, knocked him down. On that the American sailor got up and knocked the policeman down in return. He was on that arrested and tried and condemned to be shot in the morning of the following day.

"Mr. Loring, the American consul, expostulated with the authorities that it would be monstrous to shoot the man for such an offense, but they paid no attention to him, so he thereupon made a formal protest in the name of the United States government against the barbarous act. Mr. Haskins, the sailor, was in the morning brought out pinioned to be shot.

"As the English consul was preparing to hoist the union jack he saw the crowd in the field opposite, where the execution of the American sailor, of which he had heard, was to take place. Rushing over the American consul, he said, 'Loring, you're not going to let them shoot that man!'

"'What can I do?' he said. 'I have protested against it. I can do no more.'

"Quick as thought the English consul shouted, 'Give me your flag!' And in a trice the stars and stripes were handed to the English representative. At once, taking his own union jack in his hand, he hastened across the field, elbowed his way through the crowd and soldiery, and, running up to the doomed man, he folded the American flag around him and then laid the union jack over it. Standing a few paces back, he faced the officers and soldiers and shouted defiantly, 'Now, shoot, if you dare, through the heart of England and America!'

"And they dared not do it, for they feared the consequences, so the man was at once released. In telling me," said Dr. Peck, "Mr. Haskins said to me, with tears streaming down his cheeks even then, 'They loosed me then, and, oh, how I longed to embrace those two flags!'"—Anglo-American.

POULTRY POINTERS.

A safe rule in feeding is to give enough to satisfy and no more.

Droppings should not be allowed to accumulate in the poultry house longer than a week.

Bone dust supplies an abundance of bonemaking material and counteracts any tendency to diarrhea.

When possible, give the poultry house a southern exposure and furnish that side with an abundance of light.

While wheat is one of the best grains to feed to fowls, it should not be fed to excess or it may cause diarrhea. Feed it with other grains.

Loss of feathers is generally caused by want of green food or want of a dust bath. Supply both, and, as a local application, use mercurial ointment.

Breed the best flesh formers for market; then feed them up to as great a weight as possible. Well fattened, well dressed poultry bring the best prices.

A Point of Order.

One of the conspicuous features in the decorations of a certain official building is a full length portrait of George Washington. Being just behind the speaker's chair, it is in full sight of everybody who rises to speak. During a heated discussion, which involved the honor of the state and nation, a member rose and, pointing to the portrait, began in oratorical style. "By those eyes that never quailed before an enemy, by that nose"—

Then he was interrupted by a member in the rear, who rose to a point of order.

"Mr. Chairman," said the objector, "I claim it is out of order under parliamentary rules to call the ayes and noes in a committee of the whole."—New York Times.

Of Course She Was Glad.

"So you overcame that old antipathy of yours," her husband remarked, "and called on Mrs. Bobbles?"

"Yes."

"Do you think she was glad to see you?"

"I am sure of it."

"Ahem! You must have some reason for that belief outside of her assurances."

"I have. I had on the old dress that was made over twice, my hat was out of style, and my hair had become uncurled, while she had on a gown that could not have come from anywhere but Paris. Could she help being glad to see me?"—Leslie's Weekly.

Harvard University.

Harvard university derives its name from Rev. John Harvard, its earliest benefactor, who in 1638 bequeathed one-half of his estate, amounting to £800, for the endowment of the college. Harvard hall was built in 1765, Holworthy hall of brick in 1812 and Hollis Hall, also of brick, in 1764. Stoughton hall, being of the same dimensions and material as Hollis, was built in 1804, and a writer of 1817 states that "its appearance is somewhat in the modern style."—Boston Budget.

THE COURIER OF THE CZAR

By Jules Verne

CHAPTER VIII.

THE blow which had struck Michael Strogoff was not mortal. By swimming in a manner by which he had effectually concealed himself he had reached the right bank, where he fell exhausted among the bushes.

When he recovered his senses, he found himself in the cabin of a mujik, who had picked him up and cared for him and to whom he owed his life. For how long a time had he been the guest of this brave Siberian? He could not guess, but when he opened his eyes he saw the handsome bearded face bending over him and regarding him with pitying eyes. He was about to ask where he was when the mujik, anticipating him, said:

"Do not speak, little father, do not speak. Thou art still too weak. I will tell thee where thou art and everything that has passed since I brought thee to my cabin."

And the mujik related to Michael Strogoff the different incidents of the struggle which he had witnessed—the attack upon the ferry by the Tartar boats, the pillage of the tarantass and the massacre of the boatmen.

But Michael Strogoff listened no longer, and, slipping his hand under his garment, he felt the imperial letter still secured in his breast.

He breathed a sigh of relief. But that was not all.

"A young girl accompanied me," said he.

"They have not killed her," replied the mujik, anticipating the anxiety which he read in the eyes of his guest. "They have carried her off in their boat and have continued the descent of the Irtish. It is only one prisoner more to join so many others which they are taking to Tomsk."

Michael Strogoff was unable to reply. He pressed his hand upon his heart to restrain its beating.

But, notwithstanding these many trials, the sentiment of duty mastered his whole soul.

He remembered the errand which he had undertaken. Indeed never by day or night was his emperor's mission for even a moment absent from his mind. Not the presence of the greatest danger, the tortures of hunger and thirst, the weariness of excessive fatigue, not even all combined could cause him to forget that a momentous matter was intrusted to his courage, his zeal, his fidelity and his endurance. Michael Strogoff was worthy of this trust.

"Where am I?" asked he.

"Upon the right bank of the Irtish, only five versts from Omsk," replied the mujik.

"What wound can I have received which could have thus prostrated me? It was not a gunshot wound?"

"No; a lance thrust upon the head, now healing," replied the mujik. "After a few days' rest, little father, thou wilt be able to proceed. Thou didst fall into the river, but the Tartars neither touched nor searched thee, and thy purse is still in thy pocket."

Michael Strogoff gripped the mujik's hand. Then, recovering himself with a sudden effort, "Friend," said he, "how long have I been in thy hut?"

"Three days."

"Three days lost!"

"Three days hast thou lain unconscious."

"Hast thou a horse to sell me?"

"Thou wishest to go?"

"At once."

"I have neither horse nor carriage, little father. Where the Tartar has passed there remains nothing!"

"Well, I will go on foot to Omsk to find a horse."

"A few more hours of rest and thou wilt be in a better condition to pursue thy journey."

"Not an hour!"

"Come, now," replied the mujik, recognizing the fact that it was useless to struggle against the will of his guest, "I will guide thee myself. Besides," he added, "the Russians are still in great force at Omsk, and thou couldst perhaps pass unperceived."

"Friend," replied Michael, "heaven reward thee for all thou hast done for me."

"Reward! Only fools expect reward on earth," replied the mujik.

Michael Strogoff went out of the hut. When he tried to walk, he was seized with such faintness that without the assistance of the mujik he would have fallen, but the fresh air quickly revived him. He then felt the wound in his head, the violence of which his fur cap had lessened. With the energy which he possessed he was not a man to succumb under such a trifle. Before his eyes lay a single goal—far distant Irkutsk. He must reach it! But he must pass through Omsk without stopping there.

"God protect my mother and Nadia!" he murmured. "I have no longer the right to think of them!"

Michael Strogoff and the mujik soon arrived in the mercantile quarter of the lower town, and, although under military occupation, they entered it without difficulty. The surrounding earthwork had been destroyed in many places, and there were the breaches through which the marauders who followed the armies of Feofar-Kahn had penetrated.

The mujik was conducting his guest straight to the posting house when in a narrow street Michael Strogoff, coming to a sudden stop, sprang behind a jutting wall.

"What is the matter?" quickly asked the mujik, much astonished at this sudden movement.

"Silence!" hastily replied Michael Strogoff, with his finger on his lips.

At this moment a detachment debouched from the principal square into the street which Michael Strogoff and his companion had been just following.

At the head of the detachment, composed of twenty horsemen, was an officer dressed in a very simple uniform. Although he glanced rapidly from one side to the other, he could not have seen Michael Strogoff owing to his precipitous retreat.

The detachment went at full trot into the narrow street. Neither the officer nor his escort concerned themselves about the inhabitants. Several unlucky ones had scarcely time to make way for their passage. There were, therefore, a few half stifled cries, to which the thrusts of the lance gave an instant reply, and the street was immediately cleared.

When the escort had disappeared, "Who is that officer?" asked Michael Strogoff, returning toward the mujik. And while putting the question his face was pale as that of a corpse.

"It is Ivan Ogareff," replied the Siberian, but in a deep voice which breathed hatred.

"He!" cried Michael Strogoff, from whom the word escaped with an accent of fury which he could not conquer. He had just recognized in this officer the traveler who had struck him at the posting house of Ichim, and, although he had only caught a glimpse of him, it burst upon his mind at the same time that this traveler was the old Zingari whose words he had overheard in the market place of Nijni Novgorod.

The mujik and Michael resumed their way and arrived at the posting house. To leave Omsk by one of the breaches would not be difficult after nightfall. As for purchasing a carriage to replace the tarantass, that was impossible. There was none to be let or sold. But what want had Michael Strogoff now for a carriage? Was he not alone, alas? A horse would suffice him, and, very fortunately, a horse could be had. It was an animal of mettle, capable of enduring much fatigue, and Michael Strogoff, accomplished horseman as he was, could make good use of it.

The horse cost a high price, and a few moments later Michael was ready to start. It was then 4 o'clock in the afternoon.

Michael Strogoff, compelled to wait till nightfall in order to pass the fortifications, but not desiring to show himself in the streets of Omsk, remained in the posting house and there partook of food.

There was a great crowd in the public room, it being the resort of numbers of the anxious inhabitants, who at this eventful period collected there to obtain news. They were talking of the expected arrival of a corps of Muscovite troops, not at Omsk, but at Tomsk, a corps intended to recapture that town from the Tartars of Feofar-Kahn.

Michael Strogoff lent an attentive ear to all that was said, but took no part in the conversation.

Suddenly a cry made him tremble, a cry which penetrated to the depths of his soul, and these two words, so to speak, rushed into his ear:

"My son!"

His mother, the old woman Marfa, was before him! Trembling, she smiled upon him. She stretched forth her arms to him. Michael Strogoff arose. He was about to throw himself—

The thought of duty, the serious danger for his mother and himself in this unfortunate meeting, suddenly stopped him, and such was his command over himself that not a muscle of his face moved.

There were twenty people in the public room. Among them were perhaps spies, and was it not known in the town that the son of Marfa Strogoff belonged to the corps of the couriers of the czar?

Michael Strogoff did not move.

"Michael!" cried his mother.

"Who are you, my good lady?" Michael Strogoff stammered, unable to speak in his usual firm tone.

"Who am I, thou askest? Dost thou no longer know thy mother?"

"You are mistaken," coldly replied Michael Strogoff. "A resemblance deceives you."

The old Marfa went up to him and, looking straight into his eyes, said:

"Thou art not the son of Peter and Marfa Strogoff?"

Michael Strogoff would have given his life to have locked his mother in his arms, but if he yielded it was all over with him, with her, with his mission, with his oath! Completely master of himself, he closed his eyes in order not to see the inexpressible anguish which agitated the revered countenance of his mother. He drew back his hands in order not to touch those trembling hands which sought him.

"I do not know, in truth, what it is you say, my good woman," he replied, stepping back.

"Michael!" again cried his aged mother.

"My name is not Michael. I never was your son! I am Nicholas Korpanoff, a merchant of Irkutsk."

And suddenly he left the public room, while for the last time the words reechoed:

"My son, my son!"

Michael Strogoff, by a desperate effort, had gone. He did not see his old mother, who had fallen back almost inanimate upon a bench. But when the postmaster hastened to assist her the aged woman raised herself. Suddenly a thought occurred to her. She denied by her son! It was not possible. As for being herself deceived and taking another for him—equally impossible. It was certainly her son whom she had just seen, and if he had not recognized her it was because he would not, it was because he ought not, it was because he had some cogent reason for acting thus! And then, her mother feelings arising within her, she had but one thought—"Can I unwittingly have ruined him?"

"I am mad," she said to her interrogators. "My eyes have deceived me! This young man is not my child. He had not his voice. Let us think no more of it. If we do, I shall end by finding him everywhere."

Less than ten minutes afterward a Tartar officer appeared in the posting house.

"Marfa Strogoff?" he asked.

"It is I," replied the old woman in a tone so calm and with a face so tranquil that those who had witnessed the meeting with her son would not have known her.

"Come," said the officer. Marfa Strogoff, with firm step, followed the Tartar officer and left the posting house.

Some moments afterward Marfa Strogoff found herself in the chief square and in the presence of Ivan Ogareff, to [illegible] all the details of this scene had [illegible]mediately reported.

[illegible] Ogareff, suspecting the truth, in[illegible] the old Siberian woman.

"[illegible] name?" he asked in a rough voice.

"Marfa Strogoff."

"Thou hast a son?"

"Yes."

"He is a courier of the czar?"

"Yes."

"Where is he?"

"At Moscow."

"Thou hast heard no news of him?"

"No news."

"Since how long?"

"Since two months."

"Who, then, was that young man whom thou didst call thy son a few moments ago at the posting house?"

"A young Siberian whom I took for him," replied Marfa Strogoff. "This is the tenth man in whom I have thought I recognized my son since the town has been so full of strangers. I think I see him everywhere."

"So this young man was not Michael Strogoff?"

"It was not Michael Strogoff."

"Dost thou know, old woman, that I can torture thee until thou avowest the truth?"

"I have spoken the truth, and torture will not cause me to alter my words in any way."

"This Siberian was not Michael Strogoff?" asked a second time Ivan Ogareff.

"No, it was not he," replied a second time Marfa Strogoff. "Do you think that for anything in the world I would deny a son whom God has given me?"

Ivan Ogareff regarded with an evil eye the old woman who had braved him to the face. He did not doubt but that she had recognized her son in this young Siberian. Now, if this son had first renounced his mother and if his mother renounced him in her turn it could occur only from the most weighty motive.

Every circumstance went to confirm his suspicions. If he could but lay his hand upon this pretended merchant of Irkutsk and strip off his disguise, would he not find a treasure indeed? Would not his superiors well reward his adroitness and his success? Would not the czar of Russia scowl with rage when he learned that his courier was in the hands of his foes?

Ivan Ogareff had therefore no doubt that the pretended Nicholas Korpanoff was Michael Strogoff, courier of the czar, seeking concealment under a false name and charged with some mission which it would have been important for him to know. He therefore at once gave orders for his pursuit. Then he said:

"Let this woman be conducted to Tomsk," returning toward Marfa Strogoff.

And while the soldiers brutally dragged her along he added between his teeth:

"When the moment arrives, I shall know how to make her speak, this old sorceress!"

NEWFOUNDLAND TRAGEDY.

A Fisherman's Wild Sail to Procure Medical Aid.

"The lack of physicians is one of the horrors of the isolation in which the Newfoundlanders of this coast live," says Norman Duncan in Ainslee's. "There is none within fifty miles of most harbors; none within reaching distance of many. It is related of a well to do fisherman who was something of a merchant that his wife, whom he fondly loved, lay in agony for many days while an autumn gale raged. No man in the harbor would put off in a skiff to fetch the nearest physician, who lived fifteen miles down the coast, for there was no possibility that he who ventured could survive. On the fourth day the wind moderated. Two men volunteered to accompany Allerton. They set sail in the first hours of a snowstorm, which abated, however, before they reached their destination. Fighting doggedly, they took the boat safely in, after indescribable hardship and through ever present danger. The gale had gone down when they knocked on the physician's door. A heavy sea was running, but the danger of wreck on the return voyage was quickly passing.

"'What's the matter with the woman?' the physician asked.

"He was informed.

"The husband minutely described his wife's agony. Then he offered what amounted almost to half his fortune as a fee.

"'I'll take that,' said the doctor, 'if you fetch her here. Go back and get her, and I'll attend to the case.'

"'In an open boat!' the husband exclaimed. He pointed out that his wife's condition put such an arrangement beyond the bounds of reason.

"'Well, I can't do anything,' said the physician. 'If you bring her over, I'll attend to her.'

"When the husband got back to his home, the child had been born, but the woman died the next day."

PARRY A COMPLIMENT.

Accept One Always, but Never Take It Seriously.

The famous Mme. Recamier said that she always found two words sufficed to make her guests seem welcome. Upon their arrival she exclaimed, "At last!" and when they took their leave she said "Already?" If taken literally, we should deprecate the flattery. Flattery is insincere praise and wrongs him that gives and him that takes. It is sometimes kinder to accept a compliment than to parry it.

One may say "Thank you, it is pleasant to be seen through such kind (or partial) eyes," or perhaps, "It is a comfort to know that friendship is partly blind as well as the mythological boy," or any nonsense that serves to show that one appreciates the spirit that prompted the kind expression, however wide the truth.

The frequent repetition of the name of the person addressed holds a subtle compliment, implying more complete concentration of the speaker's thought upon his or her personality.

De Quincy says: "More is done for the benefit of conversation by the simple magic of good manners than by all varieties of intellectual power."

It is the sympathetic and responsive listeners that call forth the best efforts of a talker. For such are reserved his choicest stories, his finest thoughts.

A ready smile acts as inspiration, and interest shown in the conversation of others stimulates and vivifies their thoughts.

To a good listener the diffident will say what they think, and the verbose will think what they say.

There is nothing more trying than to find that one's conversation is receiving but a divided attention and nothing more rude than for a person to pick up a book or paper and look over it while pretending to listen to what one is saying.—New York Herald.

Sayings About Breadcrumbs.

In the days when the "bread loaf" was dear careful mothers had a set of thrift sayings which are seldom heard in this time of the big, cheap loaf. Crumbs were regularly swept up and kept for some useful purpose. If a child threw crumbs in the fire, the old fashioned mother lifted a warning finger and said, "If you throw crumbs in the fire, you are feeding the devil." Children were told that the better part of a loaf was the crust, and when a child was sent to the shop for bread the order was to ask for "a crusty loaf." If a child left its crust, came the warning: "Yes, my lady (or my lad), you'll want for a loaf some day. You'll find hunger's a sharp thorn."—Notes and Queries.

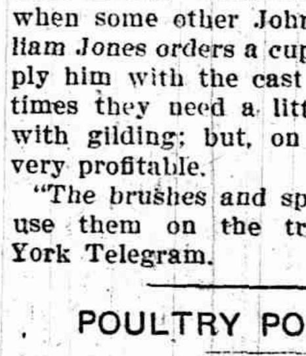
Stop the Blight

It is a sad thing to see fine fruit trees spoiled by the blight. You can always tell them from the rest. They never do well afterwards but stay small and sickly.

It is worse to see a blight strike children. Good health is the natural right of children. But some of them don't get their rights. While the rest grow big and strong one stays small and weak.

Scott's Emulsion can stop that blight. There is no reason why such a child should stay small. Scott's Emulsion is a medicine with lots of strength in it—the kind of strength that makes things grow.

Scott's Emulsion makes children grow, makes them eat, makes them sleep, makes them play. Give the weak child a chance. Scott's Emulsion will make it catch up with the rest.



This picture represents the Trade Mark of Scott's Emulsion and is on the wrapper of every bottle.

TRICKS OF THE TRADE.

Cups, Brushes and Sponges That Are Left In Barber Shops.

"What becomes of all the old shaving mugs?" was the question asked the barber.

"What becomes of the owners?" was the response.

Neither side seemed disposed to answer the query, and there was an awkward silence. The barber slapped his razor on the strop, smeared some extra lather on the victim's mouth so he wouldn't be inclined to interrupt and said in a stage whisper:

"Now, I'll tell you, but I don't want it shouted from the housetops. We use the mugs again."

He paused and sighed as he tossed the questioner's head the other way.

"Yes," he continued, "we use them again. We don't like to lose customers; but, if we must lose them, why, we don't mind if they leave their cups, etc., behind. It's surprising how many do; but, then, barbers do mostly a 'shifting trade.' It's no secret that we urge customers to have their own cup. Most of them are satisfied if they have a private cup, brush and sponge. We supply them with the man's name on the cup for $1.50, and our profit on the transaction is 50 cents. When a man has a razor and comb and brush besides the other tools, he generally takes the whole lot away when he's leaving, but countless cups, brushes and sponges are left behind in every barber shop.

"The cups are always good. Many of them contain such common names as John Smith, William Jones, etc., and when some other John Smith or William Jones orders a cup we simply supply him with the cast off one. Sometimes they need a little touching up with gilding; but, on the whole, it's very profitable.

"The brushes and sponges? Oh, we use them on the transients."—New York Telegram.

POULTRY POINTERS.

Ducks and geese need no grain when they have plenty of grass.

Chicken fatten faster on cooked food than on raw because it is more easily digested.

When soft feed is given to either young or old fowls, it should never be thrown on the ground.

When closely confined, the loose grain fed to fowls should be scattered among litter of some kind, so that they can scratch it out.

There is nothing so bad for the health and well being of poultry as confining them in close quarters and preventing them from taking needed exercise.

One of the most important items to insure success in the hatching of chickens in winter is to get the eggs from a flock of healthy and vigorous fowls.

There is better health among roving fowls because they get the food that is best for digestion and get the necessary grit to help the gizzard do its work.

When necessary to administer medicine by placing it in the drinking water, keep the birds from drink for several hours. They are then thirsty and more apt to get a good swallow.

The Last Execution at Tyburn.

The last execution on a permanent gallows in London took place at Tyburn on Nov. 7, 1783, the malefactor being one John Austin, condemned for highway robbery with violence. For centuries Tyburn had been the scene of executions for criminals condemned in Middlesex, and before the erection of the permanent gibbet occasional hangings had taken place, record existing of the hanging of Judge Tressilian and Nicholas Brembre at that place as far back as 1388.

The gallows consisted of three posts, and around it were open galleries, resembling race stands, in which seats were let. On account of the disgraceful scenes on the road, executions were transferred in 1783 to the area in front of Newgate, despite the objections of residents, and on Dec. 3 [illegible] that year the first hanging took [illegible] there, when no less than ten [illegible]uted.—London Chronicle.

An Interesting R[illegible]

In the matter of diminutive bank notes a correspondent sends [illegible] account of a curious note which he has in his possession. It is a card measuring 2 by 2½ inches, on one side of which is twice printed the word "Twopence," while on the other the sum is printed in words and figures round the border. In the middle is the following: "I promise to pay the bearer, on demand, twopence. By order of the Corporation of the City of New York, Feb. 20, 1790. D. Phœnix, City Treasurer."—London Graphic.

Calling the Hours.

There is one place in London, and only one, where the ancient custom of keeping a watchman to call out the hours is still maintained. This is at New inn, which in spite of its name is one of the oldest inns of court. The servants there are quite proud of the age of the place, and it was one of them who said one day:

"Why, sir, this inn was here in the time of Charles I."

After a long pause, to allow this stunning fact to percolate through the brain of the hearer, he extended his arm and added with emphasis:

"And it was here in the time of Charles II.!"

Some vague notion of the disturbances which intervened between the two reigns had probably been floating through the man's mind, but how an existing institution could possibly have dated from the reign of Charles I. without coming down through the reign of Charles II. he failed to explain.

Beginning at the stroke of 10 o'clock every night, the watchman in the yard of New inn "calls the hour" in a stentorian but musical voice:

"Ten o'clock, and all's well!"

The words are heard in the adjoining chambers and offices. Tenants in Clement's inn, whose rooms look into the pretty yard and garden of New inn, may hear these words every hour through the night if awake.—New York Times.

Pussy's Sponge and Hairbrush.

Cats large and small make the most careful toilet of any class of animals, excepting some of the opossums. Lions and tigers wash themselves in exactly the same manner as the cat, wetting the dark, india-rubber-like ball of the fore foot and the inner toe, and passing it over the face and behind the ears. The foot is thus at the same time a face sponge and brush, and the rough tongue combs the rest of the body.

The township board in 1900 when computing the amount of money necessary to be raised for the general fund failed to raise money enough, as has been the fault for a number of years past, the consequence being that the township would be in debt at the end of the year. This difficulty the present township board has corrected by increasingthe appropriation (for 190) $600.

You will notice a tax of $1303.86 under the table of taxes for 1901, which is an appropriation of $300.00 made by the township board for the purpose of opening a new road past the celery farm of Albert Usborne and Fountain Celery Co. also, an appropriation of $1000 for the construction of new bridges, it being discovered that all the bridges in the township were like the "one hoss shay." Fearing some serious accident might occur which might result in the loss of a life besides a big damage suit to the township, the township board ordered this work done and money to be spread on the assessment roll. Had Clinton township been more careful in the matter of bridges, the awful accident that happened on the Newburg bridge would never have occurred.

The work of Highway Commissioner Schreder ought to be a source of pride to every tax payer in this township as he has caused to be constructed a number of stone arch bridges, which are first class in every particular and which ought to last a life time.

HEROISM AT A FIRE.

The Result When Neither Girl Would Climb Down First.

Not long ago a hotel was partially burned and was the scene of some sensational escapes as well as of more than one death. A young woman was telling of her experiences on that night, when she and a friend occupied a room on the third floor. They had been talking until a late hour, when they were startled by the cry of "Fire!" "We jumped up," said the girl, "and rushed to the door. Flames filled the corridor. The elevator shaft and the fire escapes were quite cut off from us, and nothing remained for the people on our side but to use the windows. As Kate and I stared out at the red glow in horror one or two people passed the windows, letting themselves down by the ropes. We looked out at them, dazed for a moment, and the crowd below shouted, 'Don't jump!' Then my brain cleared. I am pretty good at climbing, and somehow the idea of my being injured never entered my head. I said to Kate: 'Quick! Take the rope and let yourself down!' Kate turned to me and said quietly, but firmly: 'I am stronger than you. You go first.'

"'I won't,' said I, with insinuating contempt. 'You know I can always take care of myself.'

"'I shan't go first,' said Kate.

"Then we both lost our tempers. 'Kate,' I said, 'your chief fault always was obstinacy.'

"'Oh,' said she in withering scorn 'and you're not at all obstinate, staying up here to burn!'

"One form after another passed the window. The flames shone brighter than ever. I was furious at Kate and she at me. We shook our fists at each other. The crowd shouted, 'Don't jump!' and I shrieked back at them: 'I'm not going to jump, you idiots! It's Kate's fault!'

"Really, when I think of the names we called each other, standing there with death creeping closer every moment, I blush. The crowd yelled frantically. 'I won't go first!' I shouted at Kate.

"'I won't stir an inch!' she shrieked at me.

"'Then we'll die!' I cried melodramatically.

"'Don't be a fool! Take the rope!' she yelled.

"'No!' I shouted. Just then there was a great shove at the door, and the firemen shouted in the corridor, 'It's all out!' Kate and I fell into each other's arms hysterically. We vowed never to speak of our idiocy, but we have a sense of humor, and so we've both told the story of our heroism."—New York Tribune.

FUN FOR THE DINNER TABLE

Suggestions by Which a Hostess Can "Make" Conversation.

A hostess always finds that it requires more tact to keep the ball of conversation rolling while her guests are at table than any other time. The following suggestions may prove of value as an ice breaker:

To each guest give a card on one side of which is a dainty pen and ink sketch of some vegetable, an artistic bunch of celery, lettuce or fruit. On the opposite side have the heading:

"HOW SOME OTHER PEOPLE ATE."

Below have the following statements, the descriptions to be answered by words ending in "ate:"

No. 1 never ate alone—Associate.
No. 2 never ate with his superiors—Subordinate.
No. 3 ate very daintily—Delicate.
No. 4 ate in the most lusty way—Invigorate.
No. 5 ate like somebody else—Imitate.
No. 6 ate so that he constantly grew worse—Deteriorate.
No. 7 ate in high places—Elevate.
No. 8 ate in a way that compelled attention—Fascinate.
No. 9 ate with other representatives—Delegate.
No. 10 ate with the politicians—Candidate.
No. 11 never ate today what he could leave until tomorrow—Procrastinate.
No. 12 ate so that his food was well chewed—Masticate.
No. 13 ate more than was necessary—Exaggerate.
No. 14 was always the last one to eat—Terminate.—What to Eat.

Economical.

A good story is related of an English theatrical manager who, by thrift and hard work, had amassed a fortune.

Previous to the production of one play the stage carpenters had to repair a trap, and the head carpenter went to the manager and informed him that it could not be done in the dark.

"Well, lad, thee won't have t' gas," answered the manager. "Here, tak' this and buy a candle."

And he handed him a halfpenny.

The carpenter pleaded that they wanted two in order to get sufficient light.

"How long will t' job tak' thee?" asked the manager.

"About ten minutes," was the reply.

"Then cut t' candle in two," was the answer. "Thee won't have any more money."

A CLEVER BIT OF STRATEGY IN AN ENGINEERING JOB.

How a Young American Engineer Brought His Spirit of Invention to Aid In Solving a Wreck Problem In South America.

"It is easy enough for an engineer to show ability in New York or in other big towns where he can get about all the tools and conveniences ever devised. It is when an engineer finds himself in the wilds of a jungle or up in the mountains, hundreds of miles from civilization, that his own natural ingenuity and invention count," said a veteran engineer to a youngster who had been admitted to the ranks of the Engineers' club.

"Down in Surinam, Dutch Guiana, where the arrival of a sailing schooner causes a sensation, where a mail steamer enters the muddy harbor once in two weeks to tarry two hours to get rid of its mail and to take on a few passengers, there was once a young American engineer who showed that he had the proper spirit of invention to advance him to the front ranks of the profession. Like all the best inventions, his was the simplest one, and it was one that was widely talked about among the profession to the credit of the inventor.

"To understand the story properly you need a trifling insight into Surinam and its habits. Here Indians may be seen on the streets wearing only a breechcloth. The white population is so scarce that all are thrown together as if in one large family, Englishmen, Americans, Germans, Dutchmen and Frenchmen all combining together and forming clubs and society to keep themselves from dying of sheer lonesomeness.

"In this primitive town there was a man who held the splendid monopoly of owning a large scow. That, up there, seems a remarkably small thing to be proud of, but the value of even a scow depends entirely upon where the scow is and what it will cost to replace it. This particular scow had been built by American ship carpenters sent especially from the United States at great expense. There was not another scow in the entire harbor, and about all of the heavy river work to be done for the city and plantations and mining companies was done by this one vessel. Its loss, therefore, would have been not only a severe one for the owner, who had a monopoly of the business in those days, but it would have been little short of a national calamity.

"One day, while the scow was anchored in midstream, one of those smashing black squalls for which the tropics are famous broke over the river, and for twenty minutes you could not see ten feet away or hear a man shouting at your elbow. When the storm finally abated, the scow was not to be seen, and it was found she had gone down, deck load and all. To most of us there seemed about as much chance of raising the vessel as there would be to raise an ocean steamer sunk in the middle of the Atlantic.

"It was about this time that the young engineer took a hand in the problem. He asked the dimensions of the scow and was told that it was 12 by 60 feet, and then he announced that if the owner would provide him with four men he would raise the scow for a certain sum of money. The bargain was made, though the contractor refused to say how he would go about the job.

"Now, you must know that aside from the ebb and flood tide, which alternate every six hours, there is also what is known as a spring tide. This comes with the full of the moon, and it has the effect of making a higher flood tide than any during the month. The opposite to the spring tide is the neap tide, and that happens at the dark of the moon, with the effect that at no other tide during the month is the ebb tide so low as it is at that time. The difference in the height of water between the ebb at neap tide and the flood at spring tide is considerable.

"The engineer waited until neap tide. On that day he towed a number of logs down the river. These he anchored over the scow and sent men below to fasten chains to one side of the scow, and these he fastened to the logs on the surface. Then he waited patiently. As the spring tide approached he towed other logs down the river until he had enough to make quite a raft, and on the day of the highest tide all the logs were tied together and fastened. The tide rose steadily, and the more it rose the more the raft went down under the strain of the pull on the chains. At last, just as it seemed that the raft was unequal to the occasion, it was seen to bob up violently, and a moment later there was a commotion in the water, and the scow appeared. What had happened, of course, was this: The chains pulling upward on one side of the scow tilted it more and more until the deck load began to slide off, and finally, when all the stones had slid into the river, the scow came up under its own buoyancy. The remainder was simple. The vessel was towed to the shore, where it was hauled up on the sand, and when the water receded holes bored into the hull caused the scow to empty. Later the holes were plugged up again, and the old ship was as fine as silk."—New York Times.

KNOWING HOW PAYS.

The Moral of this old, old Anecdote Will save a Heap of Trouble and a Pile of Money.

Something had gone wrong with some simple part of a stationary engine, and the stoker could not fix it. After spending a day or two on it, he was forced to ask the aid of a more competent workman. He failed also, and some one suggested the employment of a local celebrity, a sort of tinker at any mechanical job. There is generally one in every locality. He gave two or three raps with his hammer and touched up rod or two, when the pounding or whatever ailed the machine, ceased. When asked to make out his bill, it read as follows: Fixing engine, 50 cents; knowing how, $10.

This anecdote clearly demonstrates that it pays to know how. Engineer J. J. Jeffries of the Royal Cycle Works at Marshall, Mich., residing in that city at No. 141 S. Marshall street tells in the following of his experience with the little conqueror; it will pay you to know how he got rid of a troublesome companion, he says:

"My kidneys troubled me more or less for years and finally became so bad that I was compelled to give up locomotive engineering on account of jarring of the train and seek employment as a stationary engineer. When the attacks of kidney complaint occurred I could not rest or lie comfortably in any position and often in the mornings after a restless night I was more tired and worn out than when I went to bed. When the attacks were at their height I was unable to stoop or lift anything and despite the use of every remedy that came to my notice, preparations recommended to me by my acquaintances numerous plasters of all kinds worn day and night I was unsuccessful in procuring anything to help me until I tried Doan's Kidney Pills. The first box helped me. I steadily improved while taking the second and I stopped the treatment when I had finished the third, as I considered there was no more necessity for continuing the remedy."

The Thing to Rin Awa' Wi' Sillar.

Wealth is a relative term. One man may be passing rich on £40 a year, and another may be miserably poor on £400. This was beautifully illustrated to me the other day, when, driving past a popular Ayrshire "place of drinks," I was hailed from the roadside by a man who claimed friendship on the strength of "living next door when we were boys." He was getting married, he said, and on that, I suppose, was feeling unusually happy.

"Man, come on in and let me staun you something," he said. "Don't think I've nae money. There's a pound note. Would you believe it, no' a week sin' I had hale £3; but, what wi' buying furniture and things, I've spent the ither twa. Aye, and afore the wadden's ower I believe that pound'll be melted tae. By gore, gettin' married's the thing to rin awa' wi' sillar. But come on in and hae a drink."—Glasgow Times.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. Sixkiller's Arm a Deadly Weapon.

"Another man has been killed by a blow of the fist, which suggests the thought that at times the naked fist of a man, given proper impetus by a well developed biceps, is an exceedingly dangerous and destructive instrument," said a man who for many years lived at Vinita, in the Cherokee Nation.

"It recalls a bit of history local to the Indian Territory," he continued. "Not far from the Arkansas line there lived a half breed who went by the name of John Sixkiller. He was a bad man, but not bad in the ordinary southwestern way—that is to say, he was not a 'gun fighter,' although he enjoyed a general mixup immensely, and until the Cherokee council intervened he indulged in many such affrays.

"After three men whom he had 'laid out' had died of their injuries the council (tribal legislature) met and passed an act declaring that 'John Sixkiller's right arm is a deadly weapon' and that 'he is forbidden to use it against an adversary except to protect himself from death or great bodily injury.'"

The Indian Duck Trick.

A little tin or earthen pan or sometimes half a coconaut shell supported on three stones is filled with water on which is sprinkled a red powder, rendering it practically opaque. A little duck of wood or porcelain is placed upon the surface, where it at first floats, but at the command of the performer suddenly dives, remaining submerged until again ordered to rise.

This very ingenious trick depends upon the fact that in the bottom of the vessel there is a minute hole through which passes a hair. One end of this is attached to the duck: the other remains at the disposal of the performer and is attached, by means of a pellet of wax, to his tomtom or to one of the hands with which he beats it. When he wishes the duck to dive, he pulls the hair. When he desires it to rise, he relaxes the pull.

There is naturally some amount of leakage through the pinhole, and to cover this the performer takes care, when filling the pan, to accidentally (?) spill a little water. The ground being thus already wetted, the fact that it gets a little more is not noticed.—Chambers' Journal.

FOLLIES OF FASHION

SARTORIAL VAGARIES OF THE CENTURIES THAT ARE GONE.

Grotesque Styles That Reigned In the Time of Chaucer—Raiment That Rivaled the Rainbow and Men Who Starched Their Beards.

It is a little gratifying to reflect that however the man of today may compare with his ancestors of bygone centuries in physique and morals, his dress is much more moderate and inexpensive, even if it is less picturesque, than theirs.

It is true that here and there one may find some foolish young man whose taste in dress is as extravagant as that of any "buck" of the days of the Georges. There is, for instance, a son of a well known peer who has the reputation of never wearing a suit twice. He has a wardrobe of waistcoats of all the colors of the rainbow, ranging from a light blue spangled with silver stars to a deep green satin with buttons of eighteen carat gold, each of which is adorned with the painted face of a beautiful woman.

Another wealthy aristocrat is credited with having as many suits and uniforms as there are days in the year and with spending on his tailor's bill a sum which would pay the yearly salary of a minor cabinet minister.

But such men are modestly arrayed compared with the dandies of many a past century. The earl of Northumberland who lived in the latter part of the fourteenth century boasted no fewer than sixty suits of cloth of gold alone, and the bishop of Ely of that time had a change of raiment for every day of the year.

Much later, in Queen Mary's time, the wardrobe of a bishop might have been the envy of Solomon for the variety and costliness of its contents, and even a simple village priest, according to Fuller, wore "a vestment of crimson satin, a vestment of crimson velvet, a stole and fanon set with pearl, gowns faced with taffetas, etc."

In the days of Chaucer fashionable men wore clothes as many colored as Joseph's coat, so that "while one leg would be a blaze of crimson the other would be tricked out in green or blue or yellow, without any regard to harmony or contrast."

Even as late as the middle of the eighteenth century a dandy would deck himself in "a vivid green coat, a waistcoat of scarlet, yellow breeches and blue stockings," and the gentleman of a few years later wore, among similar sartorial vagaries, "a coat of light green, with sleeves too small for the arms and buttons too big for the sleeves; a pair of Manchester fine stuff breeches, without money in their pockets; clouded silk stockings, a club of hair behind larger than the head that carries it, a hat of the size of a sixpence on a block not worth a farthing."

At one fashionable epoch our ancestors, to quote the words of a quaint chronicler, "would weare clothes so tighte to ye skin that it might well be conceived they wore no clothes at all," and at another they would wear them "so voluminous that a single suite might well have afforded rayment for a whole familie, and so stuffed out with feathers that, of a verity, their wearers resembled nothing so much as walking sackes."

At another period it was the grotesque fashion to combine on one person the dress of all the countries of Europe—the hat would be Spanish, the coat French, the trousers Turkish, and so on—so that the wearer was a "walking epitome of the dress of a continent."

At one time shoes would be worn with square toes of such width that a royal proclamation was issued limiting the width to six inches, and these shoes were succeeded by others which came to the finest of points at the toes.

In Henry II.'s time shoes with points two feet long were worn by the fashionables, and in the reign of Henry IV. these points had grown to such an inordinate length that in order to be able to walk at all it was necessary to attach the tips to the knees by chains, which were of gold or silver, while the tops of the shoes were carved with all kinds of fantastic designs.

In the early part of the eighteenth century it was a common thing for a man of fashion to spend several hours a day with his valet, among the many quaint operations being "the starching of the beard and the proper perfuming of garments, the painting of the face and anointing with oils, tinctures, quintessences and pomatums." It is even said that some of the dandies of the time bathed in wine and milk "for the preservation of their complexions and the rejuvenation of their energies."—London Tit-Bits.

Works Like a Charm.

Hanson—Wonder how it is that the Jugginsons get along so harmoniously. They never have any quarrels, apparently.

According to Scale.

Mrs. Wunder—It seems to me that that music teacher is always asking for money.

Mr. Wunder—That's perfectly natural. His scale, you know, begins and ends with "dough."—Baltimore American.

Two Views.

"It is hard to lose one's relations," said the seedy individual with a mourning band on his hat.

"Hard?" echoed the man whose check is good for a million. "Why, it's simply impossible."—Chicago News.

Did He Understand?

A well known Edinburgh professor often became so interested in his subject that when the noon bell rang he seemed quite oblivious of the fact and kept the class for several minutes. Certain restless spirits among the students decided to give him a gentle hint, so they bought an alarm clock. London Tit-Bits tells the result.

The clock, set to alarm at precisely 12 o'clock, was placed on the professor's desk. As was anticipated, he began his lecture without observing the clock. But when the noon hour struck the alarm went off with a startling crash.

Even those not in the secret appreciated the joke. There was a round of applause. The professor smilingly waited until the alarm and the applause ceased and then said:

"Young gentlemen, I thank you for this gift. I had forgotten it was my birthday. An alarm clock is something my wife has needed for our servant for a long time. It is a very kind remembrance on your part." Then he went on with the demonstration which had been interrupted by the alarm, and the students were never quite able to satisfy themselves whether the professor understood the joke or not.

WINE AND WATER.

A Simple Little Trick at Once Effective and Mysterious.

Here is a trick that is always effective, and, while it is very simple indeed, still it is bound to appear just a wee bit mysterious, and many, especially your little brothers and sisters, will be unable to explain it.

Take two ordinary claret glasses and fill one to the brim with claret and the other equally full with clear water.

Cover the top of the glass containing water with an ordinary visiting card so that there are no places around the edge uncovered by the card. Turn the glass upside down and place it on the top of the glass containing claret and adjust the glasses so that their edges meet exactly all the way around.

Now move the card slightly to one side so that there will be a little space at one side of the glasses inside uncovered by a card. At once a thin stream of claret will begin to rise through this space, not mixing with the water at all, but its edges clear and sharply defined. The water, too, will begin to descend into the glass containing the claret, a pure, glistening white stream against the ruddy red.

The stream of claret, too, rising through the sparkling white of the water presents a beautiful effect, and in a moment the claret will begin to spread about the top of the upper glass like the unfolding of a red rose and the water will spread in the bottom of the lower glass. The two fluids will not mix, but will present a delightful contrast of red and white with sharply defined edges.

In a very short time the claret and water will have changed places, the claret being in the upper glass and the water in the lower. This is due to the difference in weight of the liquids; water, being the heavier, forces itself into the lower glass, and a portion of the claret is moved up to take the place of the descending water.—New York Herald.

CURE FOR CATARRH.

A Remedy Which an Old Virginian Says Is Infallible.

An old Virginia horse breeder who is visiting in New York claims to have an infallible cure for catarrh. "It seems to me," he said "that 90 per cent of the people of New York city suffer more or less from catarrh. If they will do as I suggest, they can cure themselves in short order.

"A friend of mine who used to live in Yonkers had such a severe case of catarrh that he was compelled to give up his business and go to Colorado. The doctors told him that the high altitude of that state would benefit him. He remained in Colorado nearly a year and then found himself as badly off as when he left Yonkers. After he had made up his mind that nothing could cure him and that he might as well die at home as among strangers he met an old tinker, who gave him the remedy, which cured him in three months.

"Dissolve a little powdered alum in a pint of cider vinegar. Use the solution as a gargle three or four times a day. It won't do any harm if you swallow some of it. Two or three times a day, but particularly just before going to bed, dip a chicken feather in vaseline and stick the feather up the nostrils. I suppose any contrivance bought at a drug store for the purpose will do just as well as a chicken feather, but the old tinker insisted that there was some medicinal virtue in the feather.

"The gargle clears the throat and the lower portions of the air passages from the nostrils. The vaseline heals the diseased condition of the affected parts. In a week the sufferer will feel better, and if he will keep up the treatment he can be assured that he will be cured."—New York Mail and Express.

A Wife Says:

"We have four children. With the first three I suffered almost unbearable pains from 12 to 14 hours, and had to be placed under the influence of chloroform. I used three bottles of Mother's Friend before our last child came, which is a strong, fat and healthy boy, doing my housework up to within two hours of birth, and suffered but a few hard pains. This liniment is the grandest remedy ever made."

Mother's Friend

will do for every woman what it did for the Minnesota mother who writes the above letter. Not to use it during pregnancy is a mistake to be paid for in pain and suffering. Mother's Friend equips the patient with a strong body and clear intellect, which in turn are imparted to the child. It relaxes the muscles and allows them to expand. It relieves morning sickness and nervousness. It puts all the organs concerned in perfect condition for the final hour, so that the actual labor is short and practically painless. Danger of rising or hard breasts is altogether avoided, and recovery is merely a matter of a few days.

TO SUE THE BANK

K. O. T. M. Says Bank Accepted Embezzlement Funds.

COUNT THE ACT ILLEGAL

Embezzler Thompson Used the Funds to Pay Indebtedness to the Bank—K. O. T. M. Officers Unable to Determine the Amount.

Port Huron, Mich., Jan. 4.—A new phase of the embezzlement case of Charles D. Thompson, ex-finance keeper of Supreme Tent K. O. T. M., came to light yesterday afternoon, and in all probability suit will be commenced against Port Huron Savings bank of this city to recover a portion of the money at least which was embezzled and which is thought to have passed through hands of bank officials. Thompson was cashier of the bank, but several months ago resigned his position. At that time it was current talk that he was a heavy borrower from the bank, and the general impression prevails that part of the money embezzled went to the bank to liquidate part of his indebtedness, if not all. The information on this point comes from an authorative source and is confirmed by a statement of D. P. Markey, supreme commander.

Mr. Markey stated that part of the money which was formerly Maccabee funds has been traced to the bank, but just what amount is not yet known, although it is expected by today the exact sum will be known. Mr. Markey added that the bank would be given an opportunity to straighten the matter out, which means a refunding, and unless this was done suit would be commenced in courts to recover same. Supreme Tent officials hold that Maccabee money in Thompson's possession was trust fund and for this reason could not be converted to his own use, and they claim the right at law to recover it from any parties in whose possession it may be found. That part of $57,000 which Thompson confesses to having embezzled went into the Port Huron Savings bank, Markey intimated the officials had proof, and within 24 hours they expect to know the exact amount, as they have been working on this matter for some time. At the last meeting of the board of trustees the entire matter was placed in the hands of D. D. Aitken, supreme counsellor for Supreme Tent, and word comes from Flint that suit will be started in a few days against one of the banks to recover a portion of embezzled money. The Maccabee officials were at first reticent to confirm the report, but finally did so. It was their wish not to make the matter public until papers for the suit had been prepared. Another purpose of the contemplated suit is to make the bank disclose just how much of the $57,000 passed into its hands providing the officials have not a correct estimate of amount traced. This complicates matters more than ever and is undoubtedly one of the reasons why officials of Supreme Tent have not applied for a warrant for Thompson's arrest.

D'Arcambal Home to Close.

Detroit, Mich., Jan. 4.—The annual meeting of the Agnes L. d'Arcambal society of this city, which will be held within the next two weeks, will be of particular interest, as the disposal of the d'Arcambal home of industry, Willis avenue, will be considered. It appears that the home, as it has been conducted, has outlived its usefulness. The society proposes branching out into wider sphere and desires to turn the building over to some other charitable organization.

Will Arrest Directors.

Niles, Mich., Jan. 4.—City Treasurer Charles Schmidt states that the directors of the dead First National bank have refused to produce the school fund which he had on deposit in the bank when the collapse came last March, and that criminal warrants will be issued for the arrest of the bank directors. Schmidt will charge the directors with misconduct and gross negligence as bank directors.

"I suffered for years with kidney trouble," writes Mrs. Phebe Cherley, of Peterson, Ia., "and a lame back pained me so I could not dress myself, but Electric Bitters wholly cured me, and although 73 years old, I now am able to do all my housework." 'TIS A SAD STORY

Told by a Survivor of the Walla Walla.

IT WAS A FRENCH SHIP

French Bark Max Was the Boat Which Ran Into the Walla Walla—She, Too, Suffered Great Damage and Nearly Went Down.

San Francisco, Jan. 6.—The French bark Max, which collided with the steamship Walla Walla early Thursday morning, is being towed to this city in a badly disabled condition. The steamer George W. Elder, from Portland, reports that she passed the Max Sunday morning in tow of the steamer Acme and the United States revenue cutter McCulloch, 18 miles northwest of Point Reyes. The Max's bowsprit was carried away and her bow was stove in, both above and below the water line. Her water tight compartments alone were keeping her afloat. Ninety-two survivors of the Walla Walla have arrived here from Eureka on the steamer Pomona. There is still some discrepancy in the list of dead and missing. This discrepancy is due to the fact that several passengers boarded the vessel just as she was leaving port. Others who were traveling second-class gave assumed names in order to hide their identity. By striking what are possible duplicates, the number of lost stands at 42, classed as follows:

Known dead, 9; missing, passengers, 13; crew, 20. One lift raft is unaccounted for and it is feared that all the missing are lost.

Rev. Henry Erickson, who was among the six survivors brought to this city by the steamer Nome City, is at a hospital, a physical and almost a mental wreck. His wife and three children are among the dead and missing. The Erickson family, excepting the mother, were second-class passengers. When the crash came they were awakened and all got on the upper deck together. Mrs. Erickson and the two younger children were separated from their father and the elder brother. What their fate was is not known, but it is presumed they were drowned when the vessel went down. Erickson and his son clung together and were pitched into the water clear of the sinking steamer.

They floated around for some time and finally were picked up by the life raft, on which were a number of the officers of the Walla Walla. It was almost daybreak when they were found and they were in an exhausted condition. Father and son were pulled on the light structure, but the boy was too weak to stand the exposure. A few hours later he died in his father's arms, and after the heart-broken man had bowed his head in silent prayer the body was consigned to the waves. The sea was running high and dashing over the raft, but all clung to it through the long hours of the day and the night. They hoped against hope until the Nome City picked them up. Mr. Erickson was the first to be lifted aboard. It is thought he will recover from the terrible effects of the exposure.

McKinley Day in Ohio.

Columbus, O., Jan. 6.—Gov. Nash has issued a proclamation setting aside two days for special contributions for the McKinley memorial fund. Ohio is expected to raise $100,000. Jan. 29 will be the fifty-ninth anniversary of the birth of William McKinley, and the governor suggests it be set apart by all the schools of Ohio as "McKinley day," and that it be observed by them with special exercises, each child at the same time to be given an opportunity to contribute his or her mite to the memorial fund. The governor also suggests that on the Sunday preceding Jan. 29 the churches of the state have special memorial exercises and that contributions be received for the fund on that occasion.

Emperor Gives a Gun.

Philadelphia, Jan. 6.—Peter Schneider, chairman of the German Veterans' Monument committee, announces that he has received contributions as follows: From Emperor William, a bronze gun captured in battle; from the grand duke of Hesse, 200 marks; from the grand duke of Baden, 200 marks; from the city of Hamburg, 200 marks; from the city of Bremen, 100 marks. The organization of the veterans of the German armies consists of 14 companies which have seen service in either or both the Austrian and Franco-Prussian wars.

Princess Louise Insane.

Berlin, Jan. 6.—Princess Louise, the eccentric daughter of King Leopold of Belgium, who was divorced from her husband, Prince Philip of Saxe-Coburg-Gothe, and who has been held practically a prisoner in retreat near Dresden for the last two years, has been pronounced hopelessly insane. Her daughter, Princess Dorothea, was married to Ernest-Genthier, duke of Sleswig-Holstein, brother of the present empress of Germany, and her sister, Princess Stephanie, was the wife of the Archduke Dudolphe of Austria, who committed suicide.

Gas Plant Blows Up.

Bradford, Pa., Jan. 6.—The Pennsylvania Gas Co.'s plant at Ludlow was wrecked last night by an explosion. Details of the occurrence are lacking. Warren reports that one man is missing and that another was blown through the side of the building and fatally injured.

Severe Weather in Klondike.

Vancouver, B. C., Jan. 6.—Two persons have died as a result of the severe weather near Dawson, according to advices brought by the steamer Amur today. The weather there is very stormy and the temperature has been as low as 50 degrees below zero.

Boiler in Residence Exploded.

Washington, Jan. 6.—The explosion of a boiler connected with the heating apparatus in the basement of the handsome five-story residence of Mr. Beale R. Howard, at 1410 16th street, Sunday morning, seriously damaged the house and may result in loss of life. The shock of the explosion was felt throughout the immediate neighborhood and the house was so badly wrecked as to be unfit for occupancy. William Foegus, the colored butler, who was attending the fires under the boiler at the time of the explosion was frightfully scalded and badly cut about the hands and face. His condition is critical. A rough estimate of the damage places it at $10,000 or more.

WROTE MANY BOOKS

Morgan Bates, Journalist, Dies at the Age of 54.

AUTHOR OF "MARTIN BROOK"

John Zitka of Traverse City Meets Horrible Death—Two Women Severely Injured by a Wire Being Placed Across a Sidewalk.

Traverse City, Mich., Jan. 6.—Morgan Bates, aged 54, died Sunday afternoon of pulmonary paralysis. He was a son of Merritt Bates, who was a brother of former Lieut.-Gov. Bates. He came here in '62, and later was editor of the Marshall Statesman and was connected with other Michigan papers. He was the author of "Martin Brook," recently published by Harper Bros., and other literary works. He leaves extensive literary work uncompleted. He was the husband of the late Clara Doty Bates, who died in 1895.

John Zitka, aged 74 years, fell down a cellarway in the rear of Columbia hall Saturday evening while at work and broke his neck, death being instantaneous.

Christian Blacken, an old member of the police force, is dead after a long illness.

Ellen Swan and Margaret Walden, on the way home from work Saturday night ran against a wire strung between trees across the walk. Miss Walden sustained a broken arm and other serious injuries, and Miss Swan received severe internal injuries from the fall.

BIG SUIT AGAINST MICHIGAN.

Michigan Central Wants Damages for Loss of Charter.

Chicago, Jan. 6.—The Record-Herald says: Dameges amounting to at least $5,000,000 and possibly to more than double that sum, will be brought by the management of the Michigan Central road against the state of Michigan. Suit to recover for loss already occasioned and to be occasioned in the years to come through the forced forfeiture of the special charter of the Michigan Central, will be begun in the United States court as soon as the assessment of damages can be determined by careful calculation. The legal controversy grows out of the recent law passed by the legislature of the state fixing the maximum charge per mile for passenger service at 2 cents.

Gave Garters to His Wife.

Albion, Mich., Jan. 6.—As a sequel to an alleged Christmas gift, four parties got into trouble at Albion in a way that furnished a lot of amusement. Philip Silverstein, a commercial man who travels out of Cleveland, O., and who has been visiting here with his wife at her home, entered the clothing store of Manheimer Bros. and accused young Lee Manheimer of sending a Christmas gift of a pair of garters to Mrs. Silverstein. Mr. Manheimer vigorously denied the allegation. Hot words followed and finally led to blows. Manheimer got out a warrant for Silverstein's arrest, charging assault and battery. Silverstein disappeared.

U. of M. to Debate on Jan. 10.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Jan. 6.—On the evening of Jan. 10, in University hall, the University of Michigan's efficiency in intercollegiate debating will again be put to the test in a meeting between the Michigan and Northwestern debaters, in the semi-final debate in the Central Debating league. The question for debate is the advisability of compulsory arbitration in labor disputes. Michigan has won nine consecutive intercollegiate debates and her total record is 11 victories out of 14 contests.

Charles Griffith Wanted.

Jackson, Mich., Jan. 6.—Charles Griffith, son of the well-known war veteran, Dan Griffith, who died here recently, is missing. He has been employed at Saginaw. On Dec. 28 his mother here telegraphed him that his father was dying. Griffith left Saginaw, saying that he was going to his dying father. This was the last heard of the son. The Jackson police are trying to locate him.

MICHIGAN BRIEFS.

Thomas Yates, a miner in the Calumet & Hecla mine, narrowly escaped death. He stepped before a lighted charge and was blasted.

The Lake Shore Railway Co. has paid to Ernest Murty of Adrian, through his attorney, John E. Bird, $1,200 for a sprained ankle received while unloading freight at Toledo in April, 1901.

The Battle Creek Institute of Mental and Physical Culture, Ltd., has filed articles of association at Marshall in the sum of $500,000 capital. One of the principal objects of the company is to teach hypnotism.

Oppose American Industry.

Paris, Jan. 6.—La Liberte has published a report to the effect that the Rockefellers intend to apply for a concession to supply gas to the city of Paris. The paper vigorously opposes this scheme and say it will be an act of mental aberration to accept such a proposition which would be disastrous to national production and a powerful help to the designs of the Americans, who wish not only to expel foreign industry from their own country but who seek to supplant foreigners on their own ground. La Liberte says the Rockefellers would not use a ton of French coal and that the granting of this concession to them would be a mighty weapon for the realization of the economic schemes of American imperialism in Europe.

MADE A CLEAN BREAST.

Stilson V. MacLeod Exposes the Grand Rapids Scandal.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Jan. 4.—Stilson V. MacLeod has made full confession of his connection with the water works boodling enterprise engineered by City Attorney Lant K. Salsbury and Thomas F. McGarry, by which it was proposed to saddle the city with a 50-year water contract involving several millions of money.

The confession was made in the office of the prosecuting attorney on New Year's eve. At the same time MacLead delivered documentary evidence of a most convincing nature to substantiate his statements. The confession reduced to writing and signed is in the prosecutor's office, and will not be made public until it is produced in the trial of Thomas F. McGarry, which is scheduled to open Jan 13. Enough has been given out, however, to show its nature and scope.

The confession is prefaced with the statement that MacLeod is "tired and sick of holding the candle for the devil." He then proceeds to business, and what he tells not only gives the details of the boodling operations, but flatly asserts that in the trial of City Attorney Salsbury the defense resorted to perjury without conscience or limit and sought to make use of fabricated documents without number.

PARDON BOARD ELECT OFFICERS

Released Convicts Are Holding Their Own.

Lansing, Mich., Jan. 4.—The state pardon board reorganized yesterday by electing Judge Russell R. Pealer of Three Rivers president and Judge W. R. Kendrick of Saginaw vice-president. Henry M. Zimmerman of Pontiac, executive clerk to Gov. Bliss, will continue as secretary by virtue of the former office.

Resolutions complimenting the retiring president, Dr. Frank W. Shumway of Williamston and Secretary Zimmermon on their excellent work of the past year were adopted.

The records of the board show that none of the convicts released on parole on recommendation of the board during the past year have violated any of the conditions of their paroles, although quite a number who were released the previous year have been returned to prison. During the year just closed 11 convicts were pardoned. Five of these, who were pardoned because of their physical condition, have since died. Two of the others were given long terms in prison for stealing a head of cabbage in Cass county.

Doubtful About McMillan.

Kalamazoo, Mich., Jan. 4.—N. H. Stewart of this city, who has been authorized by the state beet sugar men to represent the manufacturers' association in the fight to be made against tariff reduction on cane sugar, has announced that all the representatives in congress from Michigan had come out squarely for beet sugar. Senator Burrows is also against tariff reduction, but Senator McMillan's attitude is doubtful. As he himself states it, he is "still open to conviction." Stewart is collecting a large amount of data which he will fire at the ways and means committee of the house when it meets to consider the sugar tariff.

Boy Stabbed at Niles.

Niles, Mich., Jan. 4.—Andrew Jackson, a notorious colored lad, quarrell with Willie McBride, aged 18 years, and stabbed the latter in the right shoulder, inflicting a dangerous wound. Bystanders interfered in time to prevent a probable tragedy. Jackson is under arrest.

Saw Belle Isle's Deer.

Flint, Mich., Jan. 4.—Some time ago four deer escaped from Belle Isle park at Detroit. Yesterday one of the animals was seen in a corn field at Elba, Lapeer county. It was recognized by the brand and appeared quite tame. The other deer have been seen recently around Fish lake in Lapeer county.

Just Escaped Drowning.

Plymouth, Mich., Jan. 4.—William Pfeiffer, aged 30, essayed to coast down a hill here where the boys were making merry. He failed to make the turn at the bottom and went into the river below. He broke through the ice and went out of sight, but was pulled out, unconscious. He will probably recover.

Skipped With $500.

Menominee, Mich., Jan. 4.—Escanaba detectives are searching vigorously for Charles Morgan, a stable man, who is believed to have skipped out with $500 of his employer's money. Sam Newman of this city is the loser. A liberal reward has been offered for Morgan's capture, both by the sheriff at Escanaba and by Mr. Newman.

PRESIDENT'S DOG BIT HER.

Gets Judgment Against President Hayes's Estate.

Toledo, Jan. 4.—The circuit court yesterday handed down a decision affirming a decision of the lower courts, giving Mrs. Adelaide Smith of Fremont a judgment of $5,400 against the estate of the late President R. B. Hayes. This is the second time this case has been in the circuit court. Upon the first hearing in the common pleas court, Mrs. Smith secured a judgment of $7,500, the circuit court reduced it to $5,000, and the supreme court then remanded the case back to the common pleas court for re-hearing. The common pleas court at the second hearing gave Mrs. Smith a verdict of $5,400, and the circuit court has now affirmed this. Mrs. Smith was bitten by a dog belonging to the late president, and this is the cause for action.

POLITICS IN GRAND RAPIDS

Already Begin to Warm Up for Spring Election.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Jan. 6.—Municipal politics will not wait for the opening of spring this year to become a live issue. The offices to be filled this spring are mayor, judge of police court, clerk of superior court, and city treasurer, and in each ward one alderman. The present officials are democrats, except City Treasurer Frost, who is a republican. The aldermen whose terms expire this year are evenly divided between the two parties.

The greatest interest in the campaign will center around the mayoralty. Mayor Perry is now serving his second term. No candidate in his own party has yet risen up to dispute the nomination with him, but it is doubtful if he will be given a clear field. The republicans are very much at sea at this time as to who they shall put forward as their candidate.

Two worthies, Arthur A. Rood and John Rowson, have offered themselves.

A ROYAL GREETING.

Michigan's Football Team Got One Sunday Night.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Jan. 6.—Even Sunday could not prevent a football celebration over the return of the Michigan team from the Pacific coast with an unparalleled season of victories and scores. A crowd of 2,000 citizens and students had assembled at the depot and as the train from the west pulled in red fire and Roman candles were touched off and the band played the familiar "Rooting" songs. Mayor Copeland, the aldermen and all city officials were at the station. A procession was formed with carriage loads of prominent citizens escorting the football men.

Up through the main business streets and to the campus the line of march was like a lane of red fire. The triumphant march ended at the law building, where Prof. Copeland, mayor of the city, congratulated Yost's great proteges. Responses were made by ex-Capt. Snow, Capt. White and Captain-elect Shorts.

AFTER SEVERAL MILLIONS.

Two Dowagiac Men Claim Estates in Holland.

South Bend, Ind., Jan. 6.—Freeman and Finley Cronk of Dowagiac, Mich., are said to be two of the heirs to an estate in Holland valued at $80,000,000. About two years ago an attempt was made to effect an organization to prove the claim but the heirs did not meet with much encouragement. Now an impetus to the movement is given by the fact that the bride of Chauncey Depew is one of the heirs. It is hoped by some of the other heirs that she will enlist the services of her distinguished husband to work through the United States and Holland consular offices to secure the money.

Among the other heirs are Frank Cronk and Mrs. M. L. Wood of Chicago, Fred Cronk, a well-known Lake Shore railway man of Elkhart, Ind., and Mrs. Charles Mason of Argentine, Kan. Other heirs reside in New York and Pennsylvania.

Postmaster Was Short.

Ithaca, Mich., Jan. 6.—An apparent shortage has been discovered in the books of James W. Payne, postmaster at Pompeii, Mich. The amount is said to aggregate $1,860, but the official statement may differ widely from this. Up till today the inspector had not arrived. The alleged shortage was discovered the first of last week by his assistant, H. Snyder, but was not generally known till Saturday. On Jan. 2 Payne went into bankruptcy, making an assignment of the stock of his general store to his bondsmen, J. Snyder and J. Grubaugh. Numerous rumors are circulated concerning the manner in which the alleged shortage occurred, but nothing definite can be learned till the United States inspector examines the books.

Proposal Cost Him $5,000.

Lansing, Mich., Jan. 6.—Frank E. Powers of Springfort has published a signed statement to the effect that his daughter, Miss Dottie Powers, has received $5,000 in cash from Louis E. Landon, a wealthy land owner, in settlement for a breach of promise. Miss Powers, who is a charming young woman, had been engaged to Landon for years. The latter became enamored of Miss Pearl Hill of this city, whom he eloped with and married. Miss Powers was prostrated over the affair and has left for an extended trip south.

Fell and Broke His Neck.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Jan. 6.—Christian Hoerz, a young bookbinder living with his mother, Mrs. Christina Hoerz, on Seventh street, was accidently killed last night. He was at Nick Schneider's saloon and in going from the room opened the wrong door and fell into the cellar, a distance of some 10 feet. His neck was broken and his skull fractured, death ensuing in less than 20 minutes.

Four Years in Jackson.

Syndicate Is Solvent.

Cleveland, O., Jan. 6.—Interviews with the financial men who have attempted to save the Everett-Moore syndicate indicate what a narrow escape the syndicate and its allied interests had. Chairman Newcomb says that had the newspapers made sensations out of the developments and caused a panic there would have been little to save. He says: "The Everett-Moore syndicate is solvent in every way, but if their securities had been dumped on the market promiscuously it is doubtful whether they would have been."

THE COURIER OF THE CZAR

By Jules Verne

CHAPTER IX.

It was fortunate that Michael Strogoff had left the posting house so promptly. The orders of Ivan Ogareff had been immediately transmitted to all the approaches of the city and a full description of Michael sent to all the various commandants, in order to prevent his departure from Omsk. But he had already passed through one of the breaches in the fortifications. His horse was galloping over the steppe, and, not having been immediately pursued, the chances of escape were in his favor.

It was on the 29th of July, at 8 o'clock in the evening, that Michael Strogoff had left Omsk. This town is situated about half way between Moscow and Irkutsk, where it was necessary that he should arrive within ten days if he wished to get ahead of the Tartar columns. It was evident that the unlucky chance which had brought him into the presence of his mother had betrayed his incognito. Ivan Ogareff was no longer ignorant of the fact that a courier of the czar had just passed Omsk, taking the direction of Irkutsk. The dispatches which this courier bore must have been of immense importance. Michael Strogoff knew, therefore, that every effort would be made to capture him.

But what he did not know and could not know was that Marfa Strogoff was in the hands of Ivan Ogareff and that she was about to atone, perhaps with her life, for that natural exhibition of her feelings which she had been unable to restrain when she suddenly found herself in the presence of her son. And it was fortunate that he was ignorant of it. Could he have withstood this fresh trial?

Michael Strogoff urged on his horse, imbuing him with all his own feverish impatience, requiring of him one thing only—namely, to bear him rapidly to the next posting house, where he could be exchanged for a quicker conveyance.

At midnight he had cleared seventy versts and halted at the station of Koulikovo. But there, as he feared, he found neither horses nor carriages. Several Tartar detachments had passed along the highway of the steppe. Everything had been stolen or requisitioned both in the villages and in the posting houses. It was with difficulty that Michael Strogoff was even able to obtain some refreshment for his horse and himself.

It was of great importance therefore to spare his horse, for he could not tell when or how he might be able to replace it. Desiring, however, to put the greatest possible distance between himself and the horsemen whom Ivan Ogareff had no doubt dispatched in pursuit, he resolved to push on. After one hour's rest he resumed his course across the steppe.

And on July 30, at 4 p. m., Michael Strogoff, heedless of fatigue, arrived at Elamsk.

There he was forced to give a night's rest to his horse. The courageous beast could not have continued that journey any longer.

At Elamsk there was no means of transportation for the same reasons as in the burgs already passed by—carriages and horses were gone.

Elamsk, a small town the Tartars had not visited yet, was almost completely depopulated, for it was very easy to invade it from the south and almost impossible to succor it from the north. So relay of post, police station, government building, all were abandoned by governmental order, and on one side the functionaries, on the other the inhabitants, had gone to Kamsk, in the center of the Baraba.

Michael Strogoff was obliged to pass the night at Elamsk to permit his horse to rest at least twelve hours. He remembered the instructions given him at Moscow to cross Siberia unknown, reach Irkutsk at all hazards, but also to not sacrifice success to the swiftness of his passage. Consequently he was forced to spare the only means of travel left him.

On the morrow Michael Strogoff left Elamsk, and five days later, on the 5th of August, twenty-one days since starting, he found himself 1,500 versts yet distant from Irkutsk.

Michael Strogoff was rapidly nearing Kalyvan when distant detonations reached his ears.

He stopped and distinctly heard the dull, heavy reports which shook the air, mingled with sharper and shriller sounds, the cause of which he well knew.

He was only half a mile from Kalyvan when a long jet of flame flashed betwixt the houses of the city, and the spire of a church crumbled down in the middle of a torrent of embers and fire.

At that moment the detonations were very violent. Soon the flames stretched forth on the left of the city. The fire had devoured a whole quarter of Kalyvan.

Michael Strogoff was running across the plain, trying to reach the cover of some trees scattered here and there, when a detachment of Tartar cavalry appeared on the right.

Michael Strogoff could no longer go in that direction. The horsemen advanced rapidly toward the city, and it was difficult for him to escape. Suddenly at the corner of a thicket he saw a house which he might perhaps reach unperceived.

To run, to hide himself, to ask and to take there, if need be, something to renew his strength, for he was exhausted with fatigue and hunger, was Michael Strogoff's only resource. He fled then to this shelter, and, drawing near, he perceived that it was a telegraph station. Two wires were going east and west, and a third was stretched toward Kalyvan.

One would suppose that under the circumstances that station would have been adandoned, but as it was Michael Strogoff could find there a refuge, wait for the night if need be to travel again across the steppe which was searched by the Tartar pickets.

Michael Strogoff hurried toward the door of that house and opened it hastily. A single person, was in the room, where the dispatches were written. He was an employee, calm, cool, indifferent to all that was going on outside. Faithful to his post, he waited behind his window for the public to claim his services.

Michael Strogoff went to him and with a voice broken by fatigue asked:

"What do you know?"

"Nothing," answered the employee, smiling.

"Are the Russians and Tartars fighting?"

"People say so."

"But who are the victors?"

"I don't know."

So much coolness in the midst of these terrible occurrences, so much indifference even, was hardly possible.

"And is not the wire cut?" asked Michael Strogoff.

"It is cut between Kalyvan and Krasnoiarsk, but it works yet between Kalyvan and the Russian frontier."

"For the government?"

"For the government when they think it proper, for the public when they pay. It is 10 copecks a word. I wait your orders, sir."

Michael Strogoff was going to answer that strange operator that he had no dispatch to send; that he wanted only a little bread and water, when suddenly the door of the house was abruptly opened.

Michael Strogoff thought the office invaded by the Tartars and was about to jump through the window when he noticed that two men only entered the room and that they were far from being Tartar soldiers.

One of them held a dispatch written in pencil, and, outrunning the other, he was at the window of the stoical employee. In those two men Michael Strogoff was astonished to discover two persons he had thought never to see again. They were the correspondents Harry Blount and Alcide Jolivet, no more traveling companions, but rivals, enemies, now that they were operating on the battlefield.

They had left Ichim a few hours only after the departure of Michael Strogoff, and if they arrived before him at Kalyvan in following the same route it was because Michael Strogoff had lost three days on the borders of the Irtish. And now, after having witnessed the battle between the Russians and the Tartars in front of the city, leaving the city when the struggle was still going on in the streets, they had to run to the station to send away their dispatches to Europe, each seeking to rob the other of priority in describing the stirring events.

Michael Strogoff kept at a distance in the shadow, and without being seen he could see all and hear all. He was probably about to learn important news and know if he ought to enter Kalyvan or not.

Harry Blount, more alert than his colleague, had possession of the window and handed in his dispatch, while Alcide Jolivet, contrary to his habits, stopped impatiently. "Ten copecks a word," said the operator, taking the dispatch.

Harry Blount placed a pile of rubles on the counter, his confrere looking at him somewhat stupefied.

"Well," said the employee, and with undisturbed sang froid he commenced to telegraph the following dispatch:

> Daily Telegraph, London:
> From Kalyvan, Government of Omsk, Siberia, Aug. 6.—Engagement of Russian troops with Tartars.

That reading being made aloud, Michael Strogoff could hear all the English correspondent addressed to his paper.

> Russian troops repulsed with great losses. Tartars enter Kalyvan this day.

These words ended the dispatch.

"My turn now," said Alcide Jolivet who tried to pass his dispatch addressed to his cousin of the Montmartre Faubourg.

But that did not suit the English reporter, who thought of remaining at the window as long as he should have news to transmit, as fast as fresh events might occur, so he did not give place to his confrere.

"You are through?" cried Alcide Jolivet.

"I am not through," simply answered Harry Blount.

And he went on writing words which he passed to the operator, who read very quietly:

> In the beginning God created heaven and earth.

They were verses from the Bible Harry Blount was telegraphing to gain time and not give place to his rival. That would probably cost a few thousand rubles to his paper, but his paper would have the first information. France might wait.

Think of the anger of Alcide Jolivet, who under any other circumstances would have appreciated the joke. He even insisted that the operator should take his dispatches in preference to those of his confrere.

"That is the right of the gentleman," said the employee coolly, pointing to Harry Blount, smiling kindly to him.

And he continued to transmit to The Daily Telegraph the first book of the holy writ.

While he was operating Harry Blount went to the window, and with his glass he observed what was going on about Kalyvan, so as to complete his information.

A few minutes later he took his place again at the office window and added to his telegram:

> Two churches in flames. The fire seems to gain on the right. The earth was without form and void. Darkness covered the face of the earth.

Alcide Jolivet had simply a ferocious desire to strangle the honorable reporter of The Daily Telegraph.

He once more called upon the employee, who again coolly answered:

"It is his right, sir; it is his right. Ten copecks a word."

And he telegraphed the following news, handed him by Blount:

> Russian refugees escape the city. And God said, "Let there be light, and there was light."

Alcide Jolivet was literally transported with rage.

Meanwhile Harry Blount was again at the outside window, but this time, absentminded probably on account of the spectacle he saw, he made his observations too long. So when the operator had finished sending the third verse of the Bible Alcide Jolivet quietly took his place at the wicket and, as his colleague had done, placed a respectable pile of rubles on the desk and handed his dispatch, which the employee read aloud:

> Madeleine Jolivet, 10 Faubourg Montmartre, Paris:
> Kalyvan, Government of Omsk, Aug. 6.—Runaways fly from the city. Russians beaten. Furious pursuit by the Tartars.

And when Harry Blount came back he heard Alcide Jolivet completing his telegram, singing musingly with mockery:

> "There was a little man all dressed in gray, in Paris."

Alcide Jolivet thought it better not to mix sacred things with profane as his colleague had done, and he answered by a joyful chorus of Beranger to the verses of the Bible.

At that moment a commotion shook the telegraph office. A shell had entered the wall, and a cloud of dust filled the waiting room.

Alcide Jolivet was just finishing his verse, "as red as an apple, who, without a penny," but without stopping threw himself on the shell, took it in his hands before it exploded, threw it out of the window and came back to the wicket. It was all done in an instant.

In five seconds the shell burst outside.

Then, continuing his telegram with perfect coolness, Alcide Jolivet wrote:

> A shell of sixty pounds' weight has burst through the wall of the telegraph office. Expect some others of same caliber.

For Michael Strogoff there was no room to doubt but that the Russians were repulsed from Kalyvan. His last resource was, then, to hasten over the southern plain.

But then the general discharge of guns was heard terribly near the telegraph station, and a hailstorm of bullets crashed through the window. Harry Blount, struck on the shoulder, fell.

Alcide Jolivet was at that moment about to transmit this supplement to his dispatch:

> Harry Blount, reporter of The Daily Telegraph, falls at my side, struck with a piece of bombshell.

But the operator told him with imperturbable coolness:

"Sir, the wire is broken."

And, leaving his window, he quietly took his hat, which he brushed with his sleeve, and, always smiling, went out through a small door which Michael Strogoff had not before noticed.

The station was then invaded by Tartars, and neither Michael Strogoff nor the journalists were able to effect their retreat.

Alcide Jolivet, with his useless dispatch in hand, ran to Harry Blount, stretched on the floor, and, kind hearted as he was, took him on his shoulders with the intention to flee with him. It was too late!

Both were prisoners, and with them Michael Strogoff, taken by surprise when he was about to jump through the window into the hands of the Tartars.

The Reason.

A German professor who is given to great deliberation of speech and has never been known to increase its speed under the most compelling circumstances had an amusing experience in a restaurant not long ago.

The waiter had brought him raw oysters, and, to his dismay, he saw that the professor had apparently no intention of tasting them.

"I cannot eat these oysters," said the German slowly, without raising his eyes to the anxious waiter. The man seized the plate and bore it out of sight in an instant. He was a new waiter, and it was with much trepidation that he laid the second supply of oysters before this discriminating patron.

"I cannot eat these oysters," said the professor after one glance at the plate which had been set before him.

"I—I think you'd find them all right, sir," faltered the waiter. "I don't think there's anything wrong about them, sir." He looked miserable, having been told that the German was a frequent and valued patron of the restaurant and must be well and quickly served.

"I cannot eat these oysters," announced the professor for the third time, with the calmness of chorus in a tragedy, "because as yet you have furnished me no fork."—Youth's Companion.

The Public Taste.

Several kind Workers pooled their Efforts to insure the Waifs a happy Holiday. They rounded up the little Hickeys at a Mission and gave them a Free Show. Every Swipes in the Place was a Monday Night Gallery God, so the Church Talent was going against a knowing Proposition.

A pale young Man with amber Fire Escapes sprang a line of Parlor Magic that would have queered even a Supper Show. The Bunch advised him to back off the Dump. When a Young Lady with Glasses tackled "Stabat Mater" on the Violin they broke her up with Cat Calls and told her to tear off some Rag Time. They bleated at the Amateur Elocutionist and acted Rowdy when a Stout Woman got up to read a Fairy Tale from Hans Christian Andersen. Then they began to yell for Mulligan and Hicks to come on and save the Show. Whereupon two pug faced Kids came forward and did a Hottentot Song and Dance with a Buck and Wing finish that killed them dead.

A Testimonial Worth Having.

An inventor, having produced a wonderful hair invigorating fluid, sent a case of bottles to a bald editor, with a request for a testimonial. He got it in these terms:

"A little applied to the inkstand has given it a coat of bristles, making a splendid penwiper at a small cost. We applied the lather to a twopenny nail, and the nail is now the handsomest shaving brush you ever saw, with beautiful, soft hair growing from the end of it some five or six inches in length.

"Applied to doorsteps, it does away with the use of a mat; applied to the floor, it will cause to grow therefrom hair sufficient for a brussels carpet. A little weak lather sprinkled over a shed makes it impervious to the wind, rain or cold. It is good to put inside children's cradles, sprinkle on the roadside or anywhere that luxurious grass is wanted for use or ornament. It produces the effect in ten minutes."—Collier's Weekly.

Why She Was Silent.

A very silent old woman was once asked why it was she had so little to say. She replied that when she was a young girl she was very ill and could not talk for a long time. Whereupon she made a vow that if speech were given her once more she would never again say anything unkind of anybody. And thus she was as they found her.

He Was It.

The fresh young man walked into the restaurant and noticed a sign:

"This Counter For Clams and Oysters."

"Where is the counter for lobsters?" asked the young man.

"Oh, you can sit most anywhere!" said the waiter.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

Help... Nature

Babies and children need proper food, rarely ever medicine. If they do not thrive on their food something is wrong. They need a little help to get their digestive machinery working properly.

SCOTT'S EMULSION OF COD LIVER OIL
WITH HYPOPHOSPHITES of LIME & SODA

will generally correct this difficulty.

If you will put from one-fourth to half a teaspoonful in baby's bottle three or four times a day you will soon see a marked improvement. For larger children, from half to a teaspoonful, according to age, dissolved in their milk, if you so desire, will very soon show its great nourishing power. If the mother's milk does not nourish the baby, she needs the emulsion. It will show an effect at once both upon mother and child.

POCKET COMPASSES.

Thousands of Them Sold Yearly to Hunters and Others.

"Pocket compasses," said a dealer in such things, "cost from 25 cents to $10 each, and they are made in various sizes, from tiny compasses half an inch or less in diameter up to those of about the size of a hunting case watch.

"Many compasses are carried in nickeled hunting cases. Some of the tiny open compasses are carried for a charm on watch guards.

"In the cheaper pocket compasses the needle turns on a brass bearing; in the costlier, compasses on a bearing of agate. In either, of course, the needle will point north, but the compass with the agate bearing will wear much longer.

"A good pocket compass will last a lifetime. A considerable part of the cost of the more expensive pocket compasses may be due to the material used in them and to elaborateness of finish.

"A ten dollar compass, for instance, might have a pearl face, and so on, but a good compass, with an agate bearing, as good a compass, in fact, as a man needs, can be bought for $1.50.

"Every wise sportsman carries a compass, and compasses are carried by various other people. There are sold of pocket compasses of one sort and another thousands yearly."—New York Sun.

The ushers at the M. E. church could not find the contribution boxes Sunday morning and the congregation commenced to imagine they would not be waited upon, for one of the ushers took his seat while the other resumed the search. Rev. Yager came to the rescue by introducing the old fashonied method of passing the hat. When you beat a Methodist audience out of an opportunity to contribute toward the support of the gospel you'll have to get up in the morning for you know the adage goes, "a meeting wouldn't be a Methodist without a collection was taken."—Reese Review.

Now look out for cards containing a girl's name, when you open a package of health food. A Battle Creek girl something over a year ago while packing some of the many food products made there, enclosed her card. The package found its way to some place in Connecticut, and a young man secured it. He thought it would be a good idea to get up a correspondence and write. She replied and after a while photos were exchanged. Later he came to Battle Creek, took a personal inventory and Tuesday he and Miss Ada White were married, the ceremony being at Bristol, Tenn., at the home of the bride's aunt. Every unmarried girl in Battle Creek will now stick a [illegible] in each package of grape nut, [illegible] meal, malta vita, plasco or other boxed edibles handled by them.—Adrian Press.

A Jackson preacher gave an address on "Will there be many men in heaven?" You will have to search us but we would not be at all surprised if there would be a few lucky ones who managed to get through the pearly gates. It will be an awful lonesome place for the women if they do not. Don't know where the preacher gets his authority for knowing whether there will be few or many of the male members of society that will finally reach the goal of eternal bliss, but maybe he has a peculiar gift whereby he can see. Jackson men are about as good as men in general, so perhaps the minister may be a little surprised. There are too many practical subjects to be discussed in the pulpit without wasting time trying to discover who will go to heaven.

Barrett—Jackson.

Yesterday at the Manning House parlors in Windsor, Miss Ina Jackson was united in marriage to Lavern Barrett by Rev. James Livingston, pastor of the Methodist church, in the presence of a few of their Detroit friends.

Miss Jackson is a graduate of the Tecumseh high school, has always lived here and has hosts of friends and acquaintances, who sincerely congratulate her. Mr. Barrett has lived in Tecumseh about two years. He is a young man much respected by his acquaintances, and is a first class workman, held in high esteem by his employers.

A FINE WEDDNIG

Celebrated at Battle Creek last Tuesday, Dec. 31, at which Time

MISS "DOT" WOODEN

Was Married to Roy Starr Hinsdell, of Elgin, Ill.

Miss Clarissa Wooden, the niece of Mrs. H. E. Stout, of Tecumseh, was married last Tuesday at Battle Creek to Roy Hinsdell, of Elgin, and as "Dot" is well known to all the young people in Tecumseh, having visited her aunt and other relatives in Tecumseh every year the people here were all interested and delight in hearing all the particulars of the affair. In fact the match was quite an affair of Tecumseh. A few years ago the Stacys gave a house party here and at this time the two young people became acquainted.

"Dot" is known as a most delightful and loving young lady and Roy Hinsdell is a model young man, well connected and with the best business prospects, in fact the wedding is delightful in every way and congratulations are in order from all her friends.

The Battle Creek Journal speaks as follows of the affair:

Amid the beautiful holly and mistletoe, and surrounded by loving friends and relatives, Miss Clarissa Wooden, one of the most popular young society belles of this city, New Year's eve became the bride of Mr. Roy Starr Hinsdell, of Elgin, Ill.

At 6:30 the guests began to arrive and the door was opened for them by Master Donald Stillson, and ushered to wrap-removing rooms by little Miss Edna Pfander.

At 7 o'clock, unattended, the bride and groom took their station in the drawing room where Rev. S. J. Stewart united them with the impressive ring service.

The bride was most handsomely gowned in a dress of cream silk crepe de chene with garnitures of panne velvet, chiffon and heavy silk passementerie. The skirt cut en-train contained six pleated chiffon ruffles headed with silk applique, and the entire gown was made over heavy taffeta silk. The waist was made with a belero effect of white panne velvet, with elaborate passementerie trimmings, and she carried a shower bouquet of bride's roses containing the ring, dime and thimble, which the following young ladies received: Miss Adelaide North, Miss Bessie Caldwell and Miss Ida Freeman.

The entire house plainly reminded one of the holiday season, as the bulk of the decorations consisted of ground pine, holly and mistletoe.

In the dining room the color scheme of red and green was effectively carried out, a moulding of holly being formed around the room, while from opposite corners, stands of red ribbons met at the chandelier with a lovers knot, and a shower boquet of red carnations fell over the bride's table.

The Germania band discoursed a program of popular music throughout the evening, which added pleasantry to the occasion.

The gifts received were numerous and elegant, among them being four checks for neat sums, bric-a-brac, silver, cut glass and hand decorated china. The groom's gift to the bride was a handsome gold locket with diamond setting, and the bride presented each young friend that served with a solid silver teaspoon.

The bride, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Wooden, is well and favorably known and has the highest respect of a wide circle of friends.

The groom, a traveling representative for Marshall Field of Chicago, has the highest respect of both employers and fellow men, and has been connected with that firm for over seven years, the numerous congratulatory telegrams received substantiates the fact.

The bride and groom left New Years's evening for a bridal trip in the west, and will make their home in Chicago.

The guests from Tecumseh were Mrs. H. E. Stout and son Charlie, Misses Loana Stacy, Elona Anderson Louie Walker, and C. H. Hopkins.

SHOOTING AFFAIR

On Sunday night Bert Farrington, of Milan, shot

JESSE E. HOOKER

In Adrian, Hooker Died Monday Morning at 9 o'clock.

Adrian is all excited over a shooting affair, which occurred in Adrian Sunday evening. Bert Farrington, a butcher of Milan, deliberately came to Adrian Sunday, walked up to 15 Merich street, found his wife in a room with Jesse Hooker, shot said Hooker and they put him in jail.

The Adrian police, prosecuting attorney and sheriff were made parties to the affair by accompanying Farrington to the house where the shooting occurred. Hooker died Monday morning and by the foolish actions of prosecuting attorney and sheriff and the police, the murderer will, no doubt, get clear without a shadow of a doubt.

A Business Change.

John Primrose left yesterday for Cleveland and will take a position on the road with the Root, McBride Co. selling underwear.

John Primrose's friends are delighted to congratulate him on the new position, which came to him entirely unsolicited, yet are very sorry to lose him from Tecumseh. Especially do they mourn at S. W. Anderson' for he has been with this store since its start and was regarded by Mr. Anderson as the best dry goods employee in Tecumseh. All are his friends and they say, "John, good to you always." Fayron Anderson will fill the position made vacant by John Primrose.

Special Pains

For many months Wm. Gaston & Son have been taking special pains in sorting up their stationary department until today they have the finest line ever seen in Tecumseh. All new neat styles and at all prices, Call and see their stock and you will find anything you desire.

If the old saying, "All the world loves a lover," is true, then the fiction in the Cosmopolitan for January should be popular indeed. All the stories vary in treatment, plot and action, from Frances Courtenay Baylor's charming story, "Cupid's Practical Joke," to Maarten Maartens' strong domestic tragedy, "Her Father's Wife," but all have love for a central theme.

INCIDENTS

Concerning Affairs here and there

OF MUCH INTEREST

To Nearly Every One.

Newberry Satterthwaite was until lately, the owner of a Fox terrier, called Bob Tailed Flush. This dog was sent him as a present from "Corb" Stacy at Buffalo, New York and has been at the same time a great pleasure as well as a great annoyance to his master. No smarter dog was ever brought up in this community, his intelligence is manifest on all occasions but "Bob" was a born tramp, would go away for days at a time, becoming well known all over town and coming home again whenever he felt like it. Another habit he formed was jumping on Newberry's bed in the middle of the night, and although Newberry is the best natured man in several townships, he is said to have resented this playful habit of Bobs and locked him out of the room.

Friends either of Newberry or Bob it makes no difference, now claim that Bob was broken hearted at this treatment and committed suicide. Anyway it can now be said that

Bob Tailed Flush has breathed his last,
He was killed by a Lake Shore train,
He barked at the cars, slipped and fell
And under the wheels was slain.

For four years London Punch lampooned Abraham Lincoln with pencil and pen. But when Lincoln was assassinated, Punch, in a poem which has held its place as a model of its kind, did what it could by way of reparation.

Before McKinley's death the cartoonists were busy caricaturing him. But after the Buffalo tragedy in many instances the same pencils had dwarfed the American Presiddnt portrayed him as a giant in statesmanship. In almost every publication the jesters for weeks seemed afraid to touch any topic with irreverence.—Saturday Evening Post.

There was never any truer saying than "One must wait till after a man's death to find out his real worth.

Hazen S. Pingree was abused by numbers of all parties about his "three cent fares" when mayor of Detroit, simply because his ideas were not for all times successful, and now that the city of Detroit is called upon to grant a new franchise to the railway syndicate, all hands say "nothing but a three cent fare will ever do."

The last years that Pingree was Governer of Michigan he spent endeavoring to make railroads and other corporations pay their share of the taxes, the old man was unsuccessful for he was more earnest than judiceous in his methods, yet in a way he was honest and in spite of all, the day will come when Michigan will compel the corporations to pay their share of the taxes.

The temporary suspension of business of the Everett—Moore Syndicate of Detroit, brings to mind this company is behind the concern lately granted a franchise to build a telephone exchange in Tecumseh and it is to be hoped that this exchange will never be built if the Tecumseh Telephone Company continues to give as good service as it is now giving at the present rate.

Too many poles are on the streets now and instead of the council giving away franchises to new companies to erect more, it should give orders to cut down some of the old poles and make sightly streets.

Last Friday afternoon Mrs. Cleo Hall nicely entertained a company of ladies at her residence on Maiden Lane from three till five o'clock. Sixty-three was the game of the afternoon, light refreshments were served and Miss Grace Gillespie secured first prize while Mrs. Thos. Adamson secured the consolation. LITERARY NOTES

The January Atlantic opens with a preamble On Reading the Atlantic Cheerfully; a delightful invocation, the sense and humor of which will commend themselves to all readers. Professor John B. Clark, of Columbia University, contributes a notable article in the "Looking Barkward" vein, rehearsing and analyzing the probabilities of the coming century, from the standpoint of a citizen of the year 2000.

An article by William E. Smythe in the Review of Reviews for January outlines a possible program for Congress to follow in dealing with the problem of irrigation in the west. According to the plan proposed by Mr. Smythe, the national government would construct the reservoirs and main canals, while the various State governments would attach to the irrigated land itself.

Lovers of Dickens—and they are innumerable—will welcome the two papers on Dickens in the current number of the Critic, also fully illustrated after portraits and drawings. Mr. B. W. Matz writes of "Dickens and his Illustrators," and Mr. George Gissing pays in his appreciation entitled "Dickens in Memory," a delicate tribute to a man who in many respects has been his inspiration. The five unpublished portraits of Dickens add substantially to the novelty of these two papers.

The model that should be held up to American women of to-day is not the Amazon, glorying in her martial deeds and powers; not the Spartan, who made female perfection to consist in the development of physical strength at the expense of feminine decorum and modesty; not the goddess of impure love like Venus, whose votaries regarded beauty of form and personal charm as the highest types of womanly excellence. No, the model that should be held up before you and all women is Mary, the mother of Christ. She is the great pattern of virtue, and all that goes to make the perfect woman alike to maiden, wife and mother.—Cardinal Gibbons, in the Ladies' Home Journal for January.

A Willing Martyr.

Schoolteachers sometimes ask their pupils queer questions, if one may believe a story told by the youngest member of the Withington family.

His mother one morning discovered a shortage in her supplies of pies, baked the day before, and her suspicions fell upon Johnny.

"Johnny," she said, "do you know what became of that cherry pie that was on the second shelf in the pantry?"

"Yes, ma'am," he replied. "I ate it. But I had to."

"You had to!" exclaimed his astonished mother. "What do you mean, child?"

"The teacher asked yesterday if any of us could tell her how many stones there are in a cherry pie, and I couldn't find out without eating the whole pie, could I? There's just 142."—Youth's Companion.

Father's Idea of Shoes.

"Spell shoes," said the teacher.

"S-h-o-e-s," returned the little one promptly.

"Correct," said the teacher. "Of course you know what they are."

The little one nodded his head violently.

"My papa says," he announced, "that shoes are what drive the father of a family into bankruptcy."—Chicago Post.

ANN ARBOR SPEAKS.

Contractor Wooley of Ann Arbor Makes a Public Statement.

Mr. Edwin Wooley contractor and carpenter of Ann Arbor, adds his voice to that of the army of Michigan people who endorse the little conqueror. Our representative found him at his place of residence, No. 618 Fountain street. Mr. Wooley appreciates "a good thing" as do most of our readers, and he does not hesitate to tell his experience for the benefit of others. Endorsement of this kind has made Doan's Kidney Pills a household word throughout the state. The good they have done has won them many a title and such worthy names among the people as the "little conqueror of kidney ills," "little enemies to backache" modern wonder-workers" etc. Mr Wolley says: "I was subject for years to attacks of backache or pains in the loins and kidneys, generally of a dull heavy, aching nature, but often when the weather changed or when I moved awkwardly they became sharp twinges of pain. As I was doing work which required stooping it was very painful, exceedingly so, if I caught cold which, as a rule, settled in my loins. I tried various remedies but was never successful in obtaining any permanent benefit until I used Doan's Kidney Pills. At the time my back was troubling me a great deal but shortly after I began the treatment the aching abated and when I had finished it I was cured. This is months ago and up to date there has been no recurrence of the trouble."

Doan's Kidney Pills for sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Mailed by Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the U. S.. Remember the name Doan and take no substitute.

Africans Wash, but Never Wipe.

Great attention is given in most of the African tribes to the care of the body. The teeth are cleansed with a stick which has been chewed into a kind of brush. The hands are washed frequently, not by turning and twisting and rubbing them together one within the other, as with us, but by a straight up and down rubbing, such as is given to the other limbs. This manner of washing is so characteristic that an African might be distinguished by it from a European without reference to the color. The sun is their only towel.

The Earliest Cigars.

The earliest mention of cigars in English occurs in a book dated 1735. A traveler in Spanish America named Cockburn, whose narrative was published in that year, describes how he met three friars at Nicaragua, who, he says, "gave us some seegars to smoke; * * * these are Leaves of Tobacco rolled up in such Manner that they serve both for a Pipe and Tobacco itself; * * * they know no other way here, for there is no such Thing as a Tobacco Pipe throughout New Spain."

A Change.

"We must economize," he said peremptorily.

"I'm so glad!" his wife exclaimed.

"You take the announcement more good naturedly than usual."

"Yes; it's pleasant to hear you use the plural pronoun. Ordinarily, when there is any economizing needed, you expect me to do it all."

Standing clear and distinct, marking the difference, the superior merit, the adaptability to present day ailments is the volume of local testimony for Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Pills. Its so different to the ordinary remedies referring to cures made at distant points, which it is hard to verify. There is a reason for Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Pills commanding home evidence wherever they are known. It is the wonderful influence in bringing up the standard of nerve force. Mrs. B. E. Gray, of Tecumseh, Mich., says:

"Last summer I had an attack of fever, which left me in a weak, dizzy and nervous state. I got a box of Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Pills at Chas. A. Wright's drug store and after using the pills I can say my nerves were strengthened and I feel better every way. I think the pills all right."

A LESSON IN CHESS.

Why Willie's Papa Ended It Almost Before It Was Begun.

Paterfamilias, with a laudable desire to keep Willie at home at night, offered to teach him to play chess. The boy was delighted, and the game began.

"Put the little ones, pawns, all along the front and the big ones behind, as I show you."

"I think that is cowardly. The big ones ought to be in front. Ma says"—

"Oh, but that is the rule. Now, see—no; put that rook in the corner."

"Rook! What's a rook?"

"It is a kind of bird."

"Well, that ain't a bird. It looks like a castle."

"Call it a castle, then—and put the knight next"—

"Why is that called a knight? It looks like a horse's head."

"And then the bishop," went on paterfamilias, ignoring the question; "so, and then"—

"Why is the bishop's head split in two, pop?"

"Oh, that is his hat—a cardinal's hat."

"But I thought he was a bishop!"

"A cardinal is also a bishop. Now don't talk so much, Willie. Then you put the king and queen"—

"The queen is bigger than the king, pop!"

"Well, so she is. Who said she wasn't?" said paterfamilias, with a trace of impatience in his tone. "And then another bishop; so."

"Why are there two bishops, pop?"

"Because the rules say so. Now, I shall move first."

"What, after all that trouble, are you going to move them again?"

"Say, Willie, I believe my head is aching. I shall show you the rest some other time," said paterfamilias as he swept the men into the box.—New York Times.

How to Teach a Pet to Ride a Ball.

Many readers have doubtless seen bears standing on a rolling ball and maintaining their balance perfectly while rolling it about the arena. I have a bear who delights to do the trick. He can scarcely wait for his time to come to perform. He was taught, as they are all taught, by jogging his pedestal while he tried to keep from being jostled off. Gradually the pedestal was substituted for a ball with many flat places on it, and this was followed by a perfect sphere. He has been performing two years now, and I have never known him to slip and fall off.—Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly.

SOME LEGAL FREAKS

CURIOUS TWISTS THAT OBTAIN IN ENGLISH CRIMINAL LAW.

A Person May Be Guilty of Perjury Though He Swears to the Truth—No Such Offense as Trespass—Points About Forgery.

In no branch of the law as it is dispensed in Great Britain are such curious points to be found or a greater number of anomalies to be met with than in the criminal branch thereof.

It may be news to some people, for instance, to know that there are a number of things in existence which cannot be stolen, such as a corpse, animals feræ naturæ—i. e., animals wild in a state of nature (with certain exceptions created by statute)—soil of the earth, etc. To attempt to steal nothing would appear on the face of it to be an impossibility, much less a crime, but a man indicted for attempting to pick a lady's pocket which was subsequently found to be empty was found guilty of an "attempt to commit theft," though, in fact, there was nothing in the pocket to steal.

Any one lucky enough to pick up a sovereign lying in the road will be glad to hear that, if at the time of finding it he had no reasonable means of discovering the owner of it, and also if he did not at the same time conceive the idea of appropriating it to himself, he will not be guilty of stealing if he keeps his lucky find, even if the rightful owner discovers and claims it.

Most people walking in the country must have noticed on numerous occasions boards or placards posted up in woods, fields, etc., notifying in large letters that "trespassers will be prosecuted," but few are aware that such notices are utterly useless and no one need feel the least alarm thereat, there being no such offense known in criminal law as such a trespass, and a person could never be prosecuted for such an offense. They are, in fact, in the words of that eminent jurist, Sir Frederick Pollock, in his well known work, "Pollock on Torts," a "wooden falsehood."

It is a common fallacy to imagine that the crime of forgery consists in signing another's name, though in fact committing forgery consists in making and uttering any false instrument in writing with attempt to defraud; thus it may be a forgery to omit a word from a document, and it will be a matter of considerable surprise to many to learn that it is possible for a person to forge his or her own name. A person, however, who fraudulently inserts another's name on a picture, thereby selling it as the work of some other artist, is not guilty of forgery, as a picture is not an "instrument in writing."

The crime of perjury also does not quite "fit in" with the generally accepted idea, which is that if a person, after being sworn on oath to speak the truth, swears falsely, he is guilty of such offense. This is correct with the important qualification that the fact the witness has sworn to must be material to the case. Thus, if a witness on being duly sworn gave a false address on being asked where he lived, this, though untrue, would not amount to perjury, as the place where the witness lived would be quite immaterial.

That a person may be guilty of perjury though speaking the truth may seem a curious anomaly, but such nevertheless is the fact, as the test of perjury is not whether a person is speaking what he believes to be the truth; so, if a witness, for instance, on being asked, "What colored tie was the prisoner wearing when you met him?" replied "red," when in fact he did not really notice, he would be guilty of perjury, even though the prisoner was in reality wearing a red tie when the witness met him.

Numerous other instances of crimes which present similar curious points to the above might be given, and, in passing, persons taking out insurances against burglary might note that this crime can only be committed between the hours of 9 p. m. and 6 a. m.; that breaking into a house by means of an open door or window is not burglary, although entering a house by sliding down the chimney is.

We must not conclude this article without a short reference to a comparatively recent case in which a man not possessing the means to pay entered a restaurant, where he ordered and ate a good dinner. As, however, he was unable to pay for the same he was given in charge and subsequently indicted for "obtaining goods by false pretenses." The case resulted in the prisoner's acquittal on the ground that he had not been guilty of any false pretenses.

This individual therefore had a good meal on the cheap, but we should not advise any enterprising reader to emulate his example, as, although he could not indeed be prosecuted for obtaining goods by false pretenses, it seems that he will still be criminally liable under the bankruptcy act for obtaining credit by fraudulent means.—London Tit-Bits.

Averting a Panic.

On one occasion John Philip Sousa by his promptness was the direct means of stopping a panic which might have had the most disastrous results. While his band was playing before 12,000 people in St. Louis the electric lights in the hall went out suddenly. People began to move uneasily in their seats, and some even began to make a rush for the doors. Coolly tapping with his baton, Sousa gave a signal, and immediately his band began playing, "Oh, Dear, What Can the Matter Be?" A tiny ripple of laughter that went round the audience showed that confidence had partially been restored. When the band began to play "Wait Till the Clouds Roll By," the laughter deepened into a roar of merriment that only ended when the lights were turned on again.

On the Free List.

Some years ago there was a tollgate on a plank road leading to Elmwood cemetery, Detroit. All funerals were allowed to pass along this road without paying.

One day Dr. Pierce, a well known physician, while paying his toll, jokingly remarked to the gatekeeper:

"Considering the benevolent character of our profession, I think you ought to let us pass free of charge."

"No, no, doctor," said the gatekeeper; "we can't afford that. You send too many deadheads through as it is."—New York Times.

A Prisoner.

"I thought you guaranteed that suit of underwear you sold me not to shrink," said the customer who entered the store and stood in a somewhat cramped attitude.

"I did," replied the merchant. "If it shrinks, bring it back."

"I have brought it back," said the customer in evident embarrassment, "but I got caught out in the rain and can't get it off."—Ohio State Journal.

C. A. WRIGHT

DRUGGIST.

FOOLED THE COLONEL.

The Way Paddy Brannigan Outmaneuvered His Superior.

The colonel, or "Old Daddy," as he was usually called, had a habit of strolling round the camps at most unseasonable hours. Sentries had to be continually on the alert, for nothing would have given "Old Daddy" greater satisfaction than to have pounced on some luckless one who might think the midnight hours suitable for a quiet snooze.

Paddy Brannigan made that mistake once. There in the quiet moonlight he sat, all unconscious of the colonel's presence, his rifle laid against the tent, himself buried in slumber. Gently the rifle was lifted from its place. But some good angel awoke Paddy in time to see the colonel making his way to the guard tent. Paddy missed his rifle at once and followed the colonel with the caution of a prairie cat.

Outside the guard tent stood the wooden rack which held the rifles of the guard, and into it "Old Daddy" placed Paddy's rifle, himself entering the tent to call the sergeant in charge. This was Paddy's opportunity. He grabbed his rifle and was back at his post in an instant. The colonel brought the sergeant outside and ordered him to count the rifles.

"All correct, sir," said the sergeant.

"Nothing of the sort. There is an extra rifle there. That I am certain of, for I put it there myself."

"I beg your pardon, sir, but the number is quite correct," again replied the somewhat amazed sergeant.

"Come with me—come with me this instant, and I'll soon let you see what I mean."

The sergeant followed his chief, wondering what was going to happen.

"Halt! Who goes there?" rang out clear and sharp in the night air from the now wideawake Paddy.

This was more than "Old Daddy" had ever dreamed of. For a moment he was paralyzed. Then he marched straight up to Paddy, gazed into his sweetly innocent face and, with a "Well, I'm blowed," turned on his heel and vanished.—Scotsman.

THE BATTLE OF LIFE.

Begin life where you are.

Go to work earnestly and confidently.

Carefully look over what is to be done.

Keep a cool head and cultivate poise.

Do not be overcome by seeming mistakes.

Do as well as you can what lies nearest at hand.

Only weak people are cast down by apparent failures and blunders.

Sometimes our apparent mistakes help us along more than our seeming success.

Errors are sometimes very expensive; but, then, again, they often save in the long run more than they cost.

Those who win in life's battles are the brave, courageous ones who look upon all experience as being educational.

Meet your difficulties and problems calmly and with a belief that if you do your part they will be solved and overcome in the best way.—Chicago Live Stock World.

Twain and the Rivermen.

Mark Twain once told to a party of friends the following story on himself:

On one occasion when he started on a trip down the Mississippi river on a flat' oat he was advised never to answer the questions asked by rivermen on other boats and never to bandy words with them, as he would be sure always to come out second best. He followed the advice religiously for a time, but one day he thought he saw a chance to get the better of a riverman who called out:

"Hey, thar, what yer loaded with?"

"Jackasses. Don't you want to come aboard?" yelled back Twain.

"That's what I reckoned, seein' as how they let ther biggest donkey hev ther run of the deck!" came back. Twain made a dive below as all the rivermen in the neighborhood set up a derisive laugh at his expense.

A Lucky Bargain.

It is said that a foreman stereotyper in a London printing works has had a curious windfall. Going to a sale of musical instruments, he purchased an old harpsichord for 20 shillings, because, having a hobby for fretwork, he fancied the wood of the front panel. When he got his purchase home, he dissected it. He then discovered that the harpsichord had a double back, and presently between the boards he found very old Bank of England notes the total face value of which amounted to £30,000.

Absurdly Particular.

"Why did you resign from your club?" he asked.

"Oh, they were so absurdly particular," she replied.

"How?"

"Why, the chairman wouldn't let me talk just because some one else was talking—as if that made any difference."—Chicago Post.

Dangers of Modern Education.

Fond Mother—Oh, I am so glad you came in! I don't know what on earth ails the baby.

Caller—Shall I run for the doctor.

Fond Mother—No, for an interpreter. His French nurse left suddenly today, and nobody can understand what he says.—Wave.

GOOD FROM DISEASE

SEVERAL AFFLICTIONS THAT HAVE THEIR COMPENSATIONS.

An Attack of Smallpox, if You Get Over It, Will Add Years to Your Life—Sufferers From Rheumatism and Gout Are Long Lived.

Have you had smallpox? If you have and you have recovered from the terrible disease without your eyesight or hearing being seriously affected, as is very often the case, you may congratulate yourself that smallpox attacked you, for you will probably, barring accidents, live considerably longer and enjoy better general health than if you had never had the disease.

It is a remarkable fact—one of nature's peculiar compensations—that people who have suffered from smallpox generally live longer than people who have not. Why this should be the case there is only an unproved theory to explain, and the theory is that the microbes which go to make smallpox, being very powerful and pugnacious, swallow up the microbes of many other diseases which they find in the systems of the persons they attack; hence, by contracting smallpox severely, you stand a good chance of eliminating from your system other diseases which would seize upon you at some time or other and, likely enough, prove fatal.

At the same time it must be admitted that smallpox is not scheduled as a preventive medicine, and the number of persons it either kills, maims or inflicts with mental incapacities is probably greater than the number of persons whose lives it prolongs.

At the same time it is a fact that the disease, though one of the most terrible known to medical science, does you a great deal of good if you are capable of throwing it off without suffering after effects of a more serious character than being pitted with the queer little marks it almost invariably leaves behind to distinguish its victims.

Numbers of elderly persons in more or less feeble health are kept alive by coughs, such, for instance, as bronchitis. Chronic coughs are peculiarly common to old people, and hundreds who complain of the distress caused them by such affections are really indebted to their coughs for their length of life. The reason of this is that most elderly persons suffer with weak hearts and feeble circulation of the blood, and weak hearts become weaker merely as a result of their weakness. A constant cough corrects this, keeps the heart beating more strongly than it otherwise would, and the strong heart beat keeps the blood circulating more quickly, and the vital organs are thus kept in a state of activity which could only be maintained by artificial means and for a limited time but for the troublesome cough.

Moreover, the constant reminders given by the cough deter the sufferers from running risks of catching colds. In other words, they have to study their health or suffer more acutely from their coughs, and, choosing the former, they benefit accordingly.

Gout and rheumatism are exceedingly painful diseases and of course in some cases prove fatal, but they confer many a blessing upon mankind, and rheumatism particularly is well known to doctors as a preventive of many other diseases. It is a notorious fact that gouty subjects generally live to a ripe age, and albeit they suffer very severely at times they generally enjoy excellent general health, the very causes of the gout keeping their blood in good condition and making it unendurable to many kinds of microbes.

Cases have occurred of whole households, except one member, being stricken down with infectious diseases, and the lucky exception has been a sufferer from rheumatism or gout, which alone has prevented him from contracting the diseases which have run through the house. Such sufferers do not run half the risk of catching the common illnesses that nonsufferers run, and a large proportion of the people who reach ages of fourscore years are people who for years have suffered from gout or rheumatism, to which fact they undoubtedly owe many of the years they have lived over the allotted span.

Take half a dozen persons over the age of seventy who suffer from rheumatism or gout and half a dozen others who suffer from neither and you will find that, except for their rheumatism or gout, they enjoy very much better health than the nonsufferers and stand a splendid chance of outliving the latter. Moreover, gout and rheumatism greatly enhance a sufferer's chances of retaining his mental faculties until the end. A large percentage of centenarians who died with all their wits about them and with excellent memories of the days of their youth have suffered for many years from rheumatism and been particularly free from other diseases.

The loss of a leg or an arm is also said to do you good in the long run. Perhaps that is an awkward phrase to apply to the loss of a leg, but let it stand. It certainly seems that when a man is deprived of a leg or an arm the vitality and vigor of the lost member remain with him to increase the vitality of the remainder.

It has been declared by an eminent authority that when a man has a leg cut off, he being in sufficiently good health not to collapse from the operation, adds two or three, sometimes more, years on to his latter days.—Pearson's Weekly.

Flying Predictions.

In 1273 Friar Bacon predicted that flying would "shortly" become a general practice, and Bishop Wilkins in 1652 said, "It will yet be as usual to hear a man call for his wings when he is going on a journey as it is now to hear him call for his boots."

ANOTHER FATAL COLLISION.

Occurs Near Rex, Ga.—Three Dead, Two Injured.

Atlanta, Ga., Jan. 6.—As the result of a head-on collision between two freight trains of the Southern railway early Sunday morning near Rex, Ga., 14 miles from this place, three of the trains' crews were killed and a number of freight cars destroyed.

The dead: Engineer C. C. Wallace Atlanta; Flagman Z. N. Harris, Jackson, Ga.; Fireman Prather.

Engineer Whatley and Fireman Hicks of this city were slightly injured. The two trains met on a sharp curve, the derailed cars catching fire. The collision, it is said, was caused by a disregard of signals by the crew of one of the two trains.

Blown to Atoms.

The old idea that the body sometimes needs a powerful, drastic, purgative pill has been exploded; for Dr King's New Life Pills, which are perfectly harmless, gently stimulate the liver and bowels to expel poisonous matter, and cleanse the system and absolutely cure Constipation and Sick Headache. German Humor.

Hans had the rheumatism very badly in his feet. He suffered intensely. "Thank heaven," he exclaimed, "that I was sent into the world with only two feet." It was something to be thankful for, but had he used Ath-lo-pho-ros he need never have suffered at all. One bottle will show immediate relief, and a few bottles will absolutely cure. This applies to all of the different kinds of Rheumatism, Neuralgia included. Do not "Thank heaven" your trouble is no worse, but get rid of what trouble you have. LITTLE LEAKS.

What They May Lead to and How They May Be Stopped.

It is possible to lose much by littles. A classic case is that of the royal granary which was depleted of its stores by a succession of "one rat came and took one grain away, and another rat came and took another grain away." So fortunes are dissipated, and reputations are destroyed, and health is ruined and character itself lost—by little extravagances, little indiscretions, little negligences, little obliquities.

Benjamin Franklin was a great economist not alone of money, but of time. He said, "To teach a young man to shave himself is as good as to give him a purse of gold." He had reference to the minutes as well as the dimes it costs to patronize the barber.

Elihu Burritt stopped the leak in his time and taught himself a dozen languages. Gladstone was equally wise, for he read Plato in his carriage between Carleton terrace and the parliament buildings.

A prosperous man ascribes his success in business to his habit of permitting no particle of material to be unproductive. He experimented and elaborated until he found a method of disposing profitably of every atom left over.

There is a man in New York who has in bank a goodly sum of money which he calls his "'tis but fund." When tempted to needless expenditure by the specious plea, "'Tis but a nickel or a quarter or a dollar," he denies himself and drops the amount he would have spent into a portable bank, which is filled with amazing rapidity. That is one way to stop a leak.

More serious than any prudential matter are the little leaks in life by which vital energy is squandered and moral force is diminished, imperceptibly it may be, through what we sometimes regard as inconsequential acts. Lack of order in our methods of labor, indifference to the "minor morals" of hygiene and the "major morals" of honesty and truth, the practical repudiation of personal responsibility, the neglect of duties which arise from our ethical and religious nature—these are the leaks which we must stop or be bankrupt in the world's eyes and in God's.—Saturday Evening Post.

Question Answered.

Yes, August Flower still has the largest sale of any medicine in the civilized world. Your mothers' and grandmothers' never thought of using anything else for Indigestion or Biliousness. Doctors were scarce, and they seldom heard of Appendicitis, Nervous Prostration or Heart failure, etc. They used August Flower to clean out the system and stop fermentation of undigested food, regulate the action of the liver, stimulate the nervous and organic action of the system, and that is all they took when feeling dull and bad with headaches and other aches. You only need a few doses of Green's August Flower, in liquid form, to make you satisfied there is nothing serious the matter with you. Get Green's Prize Almanac at J. J. Orr's.

ANN ARBOR SPEAKS.

Contractor Wooley of Ann Arbor Makes a Public Statement.

Mr. Edwin Wooley contractor and carpenter of Ann Arbor, adds his voice to that of the army of Michigan people who endorse the little conqueror. Our representative found him at his place of residence, No. 618 Fountain street. Mr. Wooley appreciates "a good thing" as do most of our readers, and he does not hesitate to tell his experience for the benefit of others. Endorsement of this kind has made Doan's Kidney Pills a household word throughout the state. The good they have done has won them many a title and such worthy names among the people as the "little conqueror of kidney ills," "little enemies to backache" modern wonder-workers" etc. Mr Wolley says: "I was subject for years to attacks of backache or pains in the loins and kidneys, generally of a dull heavy, aching nature, but often when the weather changed or when I moved awkwardly they became sharp twinges of pain. As I was doing work which required stooping it was very painful, exceedingly so, if I caught cold which, as a rule, settled in my loins. I tried various remedies but was never successful in obtaining any permanent benefit until I used Doan's Kidney Pills. At the time my back was troubling me a great deal but shortly after I began the treatment the aching abated and when I had finished it I was cured. This is months ago and up to date there has been no recurrence of the trouble."

Africans Wash, but Never Wipe.

Great attention is given in most of the African tribes to the care of the body. The teeth are cleansed with a stick which has been chewed into a kind of brush. The hands are washed frequently, not by turning and twisting and rubbing them together one within the other, as with us, but by a straight up and down rubbing, such as is given to the other limbs. This manner of washing is so characteristic that an African might be distinguished by it from a European without reference to the color. The sun is their only towel.

The Earliest Cigars.

The earliest mention of cigars in English occurs in a book dated 1735. A traveler in Spanish America named Cockburn, whose narrative was published in that year, describes how he met three friars at Nicaragua, who, he says, "gave us some seegars to smoke; * * * these are Leaves of Tobacco rolled up in such Manner that they serve both for a Pipe and Tobacco itself; * * * they know no other way here, for there is no such Thing as a Tobacco Pipe throughout New Spain."

A Change.

"We must economize," he said peremptorily.

"I'm so glad!" his wife exclaimed.

"You take the announcement more good naturedly than usual."

"Yes; it's pleasant to hear you use the plural pronoun. Ordinarily, when there is any economizing needed, you expect me to do it all."

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. Its so different to the ordinary remedies referring to cures made at distant points, which it is hard to verify. There is a reason for Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Pills commanding home evidence wherever they are known. It is the wonderful influence in bringing up the standard of nerve force. Mrs. B. E. Gray, of Tecumseh, Mich., says:

"Last summer I had an attack of fever, which left me in a weak, dizzy and nervous state. I got a box of Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Pills at Chas. A. Wright's drug store and after using the pills I can say my nerves were strengthened and I feel better every way. I think the pills all right."

A LESSON IN CHESS.

Why Willie's Papa Ended It Almost Before It Was Begun.

Paterfamilias, with a laudable desire to keep Willie at home at night, offered to teach him to play chess. The boy was delighted, and the game began.

"Put the little ones, pawns, all along the front and the big ones behind, as I show you."

"I think that is cowardly. The big ones ought to be in front. Ma says"—

"Oh, but that is the rule. Now, see—no; put that rook in the corner."

"Rook! What's a rook?"

"It is a kind of bird."

"Well, that ain't a bird. It looks like a castle."

"Call it a castle, then—and put the knight next"—

"Why is that called a knight? It looks like a horse's head."

"And then the bishop," went on paterfamilias, ignoring the question; "so, and then"—

"Why is the bishop's head split in two, pop?"

"Oh, that is his hat—a cardinal's hat."

"But I thought he was a bishop!"

"A cardinal is also a bishop. Now don't talk so much, Willie. Then you put the king and queen"—

"The queen is bigger than the king, pop!"

"Well, so she is. Who said she wasn't?" said paterfamilias, with a trace of impatience in his tone. "And then another bishop; so."

"Why are there two bishops, pop?"

"Because the rules say so. Now, I shall move first."

"What, after all that trouble, are you going to move them again?"

"Say, Willie, I believe my head is aching. I shall show you the rest some other time," said paterfamilias as he swept the men into the box.—New York Times.

How to Teach a Pet to Ride a Ball.

Many readers have doubtless seen bears standing on a rolling ball and maintaining their balance perfectly while rolling it about the arena. I have a bear who delights to do the trick. He can scarcely wait for his time to come to perform. He was taught, as they are all taught, by jogging his pedestal while he tried to keep from being jostled off. Gradually the pedestal was substituted for a ball with many flat places on it, and this was followed by a perfect sphere. He has been performing two years now, and I have never known him to slip and fall off.—Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly.

SOME LEGAL FREAKS

CURIOUS TWISTS THAT OBTAIN IN ENGLISH CRIMINAL LAW.

A Person May Be Guilty of Perjury Though He Swears to the Truth—No Such Offense as Trespass—Points About Forgery.

In no branch of the law as it is dispensed in Great Britain are such curious points to be found or a greater number of anomalies to be met with than in the criminal branch thereof.

It may be news to some people, for instance, to know that there are a number of things in existence which cannot be stolen, such as a corpse, animals feræ naturæ—i. e., animals wild in a state of nature (with certain exceptions created by statute)—soil of the earth, etc. To attempt to steal nothing would appear on the face of it to be an impossibility, much less a crime, but a man indicted for attempting to pick a lady's pocket which was subsequently found to be empty was found guilty of an "attempt to commit theft," though, in fact, there was nothing in the pocket to steal.

Any one lucky enough to pick up a sovereign lying in the road will be glad to hear that, if at the time of finding it he had no reasonable means of discovering the owner of it, and also if he did not at the same time conceive the idea of appropriating it to himself, he will not be guilty of stealing if he keeps his lucky find, even if the rightful owner discovers and claims it.

Most people walking in the country must have noticed on numerous occasions boards or placards posted up in woods, fields, etc., notifying in large letters that "trespassers will be prosecuted," but few are aware that such notices are utterly useless and no one need feel the least alarm thereat, there being no such offense known in criminal law as such a trespass, and a person could never be prosecuted for such an offense. They are, in fact, in the words of that eminent jurist, Sir Frederick Pollock, in his well known work, "Pollock on Torts," a "wooden falsehood."

It is a common fallacy to imagine that the crime of forgery consists in signing another's name, though in fact committing forgery consists in making and uttering any false instrument in writing with attempt to defraud; thus it may be a forgery to omit a word from a document, and it will be a matter of considerable surprise to many to learn that it is possible for a person to forge his or her own name. A person, however, who fraudulently inserts another's name on a picture, thereby selling it as the work of some other artist, is not guilty of forgery, as a picture is not an "instrument in writing."

The crime of perjury also does not quite "fit in" with the generally accepted idea, which is that if a person, after being sworn on oath to speak the truth, swears falsely, he is guilty of such offense. This is correct with the important qualification that the fact the witness has sworn to must be material to the case. Thus, if a witness on being duly sworn gave a false address on being asked where he lived, this, though untrue, would not amount to perjury, as the place where the witness lived would be quite immaterial.

That a person may be guilty of perjury though speaking the truth may seem a curious anomaly, but such nevertheless is the fact, as the test of perjury is not whether a person is speaking what he believes to be the truth; so, if a witness, for instance, on being asked, "What colored tie was the prisoner wearing when you met him?" replied "red," when in fact he did not really notice, he would be guilty of perjury, even though the prisoner was in reality wearing a red tie when the witness met him.

Numerous other instances of crimes which present similar curious points to the above might be given, and, in passing, persons taking out insurances against burglary might note that this crime can only be committed between the hours of 9 p. m. and 6 a. m.; that breaking into a house by means of an open door or window is not burglary, although entering a house by sliding down the chimney is.

We must not conclude this article without a short reference to a comparatively recent case in which a man not possessing the means to pay entered a restaurant, where he ordered and ate a good dinner. As, however, he was unable to pay for the same he was given in charge and subsequently indicted for "obtaining goods by false pretenses." The case resulted in the prisoner's acquittal on the ground that he had not been guilty of any false pretenses.

This individual therefore had a good meal on the cheap, but we should not advise any enterprising reader to emulate his example, as, although he could not indeed be prosecuted for obtaining goods by false pretenses, it seems that he will still be criminally liable under the bankruptcy act for obtaining credit by fraudulent means.—London Tit-Bits.

Averting a Panic.

On one occasion John Philip Sousa by his promptness was the direct means of stopping a panic which might have had the most disastrous results. While his band was playing before 12,000 people in St. Louis the electric lights in the hall went out suddenly. People began to move uneasily in their seats, and some even began to make a rush for the doors. Coolly tapping with his baton, Sousa gave a signal, and immediately his band began playing, "Oh, Dear, What Can the Matter Be?" A tiny ripple of laughter that went round the audience showed that confidence had partially been restored. When the band began to play "Wait Till the Clouds Roll By," the laughter deepened into a roar of merriment that only ended when the lights were turned on again.

On the Free List.

Some years ago there was a tollgate on a plank road leading to Elmwood cemetery, Detroit. All funerals were allowed to pass along this road without paying.

One day Dr. Pierce, a well known physician, while paying his toll, jokingly remarked to the gatekeeper:

"Considering the benevolent character of our profession, I think you ought to let us pass free of charge."

"No, no, doctor," said the gatekeeper; "we can't afford that. You send too many deadheads through as it is."—New York Times.

A Prisoner.

"I thought you guaranteed that suit of underwear you sold me not to shrink," said the customer who entered the store and stood in a somewhat cramped attitude.

"I did," replied the merchant. "If it shrinks, bring it back."

"I have brought it back," said the customer in evident embarrassment, "but I got caught out in the rain and can't get it off."—Ohio State Journal.

DRUGGIST.

FOOLED THE COLONEL.

The Way Paddy Brannigan Outmaneuvered His Superior.

The colonel, or "Old Daddy," as he was usually called, had a habit of strolling round the camps at most unseasonable hours. Sentries had to be continually on the alert, for nothing would have given "Old Daddy" greater satisfaction than to have pounced on some luckless one who might think the midnight hours suitable for a quiet snooze.

Paddy Brannigan made that mistake once. There in the quiet moonlight he sat, all unconscious of the colonel's presence, his rifle laid against the tent, himself buried in slumber. Gently the rifle was lifted from its place. But some good angel awoke Paddy in time to see the colonel making his way to the guard tent. Paddy missed his rifle at once and followed the colonel with the caution of a prairie cat.

Outside the guard tent stood the wooden rack which held the rifles of the guard, and into it "Old Daddy" placed Paddy's rifle, himself entering the tent to call the sergeant in charge. This was Paddy's opportunity. He grabbed his rifle and was back at his post in an instant. The colonel brought the sergeant outside and ordered him to count the rifles.

"All correct, sir," said the sergeant.

"Nothing of the sort. There is an extra rifle there. That I am certain of, for I put it there myself."

"I beg your pardon, sir, but the number is quite correct," again replied the somewhat amazed sergeant.

"Come with me—come with me this instant, and I'll soon let you see what I mean."

The sergeant followed his chief, wondering what was going to happen.

"Halt! Who goes there?" rang out clear and sharp in the night air from the now wideawake Paddy.

This was more than "Old Daddy" had ever dreamed of. For a moment he was paralyzed. Then he marched straight up to Paddy, gazed into his sweetly innocent face and, with a "Well, I'm blowed," turned on his heel and vanished.—Scotsman.

THE BATTLE OF LIFE.

Begin life where you are.

Go to work earnestly and confidently.

Carefully look over what is to be done.

Keep a cool head and cultivate poise.

Do not be overcome by seeming mistakes.

Do as well as you can what lies nearest at hand.

Only weak people are cast down by apparent failures and blunders.

Sometimes our apparent mistakes help us along more than our seeming success.

Errors are sometimes very expensive; but, then, again, they often save in the long run more than they cost.

Those who win in life's battles are the brave, courageous ones who look upon all experience as being educational.

Meet your difficulties and problems calmly and with a belief that if you do your part they will be solved and overcome in the best way.—Chicago Live Stock World.

Twain and the Rivermen.

Mark Twain once told to a party of friends the following story on himself:

On one occasion when he started on a trip down the Mississippi river on a flatboat he was advised never to answer the questions asked by rivermen on other boats and never to bandy words with them, as he would be sure always to come out second best. He followed the advice religiously for a time, but one day he thought he saw a chance to get the better of a riverman who called out:

"Hey, thar, what yer loaded with?"

"Jackasses. Don't you want to come aboard?" yelled back Twain.

"That's what I reckoned, seein' as how they let ther biggest donkey hev ther run of the deck!" came back. Twain made a dive below as all the rivermen in the neighborhood set up a derisive laugh at his expense.

A Lucky Bargain.

It is said that a foreman stereotyper in a London printing works has had a curious windfall. Going to a sale of musical instruments, he purchased an old harpsichord for 20 shillings, because, having a hobby for fretwork, he fancied the wood of the front panel. When he got his purchase home he dissected it. He then discovered that the harpsichord had a double back and presently between the boards he found very old Bank of England notes the total face value of which amounted to £30,000.

Absurdly Particular.

"Why did you resign from your club?" he asked.

"Oh, they were so absurdly particular," she replied.

"How?"

"Why, the chairman wouldn't let me talk just because some one else was talking—as if that made any difference."—Chicago Post.

Dangers of Modern Education.

Fond Mother—Oh, I am so glad you came in! I don't know what on earth ails the baby.

Caller—Shall I run for the doctor.

Fond Mother—No, for an interpreter. His French nurse left suddenly today, and nobody can understand what he says.—Wave.

GOOD FROM DISEASE

SEVERAL AFFLICTIONS THAT HAVE THEIR COMPENSATIONS.

An Attack of Smallpox, If You Get Over It, Will Add Years to Your Life—Sufferers From Rheumatism and Gout Are Long Lived.

Have you had smallpox? If you have and you have recovered from the terrible disease without your eyesight or hearing being seriously affected, as is very often the case, you may congratulate yourself that smallpox attacked you, for you will probably, barring accidents, live considerably longer and enjoy better general health than if you had never had the disease.

It is a remarkable fact—one of nature's peculiar compensations—that people who have suffered from smallpox generally live longer than people who have not. Why this should be the case there is only an unproved theory to explain, and the theory is that the microbes which go to make smallpox, being very powerful and pugnacious, swallow up the microbes of many other diseases which they find in the systems of the persons they attack; hence, by contracting smallpox severely, you stand a good chance of eliminating from your system other diseases which would seize upon you at some time or other and, likely enough, prove fatal.

At the same time it must be admitted that smallpox is not scheduled as a preventive medicine, and the number of persons it either kills, maims or inflicts with mental incapacities is probably greater than the number of persons whose lives it prolongs.

At the same time it is a fact that the disease, though one of the most terrible known to medical science, does you a great deal of good if you are capable of throwing it off without suffering after effects of a more serious character than being pitted with the queer little marks it almost invariably leaves behind to distinguish its victims.

Numbers of elderly persons in more or less feeble health are kept alive by coughs, such, for instance, as bronchitis. Chronic coughs are peculiarly common to old people, and hundreds who complain of the distress caused them by such affections are really indebted to their coughs for their length of life. The reason of this is that most elderly persons suffer with weak hearts and feeble circulation of the blood, and weak hearts become weaker merely as a result of their weakness. A constant cough corrects this, keeps the heart beating more strongly than it otherwise would, and the strong heart beat keeps the blood circulating more quickly, and the vital organs are thus kept in a state of activity which could only be maintained by artificial means and for a limited time but for the troublesome cough.

Moreover, the constant reminders given by the cough deter the sufferers from running risks of catching colds. In other words, they have to study their health or suffer more acutely from their coughs, and, choosing the former, they benefit accordingly.

Gout and rheumatism are exceedingly painful diseases and of course in some cases prove fatal, but they confer many a blessing upon mankind, and rheumatism particularly is well known to doctors as a preventive of many other diseases. It is a notorious fact that gouty subjects generally live to a ripe age, and albeit they suffer very severely at times they generally enjoy excellent general health, the very causes of the gout keeping their blood in good condition and making it unendurable to many kinds of microbes.

Cases have occurred of whole households, except one member, being stricken down with infectious diseases, and the lucky exception has been a suffered from rheumatism or gout, which alone has prevented him from contracting the diseases which have run through the house. Such sufferers do not run half the risk of catching the common illnesses that nonsufferers run, and a large proportion of the people who reach ages of fourscore years are people who for years have suffered from gout or rheumatism, to which fact they undoubtedly owe many of the years they have lived over the allotted span.

Take half a dozen persons over the age of seventy who suffer from rheumatism or gout and half a dozen others who suffer from neither and you will find that, except for their rheumatism or gout, they enjoy very much better health than the nonsufferers and stand a splendid chance of outliving the latter. Moreover, gout and rheumatism greatly enhance a sufferer's chances of retaining his mental faculties until the end. A large percentage of centenarians who died with all their wits about them and with excellent memories of the days of their youth have suffered for many years from rheumatism and been particularly free from other diseases.

The loss of a leg or an arm is also said to do you good in the long run. Perhaps that is an awkward phrase to apply to the loss of a leg, but let it stand. It certainly seems that when a man is deprived of a leg or an arm the vitality and vigor of the lost member remain with him to increase the vitality of the remainder.

It has been declared by an eminent authority that when a man has a leg cut off, he being in sufficiently good health not to collapse from the operation, adds two or three, sometimes more, years on to his latter days.—Pearson's Weekly.

Flying Predictions.

In 1273 Friar Bacon predicted that flying would "shortly" become a general practice, and Bishop Wilkins in 1652 said, "It will yet be as usual to hear a man call for his wings when he is going on a journey as it is now to hear him call for his boots."

ANOTHER FATAL COLLISION.

Occurs Near Rex, Ga.—Three Dead, Two Injured.

Atlanta, Ga., Jan. 6.—As the result of a head-on collision between two freight trains of the Southern railway early Sunday morning near Rex, Ga., 14 miles from this place, three of the trains' crews were killed and a number of freight cars destroyed.

The dead: Engineer C. C. Wallace, Atlanta; Flagman Z. N. Harris, Jackson, Ga.; Fireman Prather.

Engineer Whatley and Fireman Hicks of this city were slightly injured. The two trains met on a sharp curve, the derailed cars catching fire. The collision, it is said, was caused by a disregard of signals by the crew of one of the two trains.

LITTLE LEAKS.

What They May Lead to and How They May Be Stopped.

It is possible to lose much by littles. A classic case is that of the royal granary which was depleted of its stores by a succession of "one rat came and took one grain away, and another rat came and took another grain away." So fortunes are dissipated, and reputations are destroyed, and health is ruined and character itself lost—by little extravagances, little indiscretions, little negligences, little obliquities.

Benjamin Franklin was a great economist not alone of money, but of time. He said, "To teach a young man to shave himself is as good as to give him a purse of gold." He had reference to the minutes as well as the dimes it costs to patronize the barber.

Elihu Burritt stopped the leak in his time and taught himself a dozen languages. Gladstone was equally wise, for he read Plato in his carriage between Carleton terrace and the parliament buildings.

A prosperous man ascribed his success in business to his habit of permitting no particle of material to be unproductive. He experimented and elaborated until he found a method of disposing profitably of every atom left over.

There is a man in New York who has in bank a goodly sum of money which he calls his "'tis but fund." When tempted to needless expenditure by the specious plea, "'Tis but a nickel or a quarter or a dollar," he denies himself and drops the amount he would have spent into a portable bank, which is filled with amazing rapidity. That is one way to stop a leak.

More serious than any prudential matter are the little leaks in life by which vital energy is squandered and moral force is diminished, imperceptibly it may be, through what we sometimes regard as inconsequential acts. Lack of order in our methods of labor, indifference to the "minor morals" of hygiene and the "major morals" of honesty and truth, the practical repudiation of personal responsibility, the neglect of duties which arise from our ethical and religious nature—these are the leaks which we must stop or be bankrupt in the world's eyes and in God's.—Saturday Evening Post.

Yes, August Flower still has the largest sale of any medicine in the civilized world. Your mothers' and grandmothers' never thought of using anything else for Indigestion or Biliousness. Doctors were scarce, and they seldom heard of Appendicitis, Nervous Prostration or Heart failure, etc. They used August Flower to clean out the system and stop fermentation of undigested food, regulate the action of the liver, stimulate the nervous and organic action of the system, and that is all they took when feeling dull and bad with headaches and other aches. You only need a few doses of Green's August Flower, in liquid form, to make you satisfied there is nothing serious the matter with you. Get Green's Prize Almanac at J. J. Orr's.

Sugar Beet Men Tackle Trust and Tariff.

M'MILLEN IS AT ODDS

Does Not Agree With Michigan's Lower House Men—Michigan Manufacturers Choose a Delegation to Go to the Capital.

Saginaw, Mich., Jan. 8.—The Michigan sugar manufacturers, recently organized for the purpose of protecting the beet sugar industries of the state, met here yesterday and discussed the question of trust and tariff, as relating to Cuba. Every one of the 17 factories in the state in operation and proposed was represented.

Secretary Hathaway presented an exhaustive statistical report. Next year's growth of beets is figured at 930,960 tons, and the output of sugar at 195,501,600 pounds. It was claimed that the trust is sending out letters to ministers and others in an endeavor to create sympathy for the Cubans in the furtherance of a scheme to knock off the tariff.

Secretary F. R. Hathaway of Alma, N. B. Bradley of Bay City, H. B. Joy of Detroit, H. C. Stewart of Kalamazoo, President W. L. Churchill of Holland, Thomas Cranage of Bay City, and Watts S. Humphrey of Saginaw were appointed a committee to go to Washington in the interests of the beet sugar people.

Washington, Jan. 9.—Senator McMillan and the Michigan delegation to the lower house have split on the question of whether the tariff on Cuban sugar should be reduced. The senator, although a stockholder in sugar factories in Holland, Caro and one or two other places in Michigan, believes that in justice to Cuba a reduction should be made, and that the beet sugar industry would not be imperilled if the cut was about 20 per cent. Senator McMillan, because he is financially interested in sugar factories, contemplates resigning from the senate committee on relations with Cuba. The house delegation held a beet sugar caucus yesterday and adopted the following resolution:

"Resolved, That we, the members of the national house of representatives, unitedly use our best endeavors to sustain the sugar growing industry of Michigan and the United States, and that we all resist any attempt calculated to imperil this industry."

GAS STRUCK IN SARNIA.

Drillers for Salt Get a Big Flow—Fire Caused Trouble.

Port Huron, Mich., Jan. 9.—Gas was struck in a well which was being bored for salt at the Cleveland & Sarnia Sawmill Co.'s plant yesterday noon. The well was down 275 feet when gas was struck. It came up through the pipes with a rush and roar, and was ignited from the heat of a small coal stove in the machinery building, but a few feet away, and in a second a sheet of flame 50 feet high shot into the sky. The lives of the men working on the well were endangered, and their tools were shot into the air for a distance of a hundred feet; but miraculously no one was burned or injured. After 10 hours of effort, workmen finally succeeded in controlling the tremendous flow of burning gas from the well.

Thousands of people viewed the burning well during the day, and the flame could be seen for miles. It is now probable that a gas fever will be started in Sarnia, and a number of wells will be drilled for private purposes.

DEATH FROM TIP OVER.

Ellsworth Co., and is preparing action against several other companies, and will test the entire flaked food question. They are prepared to fight to a finish.

ALLEGED BRIBER CAPTURED.

Food Commissioner Snow Worked a Little Trick on Him.

Kalamazoo, Mich., Jan. 8.—Food Commissioner Snow claims to have been offered a bribe of a half cent a pound on all oleo of the Hammond Packing Co. of Hammond, Ind., sold in the state. Charles H. Thompson, claim agent of the company, was in the city Monday, and, according to Snow, offered him the bribe. Snow invited the agent to his house in the evening, and Thompson appeared and presented the food commissioner with $126 as a first installment.

Snow had previously placed Sheriff Glenn Shipman in hiding behind a closed door, and when the tender of money was made, with the amount in his hand, Snow disclosed the officer and introduced him to the astonished agent.

Thompson was arrested and gave bonds. A warrant has been sworn out charging him with an attempt to bribe. Gov. Bliss and the prosecuting attorney were in Snow's confidence all through the progress of the game, and the disclosure was made according to a prearranged plan.

Durand Man Missing.

Durand, Mich., Jan. 8.—A. R. Harrington, familiarly known here as "Ikey" Harrington, has left for parts unknown, and a young woman named Maggie Cavanaugh is also missing. In the last five years Harrington has owned a cigar store, restaurant, saloon, livery barn, meat market, two more saloons, an 80-acre farm and another saloon, all in Durand, at different times. He would sell, trade or have a failure, and in each case he would personally conduct the business. He is now owner of the Log Cabin saloon here, but left it in charge of Benjamin Allen and went to Bay City and opened up a small saloon on Water street. He left his wife and boy on the farm, of which he maintained possession, a mile east of town.

Besides the great improvement in appearance, owners of land drained by the big ditch are jubilant over the valuable addition to their properties.

Bay City, Jan. 8.—The badly decomposed body of Andrew D. Adcock was found in his room in the Grand Central hotel Monday night. Adcock was about 70 years old and spent his time between the hotel and the home of his children, which accounts for his not being missed at the hotel sooner. He was last seen about a week ago. Death is supposed to have resulted from hemorrhage of the brain. Over $900 was found in his clothes.

BURIED ALIVE

A Negaunee Mine Caves in Burying Its Miners.

FIVE ARE ACCOUNTED FOR

Accident Happened at Noon When Many Were Up to the Surface—Inflowing Water May Prevent Rescuing.

Negaunee, Mich., Jan. 8.—The Negaunee mine is the scene of the most distressing disaster that has ever occurred on the Marquette iron range. A cave-in occurred from a point where a large area of the surface dropped early last fall, and several workmen are entombed in a level a little less than 5,000 feet from the surface. The number of victims is not known at the mine office, although it is thought that not less than eight, and possibly a dozen or more, lives will be lost.

The dead so far as known are:

WILLIAM WILLIAMS, married.
JOHN SULLIVAN, single.
JOHN PASCOE, single.
JOHN PEARCE, married.
JACOB HUNLALLA, married.

Hunlalla's body has been recovered. Dominio Basso, an Italian, was rescued alive. His story is as follows:

"We were sitting around the pump at the bottom of the shaft when, without any warning, thousands of tons of ore came down. I remembered no more until I heard the sound of picks and shovels in the hands of rescuers and their shouts. When they found me I was in a drift 75 feet from the place where I had been sitting."

It Came at Noon.

The cave-in occurred during the noon hour. There were in the neighborhood of 30 men employed in the drift where the men are entombed, all but the ones reported lost went to the surface to eat their dinners. Some of those who remained under ground did so rather than climb the ladders to the surface.

Basso, the one rescued, reports that all the men in the pump house near the shaft were eating their dinner when the cave-in occurred. The ground came down without warning, sweeping timbers and everything else before it. The concussion drove Basso some distance up a raise, where he remained in safety until rescued. He and another workman could be heard calling for help for some time before the rescuers reached them. It is thought that Hunlalla, whose body was recovered, was the other man whose voice was heard.

Water Is Rising.

The cave-in will have a very damaging effect on the mine. The pumping apparatus in the old portion of the mine is disabled, and the levels are rapidly filling with water. The shaft is also twisted so that the cage will not go down to within 80 feet of [illegible] from the mine last evening was to the effect that all hope of finding the balance of the men has been abandoned, as it is known that the water will rise to where they are if they are not already dead as a result of the concussion.

Additional pumps are being secured, and these will be installed to assist in keeping the water down, though it may be some time before they are in operation. Meanwhile the miners will do what they can to recover their fellow workmen.

GOLD OUR OBJECT

So Says a Costa Rica Paper of American Policies.

MANY BITTER REMARKS

Thinks U. S. Considers Them an Ignorant People and Is Only Lying in Wait to Gobble Them Up—Says to Fight, if Necessary.

San Jose, Costa Rica, Dec. 29.—(Correspondence of the Associated Press.)—El Siglo today publishes an editorial headed "The Northern Eagle," showing a very bitter feeling against the United States, as will be seen from the following extracts:

"The imposing territorial expansion of North America has given birth, first, to violence—trampling on all the principles of justice—and the Latin republics that can do so ought to prepare for the struggle, and if necessary to fight, if with peaceful and impartial means they are unable to obtain a guarantee and due respect for their sovereignty and independence.

"Brazil, Chile, Argentina and Venezuela do not fear the American eagle, either morally or materially.

"Venezuela, the humblest of the four, is able to raise an army of 300,000 brave and well-drilled soldiers in 24 hours, and the Argentine Republic can raise 800,000 men with an unrivaled cavalry. Could the American eagle ever subdue these territories when they cannot even put down the Filipinos?

"Olney and Hay understood this very well and they amuse themselves in deceiving us when talking of peace, arbitration and commercial intercourse, and try to carry out their policy through diplomacy.

"Their diplomacy, which considers us simply as ignorant people, is preached by the Yankees, whose brain and heart are made of gold, the only aim of the nation, the race and the individual.

"The sharp northern eagle is lying in wait for the young lambs of the south, and in the meantime wants to take what little the small Spanish-American republics possess."

Forged a U. S. Seal.

Washington, Jan. 9.—The United States consul at Palermo, Italy, has reported to the state department that his official seal has been forged and is now in possession of some one unknown. This information was elicited by the department in its effort to solve the mystery of the sales of several bills of Italian goods to merchants in New Orleans and New York, which were delivered. It now appears that the goods were sold on fraudulent invoices and bills of lading bearing the seal of the United States consulate at Palermo. It is said, however, that the [illegible] Unum" therefrom. The whereabouts of the men who made the sales is unknown.

Actor Robson Honored.

Washington, Jan. 9.—President Roosevelt and party occupied a box at the Columbia theater last night to witness Stuart Robson in "The Henrietta." Accompanying the president were Mrs. Roosevelt, Mrs. Hanna and Miss Carew, Mrs. Roosevelt's sister. A feature of the performance was the presentation to Mr. Robson of an exquisite floral offering from the pages of the United States senate, Mr. Robson in his youth having been a page in the senate, and the presentation of a loving cup to the veteran actor by his company, in commemoration of the fact that this week was the fiftieth anniversary of the beginning of his stage career.

Killed the Peacemaker.

North Hero, Vt., Jan. 9.—Eli Cameron and Edward Dupec have been arrested at Point au Fair, on the New York side of Lake Champlain, charged with killing Sophia Manin, member of a well-known family of Rouses Point. It is alleged the woman attempted to act as a peacemaker in a quarrel in which the prisoners had engaged and of which she was the cause. It is charged that alcohol was poured over the body and that it was then set afire in an effort to hide the crime.

Springfield, Ill., Jan. 9.—At the Ursuline convent in this city, Mrs. J. King and her daughter, Miss Katherine King, of Niles, Mich., took perpetual vows before Vicar General Hickey. Mrs. King is a widow and is greatly attached to her daughter. When the latter entered Ursuline convent here, about two years ago, her mother, rather than be separated from her daughter, followed her and ended by taking vows with her daughter.

THE COURIER OF THE CZAR

By Jules Verne

CHAPTER X.

At a day's march from Kalyvan, several versts beyond the town of Diachinks, stretches a wide plain, planted here and there with great trees, principally pines and cedars. There stood the Tartar tents. There Feofar-Khan, the terrible emir of Bokhara, was encamped, and there on the following day, the 7th of August, were brought the prisoners taken at Kalyvan after the annihilation of the Russian force, which had vainly attempted to oppose the progress of the invaders. Of the 2,000 men who had engaged with the two columns of the enemy, the bases of which rested on Tomsk and Omsk, only a few hundred remained. Thus events were going badly, and the imperial government appeared to have lost its power beyond the frontiers of the Ural, for a time at least, for the Russians could not fail eventually to defeat the savage hordes of the invaders. But in the meantime the invasion had reached the center of Siberia, and it was spreading through the revolted country both to the eastern and the western provinces. If the troops of the Amur and the province of Takutsk did not arrive in time to occupy it, this capital of Asiatic Russia, being insufficiently garrisoned would fall into the hands of the Tartars, and before it could be retaken the grand duke, brother of the emperor, would be sacrificed to the vengeance of Ivan Ogareff.

Feofar's camp presented a magnificent spectacle. Numberless tents of skin or silk glistened in the rays of the sun. The lofty plumes which surmounted their conical tops waved amid banners, flags and pennons of every color. The richest of these tents belonged to the Seides and Khodjas, who are the principal personages of the khanate. A special pavilion, ornamented with a horse's tail issuing from a sheaf of red and white sticks artistically interlaced, indicated the high rank of these Tartar chiefs. Then in the distance rose several thousand of the Turcoman tents, which had been carried on the backs of camels.

The camp contained at least a hundred and fifty thousand soldiers, as many foot as horse soldiers, collected under the name of Alamanes. Among them and as the principal types of Turkestan would have been remarked the Tadjiks from their regular features, white skin, tall forms and black eyes and hair. They formed the bulk of the Tartar army, and of them the khanates of Khokhand and Koundough had furnished a contingent nearly equal to that of Bokhara. With the Tadjiks were mingled specimens of different races who either reside in Turkestan or whose native countries border on it. There were Usbecks, red bearded, small in stature, similar to those who had pursued Michael. Here were Kirghis, with flat faces like the Kalmucks, dressed in coats of mail. Some carried the lance, bows and arrows of Asiatic manufacture, some the saber, a matchlock gun and a little short handled ax, the wounds from which invariably prove fatal. There were Mongols, of middle height, with black hair plaited into pigtails, which hung down their backs, round faces, swarthy complexions, lively deep set eyes, scanty beards, dressed in blue nankeen trimmed with black plush, sword belts of leather with silver buckles, boots gayly braided and silk caps edged with fur and three ribbons fluttering behind. Brown skinned Afghans, too, might have been seen. Arabs, having the primitive type of the beautiful Semitic races, and Turcomans, with eyes which looked as if they had lost the pupil—all enrolled under the emir's flag, the flag of incendiaries and devastators.

When the prisoners were brought into the camp, the emir was in his tent. He did not show himself. This was fortunate no doubt. A sign, a word from him might have been the signal for some bloody execution. But he intrenched himself in that isolation which constitutes in part the majesty of eastern kings. He who does not show himself is admired and above all, feared.

As to the prisoners, they were to be penned up in some inclosure where, ill treated, poorly fed and exposed to all the inclemencies of the weather, they would await Feofar's pleasure.

The most docile and patient of them all was undoubtedly Michael Strogoff. He allowed himself to be led, for they were leading him where he wished to go and under conditions of safety which free he could not have found on the road from Kalyvan to Tomsk. To escape before reaching that town was to risk again falling into the hands of the scouts who were scouring the steppe.

At the same time with Michael Strogoff and many other prisoners Harry Blount and Alcide Jolivet had also been taken to the Tartar camp. Their former traveling companion, captured like them at the telegraph office, knew that they were penned up with him in the inclosure, guarded by numerous sentinels, but he did not wish to accost them. It mattered little to him, at this time especially, what they might think of him since the affair at Ichim. Besides, he desired to be alone, that he might act alone if necessary. He therefore held himself aloof from his former acquaintances.

From the moment that Harry Blount had fallen by his side Jolivet had not ceased his attentions to him. During the journey from Kalyvan to the camp—that is to say, for several hours—Blount, by leaning on his companion's arm, had been enabled to follow the rest of the prisoners. He had tried to make known that he was a British subject, but it had no effect on the barbarians, who only replied by prods with a lance or sword. The correspondent of The Daily Telegraph was therefore obliged to submit to the common lot, resolving to protest later and to obtain satisfaction for such treatment. But the journey was not the less disagreeable to him, for his wound caused him much pain, and without Alcide Jolivet's assistance he might never have reached the camp.

Jolivet, whose practical philosophy never abandoned him, had physically and morally strengthened his companion by every means in his power. His first care when they found themselves definitely established in the inclosure was to examine Blount's wound. Having managed to draw off his coat, he found that the shoulder had been only grazed by the shot.

"This is nothing," he said; "a mere scratch. After two or three dressings you will be all to rights."

"But these dressings?" asked Blount.

"I will make them for you myself."

"Then you are something of a doctor?"

"All Frenchmen are something of doctors."

And on this affirmation Alcide, tearing his handkerchief, made lint of one piece, bandages of the other, took some water from a well dug in the middle of the inclosure, bathed the wound, which happily was not serious, and skillfully placed the wet rag on Harry Blount's shoulder.

"I thank you, M. Jolivet," said Harry, stretching himself on a bed of dry leaves which his companion had arranged for him in the shade of a birch tree.

"Now let us talk of what we ought to do. I assure you I have no intention of remaining a prisoner to these Tartars for an indefinite time."

"Nor I either."

"We will escape on the first opportunity?"

"Yes, if there is no other way of regaining our liberty."

"Do you know of any other?" ask Blount, looking at his companion.

"Certainly. We are not belligerent; we are neutral, and we will claim our freedom."

"From that brute of a Feofar-Khan?"

"No; he would not understand," answered Jolivet; "but from his lieutenant, Ivan Ogareff."

"He is a villain."

"No doubt, but the villain is a Russian. He knows that it does not do to trifle with the rights of men, and he has no interest to retain us. On the contrary. But to ask a favor of that gentleman does not quite suit my taste."

"But that gentleman is not in the camp, or at least I have not seen him here," observed Blount.

"He will come. He will not fail to do that. He must join the emir. Siberia is cut in two now, and very certainly Feofar's army is only waiting for him to advance on Irkutsk."

"And, once free, what shall we do?"

"Once free, we will continue our campaign and follow the Tartars until the time comes when we can make our way into the Russian camp. We must not give up the game. No, indeed; we have only just begun."

The event so much wished for by Jolivet and Blount, so much dreaded by Michael, occurred on the morning of the 12th of August.

On that day the trumpets sounded, the drums beat, the cannon roared. A huge cloud of dust swept along the road from Kalyvan. Ivan Ogareff, followed by several thousand men, made his entry into the Tartar camp.

At the first flourish of the trumpets several officers of high rank, followed by a brilliant escort of Usbeck horsemen, moved to the front of the camp to receive Ivan Ogareff.

Arrived in his presence, they paid him the greatest respect and invited him to accompany them to Feofar-Khan's tent.

Imperturbable as usual, Ogareff replied coldly to the deference paid to him. He was plainly dressed, but from a sort of impudent bravado he still wore the uniform of a Russian officer.

As he was about to ride on to pass the enciente of the camp, Sangarre, passing among the officers of the escort, approached and remained motionless before him.

"Nothing?" asked Ivan Ogareff.

"Nothing."

"Have patience."

"Is the time approaching when you will force the old woman to speak?"

"It is approaching, Sangarre."

"When will the old woman speak?"

"When we reach Tomsk."

"And we shall be there"—

"In three days."

A strange gleam shot from Sangarre's great black eyes, and she retired with a calm step. Ogareff pressed his spurs into his horse's flanks and, followed by his staff of Tartar officers, rode toward the emir's tent.

Feofar-Khan was expecting his lieutenant. The council, composed of the bearer of the royal seal, the khodja and some high officers, had taken their places in the tent.

Ivan Ogareff dismounted, entered and stood before the emir.

Feofar-Kahn was a man of forty, tall, rather pale, of a fierce countenance and eyes with an evil expression. A curly black beard flowed over his chest. With his war costume, coat of mail of gold and silver, cross belt glistening with precious stones, scabbard curved like a yataghan and set with sparkling gems, boots with golden spurs, helmet ornamented with an aigret of brilliant diamonds, Feofar presented an aspect rather strange than imposing for a Tartar Sardanapalus, an undisputed sovereign, who directs at his pleasure the life and fortunes of his subjects, whose power is unlimited, and to whom at Bokhara by special privilege the title of emir is given.

When Ivan Ogareff appeared, the great dignitaries remained seated on their gold embroidered cushions, but Feofar rose from a rich divan which occupied the back part of the tent, the ground being hidden under the thick velvet pile of a Bokharian carpet.

The emir approached Ogareff and gave him a kiss, the meaning of which he could not mistake. This kiss made the lieutenant chief of the council and placed him temporarily about the khodja.

Then Feofar addressed himself to Ivan Ogareff.

"I have no need to question you," said he. "Speak, Ivan. You will find here ears very ready to listen to you."

"This is what I have to make known to you," answered Ogareff.

Ivan Ogareff spoke in the Tartar language, giving to his phrases the emphatic turn which distinguishes the language of the orientals.

"This is not the time for unnecessary words. What I have done at the head of your troops you know. The lines of the Ichim and the Irtish are now in our power, and the Turcoman horsemen can bathe their horses in the now Tartar waters. The Kirghiz hordes rose at the voice of Feofar-Khan, and the principal Siberian route from [illegible] to Tomsk belongs to you. You can therefore push on your troops as well toward the east, where the sun rises, as toward the west, where he sets."

"But the armies of the sultan of St. Petersburg?" said Feofar-Khan, designating the emperor of Russia by this strange title.

"You have nothing to fear from them, either from the east or from the west," replied Ivan Ogareff. "The invasion has been sudden, and before the Russian army can succor them Irkutsk or Tobolsk will have fallen into your power. The czar's troops have been overwhelmed at Kalyvan, as they will be everywhere where yours meet them."

"And what advice does your devotion to the Tartar cause suggest?" asked the emir after a few moments' silence.

"My advice," answered Ivan Ogareff quickly, "is to march to meet the sun. It is to give the grass of the eastern steppes to the Turcoman horses to consume. It is to take Irkutsk, the capital of the eastern provinces, and with it a hostage the possession of whom is worth a whole country. In the place of the czar the grand duke, his brother, must fall into your hands."

This was the great result aimed at by Ivan Ogareff. To listen to him one would have taken him for one of the cruel descendants of Stephen Razine, the celebrated pirate who ravaged southern Russia in the eighteenth century. To seize the grand duke, murder him pitilessly, would fully satisfy his hatred. Besides, with the capture of Irkutsk, all eastern Siberia would pass under the Tartar dominion.

"It shall be thus, Ivan," replied Feofar.

"What are your orders?"

"Today our headquarters shall be removed to Tomsk."

Ogareff bowed, and, followed by the housch-begui, he retired to execute the emir's orders.

As he was about to mount his horse to return to the outposts a tumult broke out at some distance, in the part of the camp reserved for the prisoners. Shouts were heard and two or three shots fired. Perhaps it was an attempt at revolt or escape, which must be summarily suppressed.

Ivan Ogareff and the housch-begui walked forward a few steps, and almost immediately two men, whom the soldiers had not been able to keep back, appeared before them.

The housch-begui, without more information, made a sign which was an order for death, and the heads of the two prisoners would have rolled on the ground had not Ogareff uttered a few words which arrested the sword already raised.

The Russian had perceived that these prisoners were strangers, and he ordered them to be brought up to him.

They were Harry Blount and Alcide Jolivet.

On Ogareff's arrival in the camp they had demanded to be conducted to his presence. The soldiers had refused. In consequence, a struggle, an attempt at flight, shots fired which happily missed the two correspondents, but their execution would not have been long delayed if it had not been for the intervention of the emir's lieutenant.

The latter observed the prisoners for some moments, they being absolutely unknown to him. They had been present at the scene in the posthouse at Ichim in which Michael Strogoff had been struck by Ogareff, but the brutal traveler paid no attention to the persons then collected in the common room.

Blount and Jolivet, on the contrary, recognized him at once, and the latter said in a low voice: "Hello! It seems that Colonel Ogareff and the rude personage of Ichim are one!"

Then he added in his companion's ear:

"Explain our affair, Blount. You will do me a service. This Russian colonel in the midst of a Tartar camp disgusts me, and although, thanks to him, my head is still on my shoulders, my eyes would exhibit my feelings were I to attempt to look him in the face."

So saying, Alcide Jolivet assumed a look of complete and haughty indifference.

Whether or not Ivan Ogareff perceived that the prisoner's attitude was insulting toward him, he did not let it appear.

"Who are you, gentlemen?" he asked in Russian in a cold tone, but free from its rudeness.

"Two correspondents of English and French newspapers," replied Blount laconically.

"You have doubtless papers which will establish your identity?"

"Here are letters which accredit us in Russia from the English and French chancellor's office."

Ivan Ogareff took the letters which Blount held out to him and read them attentively. Then said he:

"You ask the authorization to follow our military operations in Siberia?"

"We ask to be free; that is all," answered the English correspondent dryly.

"You are so, gentlemen," answered Ogareff, "and I shall be curious to read your articles in The Daily Telegraph."

"Sir," replied Harry Blount, with the most imperturbable coolness, "it is sixpence a number, including postage."

And thereupon Blount returned to his companion, who appeared to approve completely of his replies.

Ivan Ogareff, without frowning, mounted his horse and, going to the head of his escort, soon disappeared in a cloud of dust.

"Well, M. Jolivet, what do you think of Colonel Ivan Ogareff, general in chief of the Tartar troops?" asked Blount.

"I think, my dear friend," replied Alcide, smiling, "that the housch-begui made a very graceful gesture when he gave the order for our heads to be cut off."

Whatever was the motive which led Ogareff to act thus in regard to the two correspondents, they were free and could rove at their pleasure over the scene of war. Their intention was not to leave it. The sort of antipathy which formerly they had entertained for each other had given place to a sincere friendship. Circumstances having brought them together, they no longer thought of separating. The petty questions of rivalry were forever extinguished. Harry Blount could never forget what he owed his companion, who, on the other hand, never tried to remind him of it. This friendship, too, assisted the reporting operations and was thus to the advantage of their readers.

"And now," asked Blount, "what shall we do with our liberty?"

"Take advantage of it, of course," replied Alcide, "and go quietly to Tomsk to see what is going on there."

"Until the time—very near, I hope—when we may rejoin some Russian regiment."

"As you say, my dear Blount, it won't do to Tartarize ourselves too much. The best side is that of the most civilized army, and it is evident that the people of central Asia will have everything to lose and absolutely nothing to gain from this invasion, while the Russians will soon repulse them. It is only a matter of time."

The arrival of Ivan Ogareff, which had given Jolivet and Blount their liberty, was to Michael Strogoff, on the contrary, a serious danger. Should chance bring the czar's courier into Ogareff's presence the latter could not fail to recognize in him the traveler whom he had so brutally treated at the Ichim posthouse, and, although Michael had not replied to the insult as he would have done under any other circumstances, attention would be drawn to him, and at once the accomplishment of his plans would be rendered more difficult.

This was the unpleasant side of the business. A favorable result of his arrival, however, was the order which was given to raise the camp that very day and remove the headquarters to Tomsk.

This was the accomplishment of Michael's most fervent desire. His intention, as has been said, was to reach Tomsk concealed among the other prisoners—that is to say, without any risk of falling into the hands of the scouts who swarmed about the approaches to this important town. However, in consequence of the arrival of Ivan Ogareff, and in the fear of being recognized by him, he questioned whether it would not be better to give up his first plan and attempt to escape during the journey.

Michael would no doubt have kept to the latter plan had he not learned that Feofar-Khan and Ivan Ogareff had already set out for the town at the head of some thousands of horsemen.

"I will wait, then," said he to himself; "at least unless some exceptional opportunity for escape occurs. The adverse chances are numerous on this side of Tomsk, while beyond the favorable increase, since I shall in a few hours have passed the most advanced Tartar posts to the east. Still three days of patience, and may God aid me."

Help... Nature

Babies and children need proper food, rarely ever medicine. If they do not thrive on their food something is wrong. They need a little help to get their digestive machinery working properly.

SCOTT'S EMULSION OF COD LIVER OIL

will generally correct this difficulty.

If you will put from one-fourth to half a teaspoonful in baby's bottle three or four times a day you will soon see a marked improvement. For larger children, from half to a teaspoonful, according to age, dissolved in their milk, if you so desire, will very soon show its great nourishing power. If the mother's milk does not nourish the baby, she needs the emulsion. It will show an effect at once both upon mother and child.

It is a fact not generally understood that salt will destroy a cement walk in less time than anything else known. The salt eats into the cement and destroys the original surface, leaving it rough and uneven. Residents sprinkle salt on it in the winter to thaw the ice, in the spring they find the surface eaten away, and blame the men who put down the walk. Fine sand will answer the purpose as well, and leaves the walk unimpaired.

JORDAN AND UNDERWOOD

Happy Home Wedding takes Place at the Residence of the Bride's Parents

WEDNESDAY, AT HIGH NOON

Miss Maud Jordan and Mr. Clifford Underwood united for Life.

The marriage of Miss Maude Jordan and Clifford Underwood was solemnized Wednesday at high noon at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Jordan.

Promptly at twelve o'clock to the strains of the wedding march, Miss Ethel Doke presiding at the piano, they marched to the northeast corner of the parlor and took their position under a beautifully decorated canopy of white and green. Miss Rose VanDeventer was maid-of-honor and Amos Underwood acted as best man.

Bands of white ribbon, held by the bride's little neices, Lenore and Edna Henderson, of Adrian, made an isle through which the couple passed. The bride was attired in a beautiful gown of white organdie, trimmed with narrow valenciennes lace. She carried a shower boquet of white carnations. The maid of honor was also dressed in white organdie and carried red carnations.

The service was very impressive, conducted by the Rev. Leslie Bower, using the ring service. Little Edna Henderson acting as ring bearer. After the solemn words were spoken the bridal couple received congratulations. About one hundred and fifty guests witnessed the ceremony and partook, soon after, of a fine wedding dinner.

The happy couple were the recipients of many handsome and useful presents. The bride and groom are both well and favorably known here and have a large circle of friends.

The out of town guests were Mrs. Wm. Underwood, Misses Kate and Fern Underwood, mother and sisters of the groom, Messrs. and Mesdames James Underwood, Clay Underwood, Wm. Exelby, Wm. Swick, Cass Zeluff, Frank Zeluff, Michael Underwood, Wm. Biggs Morris Adams, Arthur Underwood, of Britton; J. W. Jordan, of Jackson; Charles McDermott, of Clinton; O. H. Braddish and E. H. G. A. R. Installation

Installation of officers at Beer's post Monday night was a very enjoyable affair. An oyster supper had been prepared by the committee to which had been invited the orchestra and male quartette. Tables were spread for over 30, which were filled nearly three times.

After a business session of the post, the officers elect were seated in their chairs, following which was a presentation of the enlarged picture of Levi B Thompson, a former commander of the post J. D. Shull in a neat speech presented it to the post. Commander Wightman received it in behalf of the post, who was followed by Past Commander H. C. Daniels in some feeling remarks.

Taken all together a very enjoyable time was had and the spirit of 1861 was revived and many of the old vets felt quite young again. In all of this they were ably assisted by the T. B. A's.

HE'S A TAMED BIRD.

Chinese Emperor Lets Dowager Empress Do the Talking.

Pekin, Jan. 9.—All evidences indicate that the emperor of China is now more completely under the domination of the dowager empress than he was before the Chinese court went into exile. Several high officials have been granted audiences, during which the emperor filled the role of a figurehead. The empress dowager sat on his majesty's left and conducted the conversations. According to the accounts of two of the officials who were received yesterday, the dowager empress ignored the emperor, and the latter did not attempt to take any part in the affair. These officials say his majesty appeared melancholy and listless.

The principal topic of conversation during these audiences was the presence in Pekin of the foreign garrisons The dowager empress seemed impressed with the necessity of a conciliatory policy.

Evidence accumulates pointing to the timidity of the dowager empress about coming back to Pekin. Her first remark upon alighting at the Machiapu station was: "Where are the foreign soldiers?"

The dowager empress proposes to decorate the American and Japanese officers who guarded the imperial palace during the court's absence. She also will confer decorations upon the officers and engineers who had charge of the imperial train during the railroad journey from Pao-Ting-Fu.

The dowager empress has signed an edict ordering the decapitation of Gen. Tung Fuh Siang, the notorious anti-foreigner.

COLLIDED IN A TUNNEL.

Frightful Catastrophe in New York Kills Many.

New York, Jan. 9.—In the New York Central railroad tunnel, that burrows under Park avenue, this city, two local trains collided yesterday. Fifteen passengers were killed and twice that number were injured. A dozen of the latter were seriously hurt, and the roster of the dead may be extended.

It was a rear-end collision between a South Norwalk local that ran in over the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad, and was halted by block signals at the southern entrance of the tunnel, and a White Plains local that came by the Harlem branch of the New York Central. The wreck occurred at 8:17 a. m., at which hour the trains were crowded by suburbanites. Most of the death, injury and damage was wrought by the engine of the White Plains train, which plunged into the rear car of the motionless train and was driven through to the middle of the car, smashing the seats and furnishings and splitting the sides as it moved forward. The victims either were mangled in the mass of wreckage carried at the pilot, crushed in the space between boiler and car sides, or scalded by steam which came hissing from broken pipes and cylinders. The engine, in its final plunge of 40 feet, carried the rear car forward and sent twisted iron, broken timbers and splinters crashing into the coach ahead. Within a few minutes the work of rescue, marked by heroism and sacrifice, began.

Responsibility for the disaster is unfixed, but Superintendent Franklin says that so far as he had been able to discover, J. H. Wischo, engineer of the White Plains train, is to blame. It is declared that when the South Norwalk train stopped a flagman ran back into the tunnel, and, besides placing a torpedo on the track, endeavored to flag the on-coming train. The tunnel was beclouded with steam and smoke, while the snow, which fell through the air shafts, tended to obscure the view. Engineer Wischo and Fireman Flynn were arrested. A signalman also was detained for a time but was released.

Naval Academy on Great Lakes.

Washington, Jan. 9.—The secretary of the navy has prepared for submission to congress a bill providing for the establishment of a naval training station on the great lakes. A pending bill before the house provides for the erecсion of such a station at Milwaukee, but the department bill leaves the location to be fixed by a board of naval officers. The station is projected on lines like the station at Yerba Buena Island, in San Francisco harbor.

Kansas Farmers Hold Wheat.

Wichita, Kan., Jan. 9.—With 40,000,000 bushels of wheat in the 20 counties surrounding Wichita, the mills of this city are idle. The farmers will not sell their wheat at any price and are determined to keep it for six weeks longer, or until the prospects of the growing crop shall be better determined. Offers of 77 cents per bushel are made in vain here.

Legal Tangle at Coldwater.

Coldwater, Mich., Jan. 9.—Last October the supervisors elected John B. Hughes county drain commissioner. He did not qualify in the legal time, but afterwards qualified. He began his duties Jan. 1, but the board ignored him and elected ex-Commissioner Eugene Weage. The chances favor a legal tangle, and the action of the board is a big surprise.

…Wooley of Ann Arbor …akes a Public Statement.

Mr. Edwin Wooley contractor and carpenter of Ann Arbor, adds his voice to that of the army of Michigan people who endorse the little conqueror. Our representative found him at his place of residence, No. 618 Fountain street. Mr. Wooley appreciates "a good thing" as do most of our readers, and he does not hesitate to tell his experience for the benefit of others. Endorsement of this kind has made Doan's Kidney Pills a household word throughout the state. The good they have done has won them many a title and such worthy names among the people as the "little conqueror of kidney ills," "little enemies to backache" modern wonder-workers" etc. Mr Wolley says: "I was subject for years to attacks of backache or pains in the loins and kidneys, generally of a dull heavy, aching nature, but often when the weather changed or when I moved awkwardly they became sharp twinges of pain. As I was doing work which required stooping it was very painful, exceedingly so, if I caught cold which, as a rule, settled in my loins. I tried variour remedies but was never successful in obtaining any permanent benefit until I used Doan's Kidney Pills. At the time my back was troubling me a great deal but shortly after I began the treatment the aching abated and when I had finished it I was cured. This is months ago and up to date there has been no recurrence of the trouble."

Doan's Kidney Pills for sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Mailed by Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the U. S.. Remember the name Doan and take no substitute.

An Evening Call.

"I called on Perkins last evening," remarked Mr. Brown.

"Did you have a pleasant time?" inquired Mrs. Brown.

"Very. Perkins was beating his wife when I went in."

"What?"

"I say Perkins was beating his wife, but of course he stopped when I came in."

"Well, I should hope so."

"I begged him to go on, but he said some other time would do just as well."

"You begged him to go on?"

"Why, yes. I didn't want to spoil the fun, you know."

"Oh, you brute! Do you mean to say that you could have looked calmly on while he beat his wife?"

"Certainly. Why not?"

"I thought you had at least a spark of manhood left. I suppose you will be beating me next."

"Yes; I think I could if you would play cribbage with me."

"Play cribbage?"

"Yes; that is what Perkins and his wife were doing."—London Telegraph.

Alaska's Inhospitable Interior.

In the vast and almost unknown interior of Alaska the climate is arctic. The winter is of eight months' duration, dry and, excepting certain restricted localities, entirely free from wind. The temperature descends as low as 80 degrees, with a mean of perhaps 40 degrees. Ice forms in the rivers and lakes to a thickness of eight feet and more. Summer extends over four months. During its earliest month high winds prevail. The balance of this short season is mild and the temperature pleasant, rarely exceeding 86 degrees. The snow and rain annually precipitated is about 12.9 inches.—Era.

Its the evidence of Tecumseh People published in Tecumseh papers that has made such a Reputation for Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Pills.

Standing clear and distinct, marking the difference, the superior merit, the adaptability to present day ailments is the volume of local testimony for Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Pills. Its so different to the ordinary remedies referring to cures made at distant points, which it is hard to verify. There is a reason for Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Pills commanding home evidence whereever they are known. It is the wonderful influence in bringing up the standard of nerve force. Mrs. B. E. Gray, of Tecumseh, Mich., says:

"Last summer I had an attack of fever, which left me in a weak, dizzy and nervous state. I got a box of Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Pills at Chas. A. Wright's drug store and after using the pills I can say my nerves were strengthened and I feel better every way. I think the pills all right."

CONGRESS AGAIN IN SESSION.

Hepburn Canal Bill First on the Docket.

Washington, Jan. 6.—After a recess of almost three weeks both houses of congress will reconvene today. The principal item on the house program for the week is the Hepburn isthmian canal bill, which is the special order for Tuesday. No limit has been fixed as to the time for debate upon this measure, but Mr. Hepburn does not contemplate a prolonged discussion of it. It is surmised in some quarters, however, that if the proposition of the Panama Canal Co. to sell its property and franchises for $40,000,000 should be made today as promised, this may have the effect of opening a wider field of discussion than at first seemed probable, and if this should prove to be the case the bill may be before the house for a longer time than is now contemplated. Mr. Burton has given notice of a speech on the bill, and it is understood that there also will be other speeches in criticism of special features of the measure, but its friends are very sanguine not only that the bill will pass but that it will pass speedily. Mr. Hepburn, the author of the bill, thinks that only a few days of debate will be necessary. It is expected that by the time the canal bill is disposed of there will be one or more appropriation bills ready for consideration by the house. None of the appropriation bills has yet been passed on by the appropriations committee, but both the urgent deficiency and the pension bills are in a forward state and the expectation is that they will be considered by the committee during the current week. The present intention is to give first attention to the deficiency bill. The estimates for that bill aggregate $12,000,000, and it is not believed that these figures will be scaled down materially.

The senate has no program for the week and very little business on its calendar, as the reorganization of the senate committee did not take place until just before the holidays. There are, however, a few bridge bills reported, and Senator Morgan's bill for the acquisition of right of way for the Nicaragua canal is among the measures in position to reach attention.

The announcement of Senator Sewell's death probably will be made today, in which event there will be an immediate adjournment for the day. An adjournment from Thursday until the following Monday is contemplated.

Strange Misapprehension.

Borus—How do you like that last poem of mine?

Naggus—First rate. It's so restful, so soothing, don't you know.

Borus—Restful! Great Scott, man! It's an epic!

Naggus—Good heavens! I thought it was a lullaby!—Chicago Tribune.

His Good Wife.

Dr. Price—Your husband's trouble is melancholia. Now, you'd help him materially if you'd only arrange some pleasant surprise for him.

Mrs. Sharpe—I know! I know! I'll tell him you said he needn't bother about paying your bill till he feels like it.—Philadelphia Press.

Mormons In Germany.

Berlin, Jan. 6.—The German Mormon conference has assembled here under the leadership of Hugh J. Cannon, son of the late George Q. Cannon, the well-known Mormon apostle. One hundred and twenty-five Mormon missionaries are now working in Germany and have secured 2,000 followers. The present conference is attended by more than one hundred of the German missionaries.

Does it Pay to Buy Cheap?

A cheap remedy for coughs and colds is all right, but you want something that will relieve and cure the more severe and dangerous results of throat and lung troubles. What shall you do? Go to a warmer and more regular climate? Yes, if possible for you, then in either case take the ONLY remedy that has been introduced in all civilized countries with success in severe throat and lung trouble, "Boschee's German Syrup." It not only heals and stimulates the tissues to destroy the germ disease, but allays inflammation, causes easy expectoration, gives a good night's rest, and cures the patient. Try one bottle. Recommended many years by all druggists in the world. Get Green's Prize Almanac at J. J. Orr's.

HAIR OF THE SLOTH.

It Is Green In Color and For a Peculiar Reason.

It is a very curious fact that certain plants grow and thrive on the hair of sloths. Apart from its extremely coarse and brittle nature, the most striking peculiarity of the outer hair of the sloth is its more or less decidedly green tinge. Now, green is a very rare color among mammals, and there ought, therefore, to be some special reason for its development in the sloth, and, as a matter of fact, the means by which this coloration is produced is one of the most marvelous phenomena in the whole animal kingdom, so marvelous, indeed, that it is at first almost impossible to believe that it is true.

The object of this peculiar type of coloration is, of course, to assimilate the animal to its leafy surroundings and thus to render it as inconspicuous as possible, and when hanging in its usual position from the underside of a bough its long, coarse and green tinged hair is stated to render the sloth almost indistinguishable from the bunches of gray green lichens among which it dwells. In the outer sheath of the hairs of the ai there are a number of transverse cracks, and in these cracks grows a primitive type of plant—namely, a one celled alga.

And for the benefit of nonbotanical readers it may be well to mention here that algæ, among which seaweeds are included, form a group of flowerless plants related on the one hand to the fungi and on the other to the lichens. In the moist tropical forests forming the home of the sloths the algæ in the cracks of their hairs grow readily and thus communicate to the entire coat that general green tint which, as already said, is reported to render them almost indistinguishable from the clusters of lichen among which they hang suspended.—Knowledge.

THE FATE OF CORONETS.

Lord Brougham's Became G. W. Childs' Fruit Dish.

Peers and their coronets are soon parted when the ceremonial use has been served. The fate of one coronet is told by a correspondent of M. A. P. He writes: "When I was staying some years ago in Philadelphia with G. W. Childs, the well known proprietor of The Ledger newspaper there, I noticed at dinner one evening a peculiarly shaped gilt stand used as a support for a china dish containing grapes. My host, observing that I was scanning it rather closely, said: 'Oh, that is the coronet Lord Brougham wore at the queen's coronation. I have taken out the velvet cap and turned it upside down. The golden balls form excellent feet, and it makes a most elegant dish stand.' Which it certainly did."

But what is the fate of coronets compared with the fate of coronation robes? A large portion of George IV.'s wardrobe, including the coronation robes, was put at public auction in the summer of 1831. There were 120 lots disposed of, and some of the items are interesting. A pair of fine kid trousers, of ample dimensions and lined with white satin, was sold for 12 shillings. The sumptuous crimson velvet coronation mantle, with silver star, embroidered with gold, which cost originally, according to the auctioneer, £500, was knocked down for 47 guineas; a richly embroidered silver tissue coronation waistcoat and trunk hose, £13. The purple velvet coronation robe, embroidered with gold, of which it was said to contain 200 ounces, brought only £55, although it cost his late majesty £300. An elegant and costly green velvet mantle, lined with ermine of the finest quality, presented by the Emperor Alexander to George IV., which cost 1,000 guineas, was sold for £125.

A Singular Bequest.

A peculiar fate is said to overhang the family of the late Sir Julian Goldsmid. An ancestor of his, so says the legend, once gave shelter to a rabbi, who, at his death, left to him a bequest of a mysterious box, which was on no account to be opened until after the customary seven days of mourning. If opened before that time, a curse would fall upon the family.

Curiosity got the better of superstition, and the box was opened before the seven days were up. In it was found a document which said that as the injunction of the rabbi had not been heeded no future owner of the estate would be succeeded by a son. And such, strangely enough, has been the case ever since.

Arab Music.

Arab music has been described as the singing of a prima donna who has ruptured her voice in trying to sing a duet with herself. Each note starts from somewhere betwen a sharp and a flat, but does not stop even there and splits up into four or more portions, of which no person can be expected to catch more than one at a time.

Intentional.

The caller had a grievance.

"That communication I sent you yesterday," he said, "was signed 'More Anon' as plainly as the words could be written. You printed it in your paper this morning 'Omega.'"

"I know it," replied the editor. "We didn't intend there should be any more anon."—Chicago Tribune.

On Her Own Head.

Mrs. Buggins—Well, the crime is on my own head.—Philadelphia Record.

Esteem cannot be where there is no confidence, and there can be no confidence where there is no respect.—Giles.

MAKING THEM HUSTLE.

Captors of Miss Stone Are Being Pursued.

Constantinople, Jan. 6.—The news that the brigands holding Miss Stone captive are being hustled by the inhabitants of the Turkish territory where they ar said to be in hiding has created considerable sensation here. A deadly feud is said to subsist between the leaders of the hostile bands, some of whom are reported to have deserted and are attempting to re-enter Bulgaria. Much anxiety is felt here with regard to the outcome of these developments.

The American legation here say the rumors of Miss Stone's release are quite unfounded. No direct news has been received from the American captive since Nov. 13, the date of the last letter from Miss Stone to Mr. Dickinson, consul general at Constantinople, who was then acting as diplomatic agent of the United States at Sofia.

Going Right Ahead.

Alphonso—Gwendolyn, why are you so cruel as to keep me waiting for my answer? It is now ten minutes since I asked you to be my wife.

Gwendolyn—Oh, pardon me. I forgot. I was simply choosing my bridesmaids.—Brooklyn Life.

Got His Price.

"Away over on the east side of the city," said a New Yorker, "lies the shop of a well known butcher, who rejoices in the euphonious and suggestive name of 'Four Cent Miller.' He sells meat in smallest quantity to his customers, and, as the coin of the realm in that locality is principally conspicuous by its absence, there is a constant effort to beat him down in price. The other day Miller and a would be customer all but came to blows over a pound or so of pork chops, and the discussion finally culminated in Miller irately demanding:

"'Well, why don't you go to Smith (a rival butcher) if you can get them cheaper?'

"'Because,' explained the customer, 'Smith hasn't got any.'

"'Oh!' said Miller, 'is that so? Well, when I haven't got any my price will be 4 cents, too, but while I have they cost 7 cents. See?'

"The customer saw and purchased."—New York Tribune.

Women are Like Flowers.

Healthy and strong they blossom and bloom. Sickly, they wither and die. Every woman ought to look well and feel well. It's her right and duty, but she might as well try to put out a fire with oil as to be healthy and attractive with disease corroding the organs that make her a woman. Upon their health depends her health. If there is inflammation or weakening drains or suffering at the monthly period, attend to it at once. Don't delay. You're one step nearer the grave every day you put it off. Women can stand a great deal, but they cannot live forever with disease dragging at the most delicate and vital organs in their body. You may have been deceived in so-called cures. We don't see how you could help it—there is so much worthless stuff on the market. But you won't be disappointed in Bradfield's Female Regulator. We believe it is the one medicine on earth for womanly ills. There is as much difference between it and other so-called remedies as there is between right and wrong. Bradfield's Female Regulator soothes the pain, stops the drains, promotes regularity, strengthens, purifies and cleanses. It does all this quickly and easily and naturally. It is for women alone to decide whether they will be healthy or sick. Bradfield's Regulator lies at hand. $1 per bottle at drug store.

An Owl's Toes.

It is alleged that taxidermists are careless in the mounting of owls. In museums and elsewhere our wise eyed friends are set up with three toes in front of and one behind the perch on which they are seated. One who has observed the habits of the hooters maintains that this is incorrect and that no living owl ever places three toes in front of his perch. How is this?—New York Press.

Nearing the Finish.

"How long has the minister been preaching?" whispered the stranger who had wandered into the church and sat down away back.

"About thirty years, I believe," replied the other occupant of the pew.

"That being the case," rejoined the stranger, "I guess I'll stay. He must be nearly done."—Chicago News.

WORTH $300,000,000.

The President of a certain big Oil Company is said to be worth $300,000,000. A tidy bit of money and no mistake. And yet he isn't happy. In an address to a Bible class he spoke of trials and troubles of the rich and the loads they have to carry. A young lady whispered to a friend that he might wear a Benson's Porous Plaster on his back or, better still, divide the money among the members of the class. I don't know why her idea about the plaster makes me want to laugh, but it does. All the same I have seen plenty of people laugh after putting Benson's Plasters on their backs or chests, or on any other spot where there was weight, heaviness, weakness or pain. It may be the sharp stabs of neuralgia, the aches and wrenches of rheumatism; it may be colds in muscles or bones; it may be those kidney or lumbago thrusts that make you yell as at a dog bite; or it may be a strain or cramp, anything that wants quieting and comforting. Dont bother with salves, liniments, lotions, etc., or with any of the stupid and useless old style plasters. Clap on a Benson's. It relieves at once and cures quickly. It stops the pain and makes you laugh for the very ease and good feeling of it. But watch out against imitations and substitutes. DETROITERS DIFFER

City's Sugar Beet Manufacturers Not With McMillan.

OPPOSE TARIFF REDUCTION

C. E. Lothrop, Director in McMillan's Own Company, is Not With Him—Some Important Data Given the Press.

Detroit, Jan. 13.—Local sugar beet manufacturers are somewhat at odds with Senator McMillian relative to the reduction of the sugar tariff 20 per cent. Julius Stroh is a director of the Detroit Sugar Co. and declared that the result of a reduction would be to enable the trust to buy its sugar cheaper; that the price the trust paid in Cuba was fixed in London and regulated by supply and demand; and that it would not be affected by any tariff legislation of the United States. The Cuban laborers, he said, would not get a penny of benefit.

Cyrus E. Lathrop, an active director of the Peninsular Sugar Co., took exactly the same ground, adding that even if the Cubans were to benefit, which he insisted was not so, the United States having given Cuba her freedom, didn't owe her anything in the world.

Senator McMillan is interested in the same sugar company of which Mr. Lothrop is a director, and the latter said that the senator, so far as he knew, had not consulted any Michigan beet sugar men, or even the active owners of his own concern, as to the needs of the infant industry. In Mr. Lothrop's opinion, a reduction of 20 per cent in the tariff meant that where the average beet sugar concern in Michigan was now perhaps making 5 per cent on its investment, the lower tariff suggested would throw the concerns considerably below this low figure.

Mr. Lothrop pointed out in detail where he expected the cost of placing beet sugar on the markets would steadily decrease, though he set the time as 10 to 15 years ahead when Michigan manufacturers would be able to meet raw sugar imported duty free.

"We have to pay now," he said, "$5.50 per ton for beets containing 15 per cent of sugar, and it costs $3.50 per ton to work them up. Now both of these elements of expense are capable of being reduced. A number of waste products, such as potash and the exhausted pulp, remain to be developed.

"At present Cuban raw sugar could be delivered at New York duty free for about 2 cents per pound. Refining would add ½ cent to the cost, and the product could be delivered in Michigan for something less than 3 cents. Now no factory in the United States can produce beet sugar at the present price of beets for 3 cents a pound. But the improvement in machinery is necessarily slow, for the original equipments are costly and therefore can be replaced very slowly. The average cost of producing beet sugar now in Michigan is 4 cents a pound. The price we are getting is 4½ cents. There is no combination of Michigan beet sugar manufacturers. The Michigan Beet Sugar Manufacturers' association was formed not to regulate the prices of sugar or beets, but solely to watch this tariff agitation."

Major B. H. Rothwell, director of the Mt. Clemens Sugar Co., which has a contract let for the erection of a 600-ton factory, and director and secretary of the Caseville Sugar Co., which is contemplating the erection of a 600-ton factory, said that a tariff reduction of 20 per cent would kill the Caseville project. In Major Rothwell's opinion, five years without any interference with the tariff would mean that the beet sugar industries of Michigan would be prepared to meet the competition of raw sugar admitted duty free.

A Trapper's Slick Scheme.

L'Anse, Mich., Jan. 13.—Wendelin Krisch, a trapper living near Nestoria, has called at the court house with the pelts of three more wolves, making 12 of the animals the man has killed within the past 30 days. For each he has been paid a bounty of $15, while the skins have also been a source of considerable revenue to him. The secret of Krisch's success is an interesting one. Several months ago he captured alive a female wolf, which he fastened to a long chain in the yard at his cabin. Since then the captive has attracted other wolves to the immediate vicinity, and the trapper, sitting comfortably in his little house, leisurely shoots them down at $18 per.

MICHIGAN BRIEFS.

Schools in the upper peninsula are experiencing difficulty in retaining their superintendents.

The U. of M. debaters who defeated the Northwestern university team are to compete on April 4 with a team from the University of Minnesota.

Dan Adams has purchased the Bennett property at Plymouth occupied by Dr. Tillipaugh, and will utilize the site for the erection of a modern three-story hotel.

Branch county is experiencing considerable trouble in electing county treasurers who are competent bookkeepers. Each of the three last ones have had deficits in accounts.

Dean Seabolt, manager of the Ann Arbor theater, is in trouble. He booked one show troupe while his manager booked another, both for the same week. Each advance agent now demands admittance.

Orders have been received by the officials at Hancock to prepare for export one of the largest locomotives formerly used on the Hancock & Calumet road when it was operating a narrow gauge system. The engine goes to South Africa for use in the gold mining field near Johannesburg.

It is a mystery why women endure Backache, Headache, Nervousness Sleeplessness, Melancholy, Fainting and Dizzy Spells when thousands have proved that Electric Bitters will quickly cure such troubles. "I suffered for years with kidney trouble," writes Mrs. Phebe Cherley, of Peterson, Ia., "and a lame back pained me so I could not dress myself, but Electric Bitters wholly cured me, and although 73 years old, I now am able to do all my housework." It overcomes Constipation, improves appetite, gives perfect health. Only 50c at C. A. Wright's drug store.

NORDICA INJURED

Famous Singer and Her Pianist Badly Hurt in Wreck.

THE ENGINEER WAS KILLED

Accident Happened on the Georgia Southern Railway Near Rome—Three Other Persons Sustained Severe Injuries.

Rome, Ga., Jan. 13.—As a result of a collision between a passenger train and a freight train on the Southern railway early Sunday morning, near Reeves Station, 20 miles north of Rome, Mme. Lillian Nordica, the singer, was injured; her accompanist, E. Romaine Simmons, sustained a bruised hand an engineer was killed and three other employes of the road injured.

The dead: Frank Tracey, engineer, Atlanta. Injured: Mme. Nordica. E. Romaine Simmons, Guy Connally, engineer on freight; George Florence, passenger conductor; Ed Lewis, fireman (colored).

The train, to which Mme. Nordica's private car was attached, was a mixed passenger and freight and left Atlanta Saturday night for Chattanooga. It arrived at Reeves station at 3:30 Sunday morning, where it had orders to meet the freight No. 55. A freight train, which proved to be an extra, was on the siding at Reeves when the passenger arrived, and the engineer of the passenger, evidently assuming that it was No. 55, did not stop, but continued his run towards Chattanooga.

A mile north of Reeves, while going at a rapid rate, the passenger met the freight on a short curve. The two engines crashed into each other, and Engineer Tracey, in attempting to jump, was caught between the two locomotives and crushed to death.

Mme. Nordica's car was attached to the rear of the passenger train. When the collision occurred Mme. Nordica was asleep in the private stateroom of the car. The sudden jar threw her from her bed to the floor. It is understood that she sustained a badly bruised shoulder and the muscles of her neck are said to have been strained. Dr. Garlington, the Southern railway's surgeon here, was immediately summoned and attended the singer. Dr. Garlington stated last night that Mme. Nordica was not badly hurt and he thought she would be able to fill her engagement tonight.

APPROPRIATED A SHIP.

Company Refused to Charter It, but Colombia Took It.

Colon, Colombia, Jan. 13 (via Galveston).—The South American Steamship Co., having refused to charter its steamer Lantare to the Colombian government, to be used by the latter as a gunboat, Gen. Alban, the military commander of this district, issued a decree appropriating the vessel. He has taken possession of it and has deposited a sum of money equal to its value with Senor Ehrman, a banker of Panama. The captain and crew of the Lantaro will remain in the service of the Colombian government. Cannon are now being mounted upon her and she will probably sail from Panama tomorrow to attack the fleet of the Colombian liberals.

The United States cruiser Philadelphia, which left Panama Jan. 9 for Lablas, has not yet returned.

A Chinaman's Narrow Escape.

Baker City, Ore., Jan. 13.—A human sacrifice was prevented by the timely arrival of some sisters of charity upon the scene in this city. Hy Wong, a paralytic Chinaman, who has been a county charge, was returned to the care of his countrymen in Chinatown. While he was an inmate of the county hospital his queue had been cut off. On this account the Chinese made preparations to offer him as a sacrifice to Joss. Hy Wong managed to get a message to the sisters at the hospital, and they rescued him before his life was taken. It was asserted that all preparations for Hy Wong's execution had been completed when the sisters arrived at the joss house.

Boundry Stones Were Moved.

Hanover, Pa., Jan. 13.—The surveyors employed by the states of Pennsylvania and Maryland to correct the boundry line as first established by Mason and Dixon have proceeded with their work as far as Germany township, Adams county, Pennsylvania. They report that many of the stones are displaced. The surveyors found one used as a doorsill in a dwelling, another in a church, others lying down and some at a considerable distance from the original places. All these stones will be secured and reset in their proper places.

Richard Croker Retires.

New York, Jan. 13.—Richard Croker has formally announced his retirement from the leadership of Tammany hall. The announcement was made at the meeting of the executive committee, at which the plan of organization for the year 1902 was agreed upon. Lewis Nixon was chosen as Mr. Croker's successor as the chairman of the finance committee. This position, by long usage, carries with it the leadership of the organization.

Germany's Emperor Declines.

Berlin, Jan. 13.—The North German Gazette pointedly denies that Emperor William will attend either the memorial service in honor of the late queen or the coronation of King Edward. The paper says the statements in the English papers on the subject are untrue.

Mexico Honors McKinley.

Santa Fe, N. M., Jan. 13.—Acting Gov. Reynolds has issued a proclamation setting aside Jan. 29 as McKinley day, a territorial holiday.

Out of One, Into Another.

Columbus, O., Jan. 11.—Timothy, alias Kid Hogan, a notorious mail box robber and forger, was released from the penitentiary today and was arrested at the door. Hogan was received at the prison on June 9, 1898, from the United States court in this city, to serve two sentences of five years each, to run concurrently. At the time Hogan was arrested he was wanted in nearly every city of importance in the United States, and rewards had been offered for his arrest amounting to over $4,000. He was also an escaped prisoner from Bleckwell's Island, N. Y. He still has four years and one month to serve in the island prison, and he will be taken back to serve that time. He refused to return without requisition papers.

SEVEN PERISHED

Father, Mother and Five Children Burned to Death.

TWO SUSPECTS ARRESTED

Happened in Buffalo Sunday Morning—'Twas a Store Building on Which Was $9,000 Insurance—Explosion First Took Place.

Buffalo, N. Y., Jan. 13.—Henry Pearlstein, his wife and five children, ranging in age from one and a half to 12 years, were burned to death Sunday morning in a fire that destroyed a two-story frame building. Joseph Supowski, who owned the building, and Karl Bracki, his brother-in-law, have been arrested pending an investigation. Supowski carried an insurance of $9,000 on the building and its contents.

The Pearlsteins and another family lived in rooms above the shoe store and were asleep when the fire started. Supowski told the police yesterday that he accidentally dropped a lamp. A few minutes after the fire began there was a loud explosion that blew out the front of the store and hurled some of the contents of the windows into the middle of the street. Plate glass windows on the opposite side of Broadway were shattered, and the sound of the explosion was heard two blocks away. The flames enveloped the building in a short time. The family living in the rear of the flat barely escaped with their lives. The Pearlsteins were awakened before they could reach the only stairway leading from their rooms, the fire had undermined the floor in the hallway and it collapsed, carrying them down into a mass of flames. Their charred bodies were found four hours after the firemen had extinguished the flames. The body of the mother and baby were found together, the little one tightly clasped in its mother's arms. Pearlstein's body was found close to that of his wife. He had one of the children in his arms. The bodies of the other three children were found huddled together close to the father's body.

THOUSANDS MADE HOMELESS.

Sweeping Campaign Made Through Batangas Province.

Manila, Jan. 13.—The news received from Batangas province is cheerful. The expedition to Loboo, in Batangas, has been a complete success. The columns, under Colonels Wint and Wells, have destroyed a large number of barracks and hamlets and enough rations to keep 20,000 Filipinos for six months. There was not a single American casualty during the entire expedition. The enemy fled before the Americans, many of them were killed and several surrendered. Major Henry Allen, formerly governor of the island of Leyte and now chief of the insular constabulary, who has been making a tour of inspection through the islands of Leyte and Mindanao, has returned to Manila and reports that the native constabulary is fully able to control the situation in the province of Misamis, in northern Mindanao, where he thinks the situation has been much exaggerated. Previous reports concerning this province caused Generals Davis and Wade to request that it be returned from civil to military control.

With the exception of the church, the entire town of Quingua, in Bulacan province, Luzon, has burned to the ground and thousands of Filipinos have been rendered homeless.

Could Stop Boer War.

Chicago, Jan. 13.—The Chicago branch of the American Transvaal league held a meeting here last night and adopted a petition calling upon President Roosevelt to enforce the neutrality law. A large number of signatures of prominent men—judges, lawyers and others—was obtained. The petition is in the form of an argument and sets forth that the United States is conceded to be a neutral nation in the war between Great Britain and the South African republics. It is claimed that if the augmentation of Britain's military supplies from the port of New Orleans were stopped, the war would come to a speedy end. It is urged that horses and mules designed for use in military operations are within the meaning of the term "military supplies," as used in the treaty of Washington. The president, therefore, is called upon to endorse strictly article 6 of that treaty.

Meet to Preserve Peace.

Managua, Nicaragua, Jan. 13 (via Galvestin).—President Zelaya, the ministers of his cabinet and several other Nicaraguan officials have left here for the port of Corinto, on the Pacific, where they will meet and confer with the presidents of the other states of Central America, who will assemble there upon the invitation of President Zelaya. Gen. Terencio Sierra, president of Honduras, and Gen. Tomas Regalaoo of Salvador are already on their way to Corinto. The presidents of the other republics, or their representatives, are reported as intending to go to Corinto later. The object of these meetings is declared to be the preservation of peace. They will occur Jan. 15 and 17.

Prince Henry to Visit U. S.

Berlin, Jan. 13.—Prince Henry of Germany will sail early in February for America on one of the North German Lloyd steamers. He will be attended by several officers of high rank, whose names have not yet been announced. The date of the launching of the emperor's yacht, it is understood, has been fixed for Feb. 26.

Yokohama, Jan. 13.—A fire in a wooden house here resulted in the death of 12 persons and the severe burning of 20 more.

VICTORY FOR U. OF M.

Defeats Northwestern University In Debate.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Jan. 11.—By the decisive vote of 2 to 1, the University of Michigan debaters won last night from Northwestern university. Michigan had the affirmative of the question: "Resolved, That compulsory arbitration in labor disputes be established."

Michigan has now won 10 consecutive inter-collegiate debates, with a total of 11 victories out of 14 contests. For the past three years she has held the western championship in oratory. She will now meet the winner of the Chicago-Minnesota debate for this year's championship.

CHANCES ARE EVEN

As to Whether Cuban Sugar Tariff Will be Reduced.

OXNARD QUEERED HIMSELF

Blodgett Means to Land Those Jobs of Customs Collector for Lillie and United States Marshal for Frank Wait.

Washington, Jan. 11.—Beet sugar manufacturers of Michigan and some other states appear to be souring on Henry T. Oxnard, their agent in Washington. At their convention here in December some of them got the understanding that Oxnard was to make a stand for no reduction whatever in the Cuban tariff. Since the convention he has been making propositions for a compromise. First he proposed to the president that a reduction in the Cuban tariff would be acceptable if the government paid a bounty to American sugar producers. Then he sprung the rebate scheme, and manufacturers are now telegraphing from Michigan and other states to senators and congressmen that Oxnard is not authorized to talk compromise for them, inasmuch as they do not want any change whatever in the tariff rate.

Representative Needham of California, which state produces more beet sugar than any other, made the statement that Chairman Payne and Representatives Dalzell, Grosvenor and Metcalf, republican members of the ways and means committee; Robertson, a democratic member, and two or three others, are opposed to report a bill for any reduction. On the other hand, it is gossipped that the administration influences are working to bring the committee into line for a 20 per cent or so reduction in accordance with the president's recommendation. Chances are about even as to whether there will be a reduction or not.

Michigan's republican national committeeman, John W. Blodgett, will try, before he leaves Washington tonight, to undertake to convince Senator Burrows, so it is asserted, that promises made long ago to appoint Walter T. Lillie collector of customs at Grand Haven, and Frank W. Wait United States marshal at Grand Rapids, ought not to remain any longer unfulfilled. That Lillie and Wait were promised these positions is positively stated by persons in a position to know.

Sugar for U. S. Without Duty.

(Correspondence of Associated Press.)

Managua, Nicaragua, Dec. 15.—Baled hay and iron boats, or iron for boats, are on the list of articles produced in the United States (in addition to wines, fruits and flour, previously reported, to come into Nicaragua free of duty), mentioned in the protocol for a reciprocity treaty between Nicaragua and the United States, signed by the Nicaraguan minister of foreign affairs, Dr. Sanchez, and forwarded to Mr. Kassan, the reciprocity commissioner at Washington. Nicaragua's sugar is to be admitted free into the United States. Labor is much too scarce and high in Nicaragua to permit of the production of sugar in competition with bought sugar, or cane sugar, produced in the United States. President Zeleya presented Wm. L. Merry, the United States minister to Nicaragua, with a rosewood walking cane yesterday. It has a long, heavy head of gold, on which are engraved Mr. Merry's initials in monogram, and "Bueno Amigo de Nicaragua" ("Good friend of Nicaragua").

Packed in Like Sardines.

Washington, Jan. 11.—The members of the congressional military affairs left here last night for West Point for the purpose of making a thorough inspection of conditions at the military academy, with a view to making provision for enlarging the establishment on modern lines. The academy opened originally with only 10 cadets under instruction. The corps increased gradually until it numbered 240 cadets in 1843. It numbers 483 at the present time, and will comprise 511 cadets in March, 1903. The buildings have not kept pace with this steady increase and are said to be totally inadequate to the needs of the institution. It is stated that it has become necessary to assign three cadets to a room originally intended for only one occupant.

Indiana Means Business.

Indianapolis, Ind., Jan. 11.—Gov. Durbin, Attorney-General Taylor and Auditor of State Hart will go to Washington Sunday night and will spend next week there in the interest of Indiana's civil war claim against the government. The claim amounts to $700,000, and the state authorities think the outlook for obtaining it is bright.

Cleveland Plans Hunting Trip.

New York, Jan. 11.—Ex-President Grover Cleveland is so far recovered from the effects of his recent attack of pneumonia as to have arranged for a hunting trip in the south. He will leave his home at Princeton, N. J., Jan. 22 for an island off Georgetown, S. C., where with a party of friends he will remain several days.

Another Aeronaut to Compete.

Monte Carlo, Jan. 11.—M. Santos-Dumont, the aeronaut, was asked today by a representative of the Associated Press whether he contemplates entering the aerial competition at the St. Louis exposition. To this question M. Santos-Dumont replied: "Of course, but as yet I do not know the conditions."

CHAPTER XI.

It was 2 o'clock in the afternoon on the 12th of August, under a hot sun and cloudless sky, that the toptschi-baschi gave the order to start.

Alcide and Blount, having bought horses, had already taken the road to Tomsk.

Among the prisoners brought by Ivan Ogareff to the Tartar camp was an old woman, whose taciturnity seemed to keep her apart from all those who shared her fate. Not a murmur issued from her lips. She was like a statue of grief. This woman was more strictly guarded than any one else and, without her appearing to notice or even to suspect, was constantly watched by the gypsy Sangarre. Notwithstanding her age she was compelled to follow the convoy of prisoners on foot, without any alleviation of her suffering.

However, a kind Providence had placed near her a courageous, kind hearted being to comfort and assist her. Among her companions in misfortune a young girl, remarkable for her beauty and a taciturnity equal to that of the Siberian, seemed to have given herself the task of watching over her. No words had been exchanged between the two captives, but the girl was always found at the old woman's side just when her help was useful. At first the mute assistance of the stranger was not accepted without some mistrust. Gradually, however, the young girl's clear glance, her reserve and the mysterious sympathy which draws together those who are in misfortune thawed Marfa's coldness.

Nadia—for it was she—was thus able without knowing it to render to the mother those attentions which she had herself received from the son. Her instinctive kindness had doubly inspired her. In devoting herself to her service Nadia secured to her youth and beauty the protection afforded by the age of the old prisoner.

On the crowd of unhappy people, imbittered by sufferings, this silent pair—one seeming to be the grandmother, the other the granddaughter—imposed a sort of respect.

After being carried off by the Tartar scouts on the Irtish Nadia had been taken to Omsk. Kept a prisoner in the town, she shared the fate of all those captured by Ivan Ogareff and consequently that of Marfa Strogoff.

Thanks to her young companion, Marfa Strogoff was able to follow the soldiers who guarded the prisoners without being fastened to a saddlebow, as were many other unfortunate wretches, and thus dragged along this road of sorrow.

"May God reward you, my daughter, for what you have done for my old age!" said Marfa Strogoff once, and for some time these were the only words exchanged between the two unfortunate beings.

Nadia also, if not completely silent, spoke little.

However, one day her heart overflowed, and she told, without concealing anything, all the events which had occurred from her departure from Wladimir to the death of Nicholas Korpanoff. All that her young companion told intensely interested the old Siberian.

"Nicholas Korpanoff?" said she. "Tell me again about Nicholas. I know only one man, one alone, among all the youth of the time in whom such conduct would not have astonished me. Nicholas Korpanoff! Was that really his name? Are you sure of it, my daughter."

"Why should he have deceived me in this," replied Nadia, "when he deceived me in no other way?"

Moved, however, by a kind of presentiment, Marfa Strogoff put questions upon questions to Nadia.

"You told me he was fearless, my daughter. You have proved that he has been so," said she.

"Yes, fearless indeed," replied Nadia.

"It was just what my son would have done," said Marfa to herself.

Then she resumed:

"Did you not say that nothing stopped him, nothing astonished him, that he was so gentle in his strength that you had a sister as well as a brother in him and that he watched over you like a mother?"

"Yes, yes," said Nadia; "brother, sister, mother—he has been all to me."

"And defended you like a lion?"

"A lion indeed," replied Nadia. "Yes, a lion, a hero."

"My son, my son!" thought the old Siberian. "But do you say that he has submitted to a terrible affront in the posthouse of Ichim?"

"He has borne with it," answered Nadia, lowering her head.

"Has he submitted to it?" murmured Marfa Strogoff, trembling with fear.

"Mother, mother," cried Nadia, "do not condemn him. There is a secret there of which God alone is the judge at the present time!"

"And," said Marfa, raising her head and looking at Nadia as though she desired to read the depth of her soul in this hour of humiliation, "have you despised this Nicholas Korpanoff?"

"I have admired him without understanding him," answered the young girl. "I have never felt him to be more worthy of respect than he is at the present moment."

The old woman was silent for a moment.

"Was he tall?" she asked.

"Very tall."

"And very handsome—is it not so? Come, tell me, my girl."

"He was very handsome," answered Nadia, blushing deeply.

"It was my son! I tell you it was my son!" exclaimed the old woman, embracing Nadia.

"Your son!" said Nadia, amazed. "Your son!"

"Come," said Marfa, "let us get to the bottom of this, my child. Your companion, your friend, your protector, had a mother. Did he never speak to you of his mother?"

"Of his mother?" said Nadia. "He spoke to me of his mother—as I spoke to him of my father—often, always. He adored her."

"Nadia, Nadia, you have just told me about my son," said the old woman.

And she added impetuously:

"Was he not going to see his mother, whom you say he loved, on his way through Omsk?"

"No," answered Nadia; "no, he was not."

"Not!" cried Marfa. "You dare to tell me not?"

"I have said it, but it remains for me to inform you that from motives unknown to me and which had to guide him before every other consideration I was given to understand that Nicholas Korpanoff had to traverse the country in the most absolute secrecy. It was for him a question of life and of death and, more sacred still, a question of duty and honor."

"Of duty in reality, of imperious duty," said the old Siberian, "of that kind for which a person sacrifices everything, for the accomplishment of which he would deny himself every thing, even the joy of coming to give a kiss, the last perhaps, to his old mother. All that you do not know, Nadia, all that I did not know myself at this moment I know. You have made me understand all. But the light which you have thrown into the deepest darkness of my heart, that light, alas, I may not cause to enter your own. The secret of my son, Nadia, since he has not told it to you, I must keep for him. Forgive me, Nadia. The good deed you have done me I cannot return to you."

"Mother, I ask nothing from you," answered Nadia.

All was thus explained to the old Siberian, all, even the inexplicable conduct of her son with regard to herself in the inn at Omsk in presence of the witnesses of their meeting. There was no doubt that the young girl's companion was Michael Strogoff and that a secret mission, some important dispatch to be carried across the invaded country, obliged him to conceal his quality of the czar's courier.

"Ah, my brave boy!" thought Marfa. "No, I will not betray you, and tortures shall not wrest from me the avowal that it was you whom I saw at Omsk."

Marfa could with a word have paid Nadia for all her devotion to her. She could have told her that her companion, Nicholas Korpanoff, or, rather, Michael Strogoff, had not perished in the waters of the Irtish, since it was some days after that incident that she had met him, that she had spoken to him. But she restrained herself, she was silent and contented herself with saying:

"Hope, my child. Misfortune will not overwhelm you. You will see your father again. I feel it. And perhaps he who gave you the name of sister is not dead. God cannot have allowed your brave companion to perish. Hope, my child, hope. Do as I do. The mourning which I wear is not yet for my son."

Such was now the situation of Marfa Strogoff and Nadia toward each other. The old Siberian had understood all, and if the young girl was ignorant of the fact that her companion so much regretted still lived she knew at least the relationship which he held toward her whom she had made her mother, and she thanked God for having given her that joy and pleasure thus to be able to replace at the side of the prisoner that son whom she had lost.

But that which neither the one nor the other could know was that Michael Strogoff, taken at Kalyvan, was one of the same convoy and was bound like themselves for Tomsk.

At length, on the 15th of August, toward evening, the convoy reached the little town of Zabedeiro, some thirty versts from Tomsk. At this place the route again lay along the course of the Tom.

All this night the prisoners were to camp on the banks of the Tom. The emir, in fact, had deferred until the next day the entry of his troops into Tomsk. It had been decided that a military display should mark the inauguration of the Tartar headquarters in this important city. Feofar-Khan already occupied its fortress, but the body of his army bivouacked under the walls, waiting for the moment to make a solemn entry.

Ivan Ogareff had left the emir at Tomsk, where they had both arrived the evening before, and he returned to the encampment at Zabedeiro. Next day he had to start from this place with the rear guard of the Tartar army. A house had been placed at his disposal where he could stay the night. At sunrise, under his command, horse and foot set out for Tomsk, where the emir wished to receive them with all the pomp and display of an Asiatic sovereign.

When the orders for a halt had been given, the prisoners, worn out with a three days' journey, a prey to the most burning thirst, could at length quench their thirst and take some repose.

The sun had already set, but the horizon was still lighted up by the twilight, when Nadia, supporting Marfa Strogoff, reached the banks of the Tom. The two had not been able so far to penetrate the ranks of those who thronged the high bank, and they came to drink in their turn.

The old Siberian bent over the fresh stream, and Nadia, having plunged her hands into it, carried it to the lips of Marfa. Then she refreshed herself in her turn. The cold water of the pure stream seemed to give back life to the old woman and the young girl. Suddenly Nadia, as she left the banks, straightened herself. An involuntary cry escaped her lips.

Michael Strogoff was there and only some paces from her! It was he!

At the cry of Nadia Michael Strogoff had started, but he had sufficient command of himself not to utter a word which could compromise him.

And yet at the very moment that Nadia had recognized him he had recognized his mother. Michael Strogoff at this unexpected meeting, not feeling himself to be any longer master of himself, raised his hand to his eyes and immediately left the spot. Nadia was instinctively hastening forward to rejoin him when the old Siberian whispered these words in her ear:

"Stay, my daughter!"

"It is he!" answered Nadia in a voice trembling with emotion. "He lives, mother! It is he!"

"It is my son," answered Marfa Strogoff; "it is Michael Strogoff, and you see that I do not take one step toward him. Follow my example."

Michael Strogoff had just experienced one of the most violent emotions which it is ever given to man to feel. His mother and Nadia were there. Those two prisoners, each of whom seemed to hold the first place in his heart, were there joined with him in one common misfortune. Did Nadia know who he was? No, for he had seen the gesture of Marfa Strogoff holding her back at the moment she was about to rush upon him. Marfa Strogoff had understood all and kept her secret.

Michael Strogoff could then hope that this fresh and unexpected meeting at the camp of Zabedeiro would have no injurious consequences neither for his mother nor for himself, but he did not know that certain particulars of that scene, rapidly as it had passed, had been gained by Sangarre, the spy of Ivan Ogareff.

The gypsy was there, a few paces from the bank, watching as ever the old Siberian, without her suspecting it. She had not been able to perceive Michael Strogoff, who had already disappeared when she turned round, but the gesture of the mother, withholding Nadia, had not escaped her, and a light from Marfa's eyes told her everything.

There was no longer any doubt that the son of Marfa Strogoff, the courier of the czar, was now at Zabedeiro among the prisoners of Ivan Ogareff.

Sangarre did not know him, but she knew he was there. She did not then attempt to discover him, a thing which would have been impossible in the midst of this numerous crowd.

As for again spying after Nadia and Marfa Strogoff, this was equally useless. It was evident that these two women would be on their guard, and it would be impossible to seize by surprise anything of a nature to compromise the courier of the czar.

The gypsy had then only one thought—to warn Ivan Ogareff. Wherefore she immediately left the camp.

A quarter of an hour afterward she arrived at Zabedeiro and was shown into the house occupied by the lieutenant of the emir.

Ivan Ogareff immediately received the gypsy.

"What do you wish, Sangarre?" he asked.

"The son of Marfa Strogoff is at the camp," answered Sangarre.

"A prisoner?"

"A prisoner."

"Ah," cried Ivan Ogareff, "I knew"—

"You knew nothing, Ivan," said the gypsy, "for you do not even know him."

"But do you know him? You have seen him, Sangarre?"

"I have not seen him, but I saw his mother betray herself by a movement which has told me everything."

"Do you not deceive yourself?"

"I do not."

"You know the importance I attach to the arrest of this courier," said Ivan Ogareff. "If the letter which was sent to him from Moscow reaches Irkutsk, and it should be handed to the grand duke, the grand duke would be on his guard, and I should not be able to catch him. I must have this letter at any price. Now, you have just told me that the bearer of this letter is in my power. I repeat it, Sangarre, do you not deceive yourself?"

Ivan Ogareff had spoken with great animation. His emotion bore testimony to the extreme importance he attached to the possession of this letter. Sangarre was not at all troubled with the persistency of the fresh inquiry.

"I am not deceived, Ivan," she answered.

"But, Sangarre, there are at the camp several thousand prisoners, and you say you do not know Michael Strogoff?"

"No," answered the gypsy, whose face lighted up with a savage joy. "I indeed do not know him, but his mother does. Ivan, we must force the mother to speak."

"Tomorrow she shall speak!" said Ogareff.

Then he held out his hand to the gypsy, and she kissed it, without there being in this act of respect habitual to the people of the north anything degrading or servile.

Sangarre returned to the camp. She found the place occupied by Nadia and Marfa Strogoff and passed the night in watching them both, with her ears open for any information. She could hear nothing. By an instinctive feeling of prudence not a word was exchanged between Nadia and Marfa Strogoff.

Woodworms Can't Stand Benzine.

Woodworms can be destroyed in books and woodwork by benzine. Books are locked up in a cupboard with a saucer of benzine. The insects, as well as their larvæ and eggs, soon die off. Furniture and carvings are similarly placed in a room with a dish of benzine and kept closed up for several weeks, the time required for the complete destruction of the insects varying according to the thickness of the wood. New woodwork can be protected against their entry by a coating of glue, as, living on vegetable substances, they do not touch animal products.

Amusing Superstitions.

If you count warts, you will increase their number, or to handle a toad will cause warts. If two persons wash in the same water or dry their hands on the same towel, they will shortly quarrel. To bore a hole in the door frame and put in it the hair of a colored person is supposed to cure whooping cough. The rattle of a rattlesnake, if carried in the pocket, will prevent rheumatism or, if placed in the bureau drawer, will keep away moths.

The Shrew.

The shrew was originally the shrew mouse, which, when her young were helpless, would fight desperately in their defense, and so well known was the courage of this little animal, which would even go out of its way to seek an enemy at times when the nest needed protection, that the word became applied to a woman who was ever ready to seek a quarrel.

He Objected.

"No, suh, Mistah Doctahman," objected the gentleman of color—"no, suh; doan' yoh go ahead en vacsumate dat ole 'ooman er mine. Doan' yoh do hit. Des plunk dat air stuff in my bofe arms, but doan' fix huh so she gwine hab er so'e arm en cain' ten' ter de white folks' washin', kase ef yoh do I'ze 'pintedly got ter go ter wuk!"—Baltimore American.

Getting Thin

is all right, if you are too fat; and all wrong, if too thin already.

Fat, enough for your habit, is healthy; a little more, or less, is no great harm. Too fat, consult a doctor; too thin, persistently thin, no matter what cause, take Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil.

There are many causes of getting too thin; they all come under these two heads: overwork and under-digestion.

Stop over-work, if you can; but, whether you can or not, take Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil, to balance yourself with your work. You can't live on it—true—but, by it, you can. There's a limit, however; you'll pay for it

Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil is the readiest cure for "can't eat," unless it comes of your doing no work—you can't long be well and strong, without some sort of activity.

The genuine has this picture on it, take no other. If you have not tried it, send for free sample, its agreeable taste will surprise you.

FLOWER AND TREE.

A single leaf of the orange tree carefully planted will often take root and grow.

Rosin and tallow in equal parts make an excellent covering for wounds in fruit trees.

"Belting" a tree—that is, killing it by destroying the bark in a circle around the trunk—injures it for lumber.

In transplanting trees all roots that have become bruised or broken should be cut clean away behind the broken part.

A pan of water kept steaming in the stove will keep the atmosphere in good condition for the growth of house plants during the winter.

Trees should always be trimmed when young and growing in such a manner that there will be no necessity for cutting off large limbs.

Wood mold, provided it is fine and free from roots and sticks, with the addition of a little well rotted compost, makes a splendid soil for the pots or boxes in which to grow the house plants in winter.

Orchards generally produce full crops only every other year. This is because the full crop of one year so exhausts the fruit producing qualities of the soil that it is not able to make a full crop the next year.

The Linseed Poultice.

A dispensary doctor in the Emerald Isle is expected to dispense many things besides drugs.

His life is certainly not a bed of roses. These people are woefully ignorant, yet no Irishman likes to confess to want of adequate knowledge.

One day I ordered a linseed poultice to be put on an old man's chest. The next morning he was no better, and I was accused of incompetency.

"I put the plaister to him, your honor," said his wife, "though he spit an' spit like a big snail. But it ain't done no good! An', docthor, honey, it was a big dose!"

Then I realized Mrs. Moultan's method of poulticing her good man's chest. She had applied the soft mass internally!

Another time I compounded (we are our own dispensers in the Isle of Destiny) a box of pills for "brown kitties." The result of grinding these with a big stone and wearing the powder as a charm was not satisfactory. My verdict as "c'rowner" certified "natural causes." It should have been given as "crass ignorance."—Good Words.

Mrs. George W. Smith of 83 East Chicago street died Monday morning, January 13, at 2:30 o'clock, of dropsy, after a short illness though her health was poor for a number of years. The funeral will take place Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock suntime from her late residence.

Margaretta Mott Davis was born on Long Island May 9, 1820. July 5, 1841, she was wedded to George W. Smith at Brooklyn, Long Island, where they made their home till November 1857, when they moved to Michigan settling in Raisin, living there until January 1864, at which time they removed to Petersburg, Mich., living there nearly five years, after which in December 1868 they came to Tecumseh. Mr. Smith's death occurred November 1894.

Two children were born of this union, Mrs. Cynthia A. Hoag, of this place being the surviving daughter. A sister, Mrs. Hiram Cornelius, of Adrian, being the sole survivor of a family of eight children.

A GOOD LETTER

From a Climate even Colder than ours

GEO. TIFFANY

Is Doing Well in Alaska and has the Best Wishes of a Host of Friends Here.

"After thousands of miles of travel I find myself at Rampart City, a city of log cabins, and though perhaps from the above you might think me amidst only Indians, I assure you that there are a number of very pleasant and interesting married people here, where it is pleasant to spend an evening now and then. It is also interesting to hear the "sour dough" (one who has remained in the country at least one winter) miners tell of their experiences, around the big stove in our store. I enjoy my duties although they are somewhat varied. I keep the books, assist in the store, and try and make myself useful and not ornamental. Blue shirts and patched trousers are the prevailing fashion among the sterner sex, and yours truly finds the garb comfortable, especially when one considers that washing costs four bits (50 cents) a garment.

The automobile of Alaska is an odd sight, and these dog teams are as thick as autos on the streets of Chicago. The specie of dog used for this business is known as a "malmaluke" and they resemble a wolf in appearance, They have the reputation of being indifferent to caresses and fondling, but I have seen a number of pets among these teams where the master was kind and considerate. A noted bishop visited this frozen country once upon a time and it is said he took the Lord's name in vain a great many times when driving a dog team. These Northern dogs are called upon to draw very heavy loads and a great many teams of dogs do not pull together and sometimes will pull against their leader, get out of the trail, and do other things to try the drives's patience. The driver is equipped with a long whip which is used a great deal. The poor dogs have my sympathy and I do hate to see them whipped. I had the pleasure of riding behind a good team, and great was the novelty—over hills and bumps, through brush and near rocks, the driver running along behind with his hand on the handles to prevent the tipping over of the sled. The sleds have handles like that of a wheelbarrow to keep the sled upright.

I am fortunate in being in one of the most active camps in Alaska where new strikes have been made, and I find that there are a few opportunities to make a little money. Of course the long eight months of winter will not be as pleasant as those I have enjoyed in Michigan, but then, where there are advantages there must be disadvantages.

We do not have the pleasure of eating tenderloin steaks here, but have to subsist on bear meat, caribou, mountain sheep and moose meat. Mountain sheep make the finest kind of steak, while the moose steak is also delicious. We have no fresh eggs, but there is a canned variety known as baker's eggs—a sort of an evaporated hen fruit which is used in cookery. Our vegetables are known as "air tights" (canned vegetables) and though far from being equal to the real thing, they are pretty fair. Of course, you chew onto a small piece of solder occasionally, but little things like that are not to be considered, only golden nuggets take your eye. We also have no potatoes in the winter, but there is an evaporated potato from Germany, which if well cooked, is just as good. Meals are reasonable—$1.00.

Gold, the root of all evil, is found in large quantities near here. I handle a great deal of it and now have in the safe $3,000 in dust. It is a legal tender here, and we have small good scales upon the counter and the purchaser hands his poke to you (the bag in which it is carried) and you pour out the required amount to cover the purchase at the rate of $16 and $18 per ounce according to the quality of the dust. Gold nuggets of all shapes and value are received, and it is somewhat of a fad to have them made into pins, cuff buttons, watch charms, etc.

The sun will cease to shine upon this place in a few days, and it will begin to get dark early. The northern lights are grand and beyond description, and at times the sky is beautiful. We are located in a sort of valley along side the Yukon river, and while the sun will not shine upon the place we will see it across the river shining against the mountain tops.

I walked out of the store the other morning at about eight o'clock and looking at the thermometer noted that it was 20 below zero. Of course this was not cold, because I will soon see it go down to 60 and 65. The cold here is much different than the Michigan cold. It is so dry that you will freeze your ears or face before you realize it. It is exhilarating and it makes you feel like a new being. It is no doubt a healthy climate, for rarely one gets ill, unless from carelessness or over indulgence.

Well, I will close this rambling letter of mine and send it on its journey packed by a team of dogs over 630 miles of snow to Dawson, thence to the coast of Alaska and to Seattle, and there taken by fast trains to the little town on the Lake Shore road, where I feel I have so many kind friends.

Trusting that I may hear from you, and with regards to all, I am sincerely,
G. H. TIFFANY.

EMBEZZLEMENT.

A Former Employee of Thomas Adamson

JOE MOROSS

Charged With the Wrong Use of His Employers Money.

Joe Moross is in jail, charged with embezzlement, preferred by Thomas Adamson, of Tecumseh.

Mr. Moross was in the employ of Mr. Adamson, who conducts a jewelry store at Tecumseh, as a salesman, and later was put on the road selling goods for him. He is charged with embezzling a ring valued at $25 and a stud worth $50. It is alleged he sold the goods to Detroit parties, sent the bills, but failed to forward the money. About a month ago he left Mr. Adamson's employ and went to Kalamazoo, where he secured a position in a jewelry house as salesman.

At 4 o'clock Saturday afternoon the complaint was made, a warrant for his arrest issued, and at 10 o'clock Sunday morning he was behind the bars in the county jail. Quick work. Sheriff Shepherd telegraphed to the officers at Kalamazoo, who arrested him, and when Turnkey Bettis arrived there the officer was at the depot with his man, and he was brought here.

This afternoon Mr. Moross, accompanied by an officer and Mr. Adamson, went to Detroit, where he will endeavor to clear up the matter and be released—Adrian Times.

EIGHTY TWO YEARS

Yesterday the Relatives and Friends Celebrated the 82nd Anniversary of

MARY C. TAYLOR

At Her Home On Chicago Street

A merry gathering was at the Taylor home yesterday celebrating the birthday of "Aunt Mary" and the best of all is, that she is as well and happy as ever. In all there were about 30 guests, relatives and friends, all from Tecumseh except, Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Mead and Sarah Mead, Mr. and Mrs. T. I. Sutton, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Comfort and Moses Comfort, of Raisin, and Mrs. A. E. Kennedy, of Clinton.

ROUND ABOUT US.

There is a persistent rumor in circulation to the effect that the Detroit Southern has purchased a controlling interest in the Ironton railway property and will make Ironton a terminal.

The prospects for Britton seems brighter than ever with the salt well already established and a plant for paving brick and sewer tile already in prospect. Capitalists have been buying up options on land for a factory employing 250 hands. The citizen of Britton are hilarious with delight and property is advancing.—Blissfield Advance.

Drs. Dutt, of this city, Stephenson, of Adrian and Wilcox, of Clayton, performed an operation for appendicitis upon the ten-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hurley Gratton, last Thursday morning. The Grattans reside about a mile from Clayton. The child rallied nicely from the effects of the operation, and the prospects of her recovery are good.—Hudson Gazette.

Joseph Smith of Tecumseh, has been married 25 years. So has his wife. But the Tecumseh Joe, never had 25 wives same as did Joseph Smith of Utah. Not any for Joe, except the one who has made him happy every day for a quarter of a century.—Adrian Press.

Saturday afternoon, just before closing time, at Fred Mohr's marble works, John Murray ran upstairs to throw off the belt which runs the polisher. While doing so, his right arm in some way became entangled in the belt and was carried around the pully, straining and bruising the arm badly and cutting the hand up some. Dr. Turbett happened in the shop just after the accident occurred and relieved the pain in the injured member. Mr. Murray is now taking an enforced vacation and wishing he had that accident policy now.—Blissfield Advance.

The following from the Pontiac Post shows how the electric lines do not hurt but rather benefit the merchants in towns along the lines: "A local attachee of one of the cheap freight lines between here and Detroit says, "All the talk about small packages coming here from that city is false. The larger part of our part of our business is with dealers. We don't average three packages a day. The Pontiac merchant who keeps up with the times will get his share of trade and do as in any place in the state. If he doesn't he need not expect to do business anywhere."

Tecumseh township taxes foot up $19,447, and the heaviest tax payer isn't the one who pays the most taxes. Lucius Lilley heads the list with a contribution of $596.13 and L. I. Bidwell is a close second with $562.20. The latter eyes Lilley's levy with a sort of suspicious look, and can't exactly understand why it is more than his own. Next year Bidwell will nudge Supervisor Hayden and tell him to tack on about $5,000 more to his assessment and say nothing to Lilley about it. Behold the Lilley of Tecumseh. He toils not, neither doth he spin. Yet Bidwell in all his possessions is not arrayed as extensively on the tax roll as he. Bidwell should follow Lilley's example, and subscribe for the Press.—Adrian Press.

A MATTER OF FAITH.

Many of the Clergy in Michigan Endorse the little conqueror

Our religious opinions are, as a whole a matter of faith. Whatever denomination or sect we follow we pin our faith on the words and teachings of the pastor. His sincerity is never doubted; that he thoroughly believes his adopted creed is unquestioned. The opinions of the clergy on any subject carry well deserved weight with all classes of people. Many reverend gentlemen in Michigan are testifying for the little conqueror, their praise is not given lightly and only after personal experience. Gratitude and a desire to promise the welfare of the public brings forth such testimony as follows:

"The Rev. F. A. Smith, of 829 First street, Kalamazoo, Mich., says: When I procured Doan's Kidney Pills I was, at the time, and had been considerably troubled with my kidneys. Backache was quite pronounced, being especially severe when I sat or stood in a stooped position for any length of time. Other symptoms usually attending disordered kidneys plainly indicated what caused the difficulty. Doan's Kidney Pills corrected the annoyance in a very short time and I have not noticed, up to date, any indication of a recurrence. As I took no other medicine there can be no doubt but Doan's Kidney Pills were the direct means of curing me. I am most favorably impressed with them."

DISAPPEARING WRITING.

The Way a Big Swindle Was Successfully Worked In Paris.

A number of Parisian financiers were recently defrauded of a very considerable sum of money by a swindler who relied for the success of his scheme entirely upon the peculiar properties of iodide of starch. Posing as a man of considerable wealth, whose money was tied up in such a manner that he could not realize without heavy losses and pretending to have the option of some valuable concessions in China, he obtained various large amounts of money in exchange for bills dated to stand for three months.

No one for a moment suspected that there was anything in the least degree shady about the man or his transactions, and when he made it public that he had been successful in selling his Chinese concession at a large profit his creditors felt absolutely certain that he would meet his bills.

To their immense surprise, however, when they came to look through their papers to find the bills they only found bills with blank spaces in the places where the swindler's name should have been and had actually been. They clamored round him for an explanation of the strange affair, but he denied that he had ever given any of them bills and defied them to sue him for repayment of the loans, and the fact that the bills were devoid of the swindler's signature rendered them absolutely worthless.

The matter was put into the hands of the police, who were able to discover that in signing the bills the man had used a solution of iodide of starch, which, when first used for writing, appears much the same as ordinary ink, but completely disappears in the course of a few weeks, and, although traces of the chemical may subsequently be discovered, nothing can make the writing show up again. Finding that his victims had discovered his method, the schemer decamped, despite the fact that the chances of the police obtaining a conviction against him were very remote indeed.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. Sleeplessness is one of the most prolific sources producing weak, nervous and restless condition. There is no sense in using opiates, they only undermine the constitution. ENLIGHTENED THE COURT.

A Story of Lord Morris' Daring as an Advocate.

Lord Morris possessed an almost inexhaustible fund of humor, which, it may be said, was not always appreciated in the house of lords. The following story is perhaps illustrative of his daring as an advocate rather than his qualities as a humorist: On one occasion an irritable judge interrupted him in the middle of a law argument by saying testily, "I don't understand a single word, sir, of your notice of motion."

"Not a single word?" said young Morris. "That is very unfortunate, my lord. I must endeavor to explain." Young Morris then read over the notice of motion with exaggerated emphasis. "Sir: Take notice that on April 6, or on the first opportunity thereafter, counsel on behalf of the plaintiff will apply to this honorable court for an order that," and so on. "Now, my lord, to proceed with my explanation. 'Sir.' That, my lord, is the monosyllabic mode of address adopted by the solicitor for the plaintiff to the solicitor for the defendant. It is curt, my lord, and indicates that the parties are now at arm's length; but it is not discourteous, nor does it preclude the possibility of friendly private relations between the solicitors. 'Take notice.' This, your lordship will observe, is in the nature of a warning. The object is that the solicitor shall be prepared for the application, and, above all, that he shall have an opportunity to instruct and fee counsel to resist the motion. 'On April 6.' That day is now past, my lord, and therefore unavailable for the making of this motion. 'Or on the first opportunity thereafter.' That, my lord, is the present occasion. 'Counsel on behalf of the plaintiff.' That, my lord, is the humble individual who appears before you. 'Will apply to this honorable court.' That is the learned and courteous judge whom I have the honor to address. 'For an order.' That, my lord"—

But the judge had heard enough, "Go on with your motion, Mr. Morris," he said, joining in the general laughter. "I have learned my lesson."—London

Men and Beasts.

I once had a trainer, an old Irishman, who had served in a British regiment in India and who knew the ways of tigers in every detail. He taught three of them to do more work in the show arena than I have ever seen done by tigers. I have seen him sitting down between two of them at rest times during rehearsals and examining their claws to see if any of them were sore or split. Any one who has ever tried that with even a house cat knows that it strikes the feline nature as an unwarrantable familiarity, but they never did more than show their teeth and whine, and that in half playfulness.

One day he got very drunk. I had never known him to transgress before. Before he was noticed on his return to the cage he had gone in with his tigers and fallen in a heap on the floor. The other keepers tried to take him out of the cage, but to have done so would have meant a bitter and bloody fight with the three striped ones. They guarded him all night in his drunken slumber. The next time he put them to work, however, they balked, and he could neither persuade nor drive them. They had ceased to trust him, or something of that sort, and his usefulness with them was at an end completely.—F. Bostock in Frank Leslie's.

Trouble For the Tourists.

The poor Saxon "towrist"—what he may suffer in the Emerald Isle! There is a story on record of three Irishmen rushing away from the race meeting at Punchestown to catch a train back to Dublin. At the moment a train from a long distance pulled up at the station, and the three men scrambled in. In the carriage was seated one other passenger. As soon as they had regained their breath one said:

"Pat, have you got th' tickets?"

"What tickets? I've got me loife! I thought I'd have lost that gettin' in th' thrain. Have you got 'em, Moike?"

"Oi? Begorrah, I haven't!"

"Oh, we're all done for, thin!" said the third. "They'll charge us roight from th' other soide of Oireland."

The old gentleman looked over his newspaper and said:

"You are quite safe, gintlemen. Wait till we get to th' next station."

As soon as the train pulled up the little gentleman jumped out and came back with three first class tickets. Handing them to the astonished strangers, he said: "Whist, I'll tell you how I did it! I wint along th' thrain. 'Tickets, plaze; tickets, plaze!' I called, and these belong to three Saxon towrists in another carriage."—Harry Furniss in Strand.

St. Paul's.

"It is curious," says the London Chronicle, "how St. Paul's, although the first cathedral church in England that was built actually for the observance of the Anglican ritual, manages nevertheless to retain something of a foreign and a Catholic nature in the way it offers shelter to the tired passerby. Apart from the restless groups of sightseers, there are always plenty of people there who have gone in solely for the sake of its wonderful peace and quiet.

"They would have found neither, by the way, in old St. Paul's of the fifteenth century, for while mass was being said in one chapel, a funeral service in another, and so on, all sorts of commerce was carried on in the middle aisle, from the hiring of servants to the transaction of legal business.

"We have altered all that nowadays, and St. Paul's is the quietest spot in the noisiest city in the world."

His Half.

An old Maryland colored man was summoned to court by the controversy over the ownership of a mule.

"Who bought the mule?" demanded the judge.

"Clem Smif and Ah each bought half ob him, sah," responded the old man.

"Where is Smith now?"

"He ain't nebber cum down yit, sah. He went to curry his half when his half was in a bad humor. Now Clem's chillun wants to get deh fatheh's half away from my half, en deh half am dess half"—

"Stop!" roared the judge. "Dismiss the case."—Chicago News.

Pens, Paper and Royalty.

Whenever the signature of an English king or queen is required in a visitor's book or elsewhere it is customary to provide a new pen, which is not used by the hosts or the other guests unless it be handed them by the royal visitor. Another point of etiquette connected with pens and paper is that a letter to a sovereign is written on thick white paper, on one side only, and is placed in an envelope large enough to contain the letter unfolded.

Ahead There.

"I hope," said the drummer, "you were quite satisfied with my report for the past month."

"Well," replied the head of the firm, "there was one part of it that really exceeded our expectations."

"And what was that?"

"Your expense bill."—Catholic Standard and Times.

A Scott Pun.

Calling one day on a Miss Ferguson and observing a fine honeysuckle in full blossom over the door, Sir Walter Scott congratulated his friend on its appearance. She spoke of it as trumpet honeysuckle.

"Weel," said Scott, "ye'll never come out o' your ain door without a flourish o' trumpets!"

A Distinction.

"I am told," said the friend, "that the manager you have left was paying you a fabulous salary?"

"No," aswered Mr. Stormington Barnes, "not fabulous; imaginary."—Exchange.

The Scales on the Hair.

If you look at a human hair under the microscope, you will find that its surface is formed of successive overlapping scales. The bristles of the hog bear much resemblance to the human hair, though their diameter is greater and the tilelike scales are much finer. Sheep's hair has much coarser scales. It is owing to the existence of these scales that a schoolboy is able by a peculiar process to tell which is the tip and which the other end of a hair rolling it between his finger and thumb. Thus manipulated, the hair always travels in the direction of the base because the edges of the scales prevent it from going the other way.

Canada's Banking Business.

The banking business in Canada is on a different plan from that in this country. The headquarters of most of the banks throughout the Dominion is in Ontario, either at Hamilton, Kingston or Toronto. Each bank has its central office, generally in one of the cities named, and as many branches as it cares to maintain in different parts of Canada, some of these branches being as far distant as Dawson.

GRAPPLED WITH INSANE MAN.

Sheriff Shepherd of Charlotte Has a Narrow Escape.

Charlotte, Mich., Jan. 9.—A few weeks ago Theophilus Noacker of Oneida made an effort to have his nephew, George Noacker, sent to an asylum, claiming the young man was mentally unsound. Sheriff Shepherd investigated the complaint and a few days ago when Noacker came to town on the same mission the sheriff informed him that the nephew was absolutely sane.

Noacker walked into the jail office yesterday afternoon and found Sheriff Shepherd alone in the room.

"Are you the lord high sheriff of Eaton county?" inquired the visitor in loud tones.

"I have had a talk with Jesus Christ and He told me to kill you and to use my own judgment as to best manner to dispose of you."

The frenzied man then sprang across the room and attempted to grab the officer by the throat. He was unsuccessful and a desperate struggle followed. A domestic on the second floor released two tramps in that section of the building and with their assistance the man was overpowered and placed in a cell. A large stone was found in his overcoat pocket.

An examination as to his sanity will be held today before Judge Stone, and the fellow will probably be sent to Kalamazoo.

A SAD DEATH.

Wronged Girl Dies Rather Than Disclose Her Condition.

Grand Haven, Mich., Jan. 9.—Miss Nettie Lukens, a pretty and fascinating young woman, 25 years old, daughter of Chief of Police Lukens of this place, died at Lorain, Ohio, Tuesday night under suspicious circumstances. Her father went there and insisted upon a postmortem examination, although two able physicians had treated her for bowel trouble.

The coroner and four physicians held the autopsy, which developed the fact that the young woman had died from a criminal operation. Walter Smith, a young about-town man of that place has been subpenaed to appear and give evidence at the inquest, which will be held today. He was much in the society of the young woman.

Miss Lukens had been visiting a sister, Mrs. W. H. Collister, at Lorain for some time, and went in the best society there. The young woman died knowing what was killing her, and permitted the physicians to treat her for a trouble which did not exist rather than acknowledge her dishonor.

Her father brought the body back to Grand Haven.

MORE HONORS FOR SCHLEY.

Michigan Lodge Confers Honorary Membership on Him.

Flint, Mich., Jan. 9.—In December, the supreme division of the Knights of the Loyal Guard voted a life honorary membership to Admiral Winfield Scott Schley, and notified him of the action taken. Yesterday they received the following reply:

"Washington, D. C., Jan. 5, 1902.

"My Dear Sir—I beg to thank you sincerely for the high honor you apprise me has been conferred, of life honorary membership in the Knights of the Loyal Guard by the supreme division. I accept it devotedly and deeply appreciate the high tribute. My delay in replying loses nothing of its sincerity and appreciation on that account, and I hope the Loyal Guard will consider me always. Gratefully, fraternally and sincerely,

"W. S. SCHLEY.

Divulged Army Secrets.

Vienna, Jan. 9.—Captain Carina of the cavalry, whose trial on charges of divulging military secrets to the French government began here yesterday, has been sentenced to four and a half years' imprisonment.

Many Miners on Strike.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Jan. 9.—Seven hundred miners employed at the Buttonwood colliery of the Parish Coal Co. struck yesterday for the discharge of some non-union men whom the officials refused to dismiss.

Domestic Quarrel Causes Crime.

Galesburg, Ill., Jan. 11.—Ed Cheney, an ex-prisoner in the state penitentiary, shot his wife and her sister, Mrs. Lettie Goshorn, last evening, both of them through the back and lungs. He then shot himself through the head, dying instantly. Both women are fatally wounded. A domestic quarrel is alleged to be the cause of the crime.

NAPOLEON'S ORDER.

THE LEGION OF HONOR AND HOW IT WAS FOUNDED.

Despite the Ridicule the Project at First Invited Its Inauguration Proved That Napoleon Knew French Human Nature.

France owes the Legion of Honor to Napoleon. All orders of chivalry had been abolished by the revolution and had left a gap which it was not easy to fill. "They are mere geegaws," said Monge, the chemist, who had taught the revolutionists how to make gunpowder out of plaster of paris. "Geegaws, if you will," the first consul answered, "but people like them. Let us approach the question frankly. All men are enamored of decorations—the French more than any. They positively hunger for them, and they have always done so."

This was at Malmaison in 1802. In May the conseil d'etat was invited to consider the project of the institution of the Legion of Honor. It was ridiculed by many, notably by Moreau, who as victor of Hohenlinden was bitterly jealous of the victor of Marengo. At a dinner party he sent for his cook and said to him in the presence of his guests: "Michel, I am pleased with your dinner. You have indeed distinguished yourself. I will award you a saucepan of honor." Mme. de Stael was also satirical upon the subject. "Ah, one of the decorated?" she used to ask each guest who was shown into her salon.

But Napoleon had gauged human nature correctly. His Legion of Honor did meet a felt want, and it was definitely inaugurated on July 14, 1804. Among the eminent men of science and men of letters on whom it was then bestowed were included Laplace, the mathematician; Lalande, the astronomer; Cuvier, the naturalist, and Legouve, the poet. The most notable name omitted was that of Bernardin de St. Pierre, just then in disgrace for championing Mme. de Stael, whom Napoleon had banished, but he got the decoration later on the entreaty of Queen Hortense.

After Jena Goethe was decorated. A little later high promotion in the order was given to General Lamarque, to whom Sir Hudson Lowe had surrendered at Capri. "What did you do with him?" asked Napoleon. "The king of Naples had him exchanged for a Neapolitan general who was a prisoner in Sicily." "Very well; there is no harm in letting this English colonel go. He is not dangerous." It seems not unlikely that Sir Hudson Lowe remembered this sarcasm when he was Napoleon's jailer a few years afterward.

After Napoleon's downfall the question of suppressing the Legion of Honor arose. Chateaubriand, whom Napoleon had not decorated, strongly urged its abolition. So did Puzzo di Borgo. Marshals Victor, Marmont and Macdonald opposed. After debate it was decided to recognize and retain the order, not on any high moral or patriotic grounds, but because Louis XVIII. could not afford to make himself more unpopular than he was already by stripping people of their decorations. Chateaubriand and Lamartine consented to accept the red ribbon, but it was also conferred upon a great number of worthless personages and so brought into contempt.

There have been many Legion of Honor scandals since those days, but one of them surpasses all the others in magnitude. This is, of course, the Wilson scandal, the history of which, though intricate, is worth recalling.

The trouble may be said to have begun on the day on which Mlle. Aliee Grevy fell in love with an opera singer who need not be mentioned here. He wanted to marry her, and she wanted to marry him, and the papers were beginning to couple the two names in a manner most embarrassing to the president of the republic. The president, however, sent the opera singer about his business and found his daughter another husband, not a very good husband, but the best husband he could procure on the spur of the moment. His choice fell upon M. Daniel Wilson, who had long been one of M. Grevy's political supporters and was a financier of some mark.

No sooner was M. Wilson established at the Elysee than he proceeded to enrich himself by various means. Among other things, he founded a paper called Le Moniteur de l'Exposition Universelle, which really covered a traffic in decorations. The whole story came out in a state trial toward the end of 1887. It was proved that Wilson had made a regular practice of selling the Legion of Honor, or, rather, of inviting people who wanted it to bribe him to use his influence to obtain it for them. His overtures were presented through his jackals, Generals d'Audlan and Cafferel and Mmes. Limousin and Ratazzi, and the whole party had to stand in the dock together.

Wilson was sentenced to two years' imprisonment, a fine of 3,000 francs and five years' deprivation of civil rights. He appealed, and the court of cassation annulled the judgment. The accused, said the judges, was obviously guilty of everything that he was charged with, but as his offenses were not anticipated by any punitive law he could not be punished. So he retired to the country and tried to live down his bad name. As he ultimately got himself elected conseiller general, one must suppose that he succeeded in this object.—Pall Mall Gazette.

His Mission.

A lawyer was passing along the street carrying under his arm a lawbook when he was accosted by a self righteous individual: "Ha, Mr. Blank! And where are you going to preach today?"

"I don't preach, I practice," replied the lawyer.

Time's Changes.

"Diogenes was a great man," said the contemplative person, "and yet he had no use for money. He was content to confine his possessions to a single tub."

"Well," answered Senator Sorghum, "a tub might have been all right in those days, but what a man wants now is a bar'l."—Washington Star.

There Were No More Complaints.

A certain Benedict was in the habit of troubling his father-in-law with complaints about his wife's behavior. "Really, this is too bad," cried the irascible old gentleman one day, on hearing of some of his daughter's delinquencies. "If I hear any more complaints I will disinherit her."—London Telegraph.

THREE PLUMP BABIES.

An Exhibition Which the Crusty Old Bachelors Thought Disgusting.

"Disgusting," said one old bachelor to the other.

"Isn't it?" said the other old bachelor to the one.

Three women had come into the street car at different intervals with babies of different intervals. The first baby was a lusty child with nerve testing lungs. The second was about a year old, and the mother, just a little bit embarrassed at the bachelors' glares, finally gained courage to take a bottle from a grip and plug up baby's mouth with a rubber neck. The third baby was the newest of them all and entered the car a mere white bundle in the arms of a dignified matron hardly out of short skirts.

Beginning to unwrap the bundle, which had been somewhat disarranged in the haste to embark, the proud mother first unfolded a cunning pair of blue worsted booties that might fit a grumpy old bachelor's thumb. Then, feeling the eyes of the world upon her, she showed baby's two fat legs, which were as pink as her own ears. Then the cunning sight was solemnly shut from all eyes by a procession of gowns all of white, laced, tucked, embroidered and plain, the fat legs kicking vigorously, and baby's laces hid them from sight.

Then the little mother sat the bundle upright and threw a soft cloak from the other end, disclosing a round face, a pair of blue eyes wide open in amazement and as pretty and baldheaded a baby from end to end as ever made a bachelor angry at his own lost opportunities. Then the three mothers smiled at each other's baby.

"Disgusting," said the bachelors. Then they went out on the platform, and one took a chew of tobacco and the other lighted the butt of a malodorous dead cigar he had been carrying.—New York Press.

An Awful Disappointment.

"The most disappointed man I ever saw," said a Baltimore financier, "was a poor wretch who was about to be hanged in one of the northeastern counties of Maryland. I happened to be there about the time and accepted an invitation to witness the execution.

"This fellow's lawyers had been working hard to save his neck, and there seemed to be some possibility that he might be reprieved. The time set for the execution arrived, however, and the sheriff made plans to carry out the execution. The march to the scaffold had begun, and the prisoner was about to mount the steps when a messenger arrived, waving a telegram in his hand.

"The procession was at once stopped, and the sheriff took the telegram, but saw that it was addressed to the condemned man. He handed it to the fellow, who, trembling with hope, tore open the envelope. He cast his eager glance at the message, paled and let it drop from his hand. The sheriff picked up the paper, read it, and the march to the scaffold was resumed. In a few minutes the man who had hoped for a reprieve was in eternity.

"The message was from some minister who had become interested in his case. It told him to trust in the Lord and he would be saved."—Washington Post.

Rheumatism means that there is something in the blood which ought not to be there. The disagreeable symptoms are not in the disease, but are the efforts of Nature to expel the intruder.

Ath-lo-pho-ros simply gives Nature a boost, and she finishes the job. Ath-lo-pho-ros in itself does not cure Rheumatism, it simply helps Nature. The fact that you have Rheumatism or Neuralgia in any form is proof that Nature needs help.

C. H. Pratt Would Not Testify Against Adams.

JUDGE GAVE HIM 30 DAYS

Pratt Kept His Silence on the Ground of Constitutional Privilege—His Attorney Will Apply at Once for a Writ of Habeas Corpus.

Mason, Mich., Jan. 16.—The proceedings in the Adams trial became very sensational yesterday. At the opening Attorney A. J. Croesbeck filed a petition for his client, Charles H. Pratt, asking the court to quash the service of the subpena upon him and permit him to return home to Chicago. The court, on reconvening in the afternoon, held the service good and the prosecution at once called Pratt to the witness stand. Pratt refused to testify, claiming his constitutional provilege. Judge Wiest ruled the interrogatories legal and proper and directed the witness to answer. Pratt still declined, and the court held him guilty of criminal contempt of court and committed him to the county jail for 30 days. Attorney Croesbeck gave notice that he would apply at once for writ of habeas corpus in the United States district court before Judge Swan in Detroit, to review the questions raised. Prosecutor Tuttle informed the court that the evidence of Pratt was necessary to the case of the state, and for that reason Judge Wiest ordered the trial to be discontinued for one week, to be resumed Jan. 22. It was said that the proceedings before Judge Swan could be finished in that time.

For the fisrt time the fish dealers here are shipping them to retailers under the name of "barkers." Over 1,800 pounds of these fish were taken from one net a few days ago.

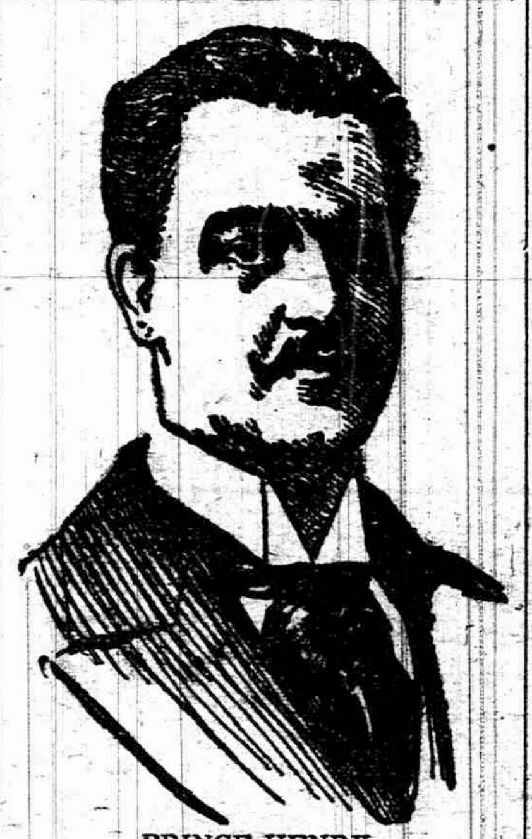
Prince Henry's Visit Will Probably be That Long

CABINET MAKES PLANS

Secretaries Long and Hay Have Been Assigned to Look After the Details of His Reception—Expected About February 18.

Washington, Jan. 15.—The president is showing a great deal of interest in the arrangements for Prince Henry's reception, and he himself called the matter up in cabinet yesterday. It was too early to map out any definite program for the reception, but to Secretary Hay and to Secretary Long were left the arrangement of details. It is probable that when the Hohenzollern takes off Prince Henry from the liner, she will be escorted from the lower bay down to Sandy Hook by Admiral Dewey's old flagship, the Olympia, or the San Francisco, which has been the flagship of the European squadron. Both of these fine ships have been almost completely reconstructed in the Boston and New York navy yards. As it has been suggested that the captain of either of the ships would not have sufficient rank to meet the German admiral, Secretary Long has taken under consideration the propriety of appointing Rear Admiral Robley D. Evans as special representative for this occasion. He is known personally to Prince Henry, who was in command at the great naval demonstration at Kiel, where Admiral Evans represented the United States navy on the cruiser New York.



PRINCE HENRY.

Cable advices received at the German embassy here indicate that Prince Henry of Germany will arrive off New York about Feb. 18. While Dr. von Hollemen, the German ambassador, has not yet been advised fully as to the details of Prince Henry's visit to this country, it is the opinion of the embassy officials that the stay of the royal visitor in the United States will not extend over a fortnight.

The voyage of the imperial yacht Hohenzollern will be so timed that the vessel will arrive off New York in season to join the steamer which will bring Prince Henry, so that he may board the yacht and then proceed on to be met by the reception fleet of naval vessels and steamers which will escort the Hohenzollern into New York harbor.

Terrible Explosion.

Marion, Ind., Jan. 15.—A terrific explosion early this morning shook the city to its foundation, awakening citizens and causing general consternation. About 30 minutes before the shock a nitro-glycerine wagon passed through the city, and it is supposed here that the explosion was set off by a runaway or some similar accident. About a mile from the city is situated a storage house of the Co-operative Torpedo Co., and it is possible that the explosion occurred there. Telephone messages have been received from many towns in this vicinity, showing that the shock was felt for many miles. Newspaper correspondents have gone to the scene.

Long Trip in a Balloon.

Berlin, Jan. 15.—The meteorologists, Berson and Elias, who ascended in a balloon during a high wind last Thursday to try for the long distance record, write from a village of southern Russia, in the government of Poltava, that they made 868 miles in 29 hours. They say the wind slackened and that their travels were mostly above the clouds. The highest altitude reached was 16,250 feet. The aeronauts failed to beat Count De la Vaulx's long distance record of 1,116 miles.

The Czar Is Pleased.

St. Petersburg, Jan. 15.—At the Russian New Year's reception the czar and czarina took occasion to express to the United States ambassador, Charlemagne Tower, the gratification which they felt at the reports which they constantly received of the good feeling in the United States toward Russia. Their majesties wished the Americans to understand that the feeling was reciprocated by themselves and the Russian people.

Scouts Are Not Paid.

Washington, Jan. 15.—Secretary Root has called the attention of congress to the need of providing for the 50 companies of Philippine scouts comprising about 5,300 men. Gen. Chaffee cabled the war department recently that the pay of the scouts by the insular government ceased Dec. 1 last, so that a deficiency appropriation is required of $515,000 for the service of the scouts from that time forward.

Even One Gets a School.

Guthrie, Okla., Jan. 16.—Chief Justice Burford has issued an order to the effect that if there be only one colored child of school age in a school district, the authorities must provide a separate school house and teacher. This order takes in the entire territory and will prove very expensive to the various counties.

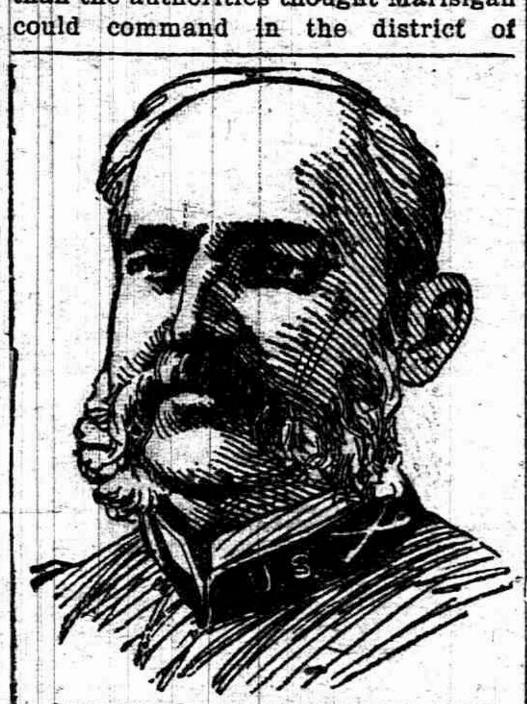
LAID DOWN ARMS

Over Two Hundred Filipinos Surrender to Gen. Bell.

ALL MEN UNDER MARISIGAN

The Terms Were Unconditional and All Were Released—Included Sixty More Rifles Than Anticipated—Eastern Batangas Now Virtually Pacified

Manila, Jan. 15.—The full surrender of the forces of Col. Marisigan (who, with Major Cabrera and a renegade priest named Castillo, gave themselves up unconditionally Jan. 10 to Gen. Bell, who is conducting the campaign against the insurgents in Batangas province) occurred yesterday at Taal. The insurgents created a surprise by bringing in 60 more rifles than the authorities thought Marisigan could command in the district of Toael, which he controlled. The Filipinos who surrendered included three colonels, one major, five captains and 12 lieutenants. They gave up 219 rifles and one cannon. All the insurgents who surrendered did so unconditionally. Gen. Bell ordered the men to be released.



BRIGADIER GENERAL JAMES M. BELL.

Col. Marisigan says he can prevail on many more men to surrender during the next few days and also obtain possession of a number of additional rifles.

Gen. Bell says the surrender pacifies for the time being all the eastern part of Batangas.

U. S. Needs More Sailors.

Washington, Jan. 15.—Rear Admiral Crowninshield, chief of the bureau of navigation, who was before the house naval committee yesterday, pointed out the urgent necessity for an increase of men and officers in order properly to man the new ships. He advocated an increase of the enlisted force of at least 3,000 and discussed with the committee plans to increase the number of cadets at the academy, either by giving an appointment to each representative in congress every two or every three years, instead of every four years, as at present; or by giving the president and United States senators appointments.

Gold in Cayenne.

Washington, Jan. 15.—During October and November last 2,000 pounds of gold were brought down to Cayenne, French Guiana, from placer gold diggings in the Inini river district of that colony. Other large consignments of the precious metal are expected at Cayenne.

Washington, Jan. 15.—Rep. H. C. Smith of Michigan yesterday introduced a joint resolution for a constitutional amendment empowering congress to define the qualification of electors for members of congress and requiring that these qualifications shall be uniform throughout the states. Michigan Sugar Manufacturers Call on Him To Day

MANY SCHEMES AFLOAT

A Possibility of Getting Support to Defeat the Cuban Tariff Bill by Supporting the Babcock Bill—Michigan's Delegation Reinforced.

Washington, Jan. 16.—Combinations are being formed that promise to prolong indefinitely the contest between the beet sugar producers and the agents of the Cuban sugar interests who are working for a cut. One scheme is for the beet sugar congressmen to work as a unit for the bill abolishing all Spanish war taxes in the hope that it's passage will reduce the tariff schedule. Another is to support the Babcock bill reducing the tariff on iron and steel products unless members from the iron and steel districts, Pennsylvania and the southern states, help defeat the bill for sugar reduction.

Michigan's delegation of manufacturers has been reinforced by Charles M. Heald, manager of the Pere Marquette railway system, who arrived last night. The delegation, after listening yesterday to several hours' talk by lawyers and Americans who own sugar plantations in Cuba, before the ways and means committee, consider that a poor showing was made why reduction should be granted. Americans, it is asserted, now own over one-third of the plantations in Cuba, and those who spoke admitted they are making money.

The proposition to attach to the house Philippine tariff bill in the senate a rider for sugar reduction has aroused the ire of the sugar men. Wm. Alden Smith today will escort the Michigan manufacturers to the White house to talk with the president.

HACKED HIS CHILDREN.

Infuriated Pittsburg Father Committed a Bloody Deed.

Pittsburg, Jan. 16.—A ghastly discovery was made yesterday when some neighbors, hearing cries coming from the residence of Vincent Vencelsick, a Pole, at 209 Spring Alley, broke open the doors and found the bedroom of the house saturated with blood. Mrs. Vencelsick lay beside her bed, her face and head almost crushed beyond recognition, dead. Three little children, their hands and bodies covered with cuts and gashes, and the husband almost dead, were lying on the floor.

From what could be learned it appears that Vencelsck came home intoxicated during the night and assaulted his wife with a rail cutter. The first blow inflicted an ugly gash on her shoulder and knocked her down, but she was on her feet again in an instant and with such weapons as she could find in the room she defended herself.

The three children were asleep in one of the beds and the brutal father, becoming so angry at his wife, rushed to the bed and rained blow after blow on the sleeping little ones. The sharp edge of the cutter hacked the children in a frightful manner and the hospital physicians say that there is very little hope of their recovery.

The attack on the children infuriated the wife, and with a knife in each hand she sprang at her husband and stabbed him a number of times. He managed to get in a number of blows during the close battle and, seeing that she was getting weak, he gave her a shove, and as she staggered back brought the cutter down on her skull, and she fell to the floor dead.

By the time he had killed his wife, Vencelsick was exhausted. He sank to the floor and lay there throughout the night unable to move. The moans of the children and one of them crying was what attracted the neighbors.

Vencelsick, it is said, was not married to the woman, whose name it developed later, was Rosa Lock.

Developments today add mystery to the tragedy, which may end in a wholesale murder. Three Poles, who were boarders in the Visolek house are under arrest and the police are scouring the city for John Okenski, who was also a boarder, but who has not been seen since the murder was discovered. It is learned that the woman had $1,200 on her person Tuesday night, and this is also missing. Okenski is accused of having set fire to a mattress in the house a week ago, and later Visolek tried to have him arrested because he threatened to rob the house.

When found the woman was lying across a couch which belonged to Okenski, with her face and head battered almost to a jelly. Sisolek's head was beaten and his skull fractured. The children's heads were also crushed in and physicians at the hospital say none of the injured can recover.

Robbers Dynamited Two Safes.

Canal Dover, O., Jan. 16.—The safe of the Tuscarawas Electric Co. was dynamited and robbed of its contents yesterday morning. When the watchman had returned to the office with a bucket of coal three masked men, heavily armed, compelled him to submit to being bound and gagged. The safe was then dynamited. There was less than $30 taken from the safe.

At Marysville, O., the safe of the Big Four railroad office was dynamited but no money was secured. No clue.
